Posters depict wanted males

These men are wanted by the Naval Investigative Service for questioning regarding a murder at the Air Station.

At about 4:30 p.m. July 15 a female employee of the Rainbow Car Rental Agency was found shot in her office at the base. The individuals shown here are believed to have information vital to the investigation of this incident.

LEFT: Possibly a Marine, this man is in his early 20s, stands between six-foot one-inch and six-foot three-inches tall weighing 155 pounds and has a slender build. He is a caucasian with sandy blond hair and a light complexion. When seen, he was wearing blue jeans, a red and white checked shirt, possibly flannel, with a white crewneck T-shirt, a wide brown belt with a big buckle and medium brown pointed-toe cowboy boots with a snake, whip-like design on front.

RIGHT: This man is in his early 40s, between five-foot four-inches and five-foot six-inches tall and weighs between 160 to 180 pounds. He has a stout, heavy build, dark collar length hair combed back and a dark complexion. His sideburns extend past his ears and he wears glasses. When seen, he was wearing an aloha shirt with various colors and solid pants. This person could be armed and dangerous.

If either of these men are seen they should not be approached. Notify the Naval Investigative Service as soon as possible at 257-2379/3458 or 2683. If it is after working hours call 538-7377 and ask to speak with the duty agent.

Aviation pay program offers bonus

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Marine Corps wants its naval aviators and naval flight officers to stay and is willing to pay them extra money to do so.

THE NEW BONUS money is provided through an Aviation Officer Continuation Pay Program which began July 1. It is available to all active duty NAs and NFOs, lieutenant colonels and below, who have a 7500 military occupational specialty, draw career incentive pay and have at least six, but less than 16 years of aviation service. Aviation service begins when an officer reports to an aviation facility to receive flight training.

The amount of AOCF an aviation officer is entitled to is based upon his monthly base pay and years of aviation service at the beginning of the AOCF obligation.

ANNUAL LUMP SUM payments of AOCF for multi-year obligations will be made at the beginning of each year of obligation. The lump sum is computed by multiplying the officer's monthly base pay times the maximum rate multiple for that year's AOCF obligation.

The following chart has the base pay multiples for the AOCF Program:

Years of Aviation Service	Years of Obligated Service	Maximum Rate Multiple (In months of base pay)
6 but less than 9	4 years	4 per year
9 but less than 12	1, 2, or 3 years	3 per year
12 but less than 13	1, 2, 3, or 4 years	3 per year
13 but less than 14	1, 2, 3, or 4 years	2.5 per year
14 but less than 15	1, 2, or 3 years	2.5 per year
15 but less than 16	1 or 2 years	2 per year
	1 year	1 per year

THE FOLLOWING EXAMPLES illustrate how AOCF works.

An officer with 12 years of aviation service signs for four additional years. He would receive two and a half months pay for the 12th and 13th years, two months for the 14th year and one month for the 15th year.

A Marine officer who has seven years of aviation service and agrees to stay an additional four years, would receive four times one month's base pay for all four years. Marine officers who fall within the six-year minimum to less than nine-year time-frame and obligate themselves for four years can receive a multiple of four years for each year, according to officials here.

AN OFFICER WITH 10 years aviation service who agrees to extend would receive three months pay for the first two years and two and a half months pay for the last two years of the agreement.

An officer who has 14 years of aviation service can only obligate for one or two years. A three-year obligation would place him into his 18th year, which is not authorized for AOCF payments, according to officials.

According to Manpower officials here, officers who have submitted a request for resignation, whether pending or already approved by the Secretary of the Navy, must first withdraw their request. Approval of continuation pay will not be made until the withdrawal of resignation has been approved.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE Appropriations Committees have given the Corps $7.4 million for AOCF during Fiscal Year 81.

Approximately 30 percent of all eligible Marine officers have already applied for the program, according to Manpower officials here. In the next few months, officials anticipate that most of the officers eligible for the program will have applied.

Regardless of future changes to the program, once an agreement is approved, the Marine's contract will be honored as written. All entitlements under the continuation program are subject to federal and state income tax, however, the money is not taxable for Social Security.

OFFICIALS SUGGEST that a Letter of Transmittal (NAVMC941) be included with applications.

Additional information is available in ALNAV 078/81.

IMPROVED BOOTS - New roughout leather boots are presently being tested by recruits at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif. for both durability and wear. The projected date of issue for the new boot is mid-1983.

boots are also water proofed with a silicone treatment.

The boots, which are valued at about $45 per pair, have been issued to half a recruit series for testing.

According to Maj William Kastner, the Marine Corps liaison officer at the United States Army Natick Research and Development Laboratories, in Natick, Mass., the boots are being tested for durability and wear.

The new, infrared resistant boots are made of brown roughout leather and feature a quick lacing system, fiberglass reinforced toes, a stronger sole with replaceable heel and a leather lining. The

"The recruits will wear the boots approximately 10 weeks," explained the major. "They will then be returned to the research and development laboratories for testing and evaluation."

Maj Kastner anticipates the new boots will be responsible for fewer foot problems because of increased flexibility.

The projected date of issue for the new boot is mid-1983.

Rent Plus reimburses actual costs

Corps adopts DoD housing program

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Marine Corps has joined a new DoD-wide system of overseas housing allowance payments.

UNDER THE NEW system Rent Plus, service members will be reimbursed for their actual housing costs, plus utilities, and initial occupancy expenses, up to a maximum ceiling.

The maximum ceiling will be determined by pay grade and geographic area, and will be based on actual housing costs, according to manpower officials here.

Rent Plus is payable only to Marines on overseas tours who are entitled to receive housing allowances. Marines assigned to unaccompanied overseas tours, who bring their dependents with them, are not entitled to Rent Plus.

MARINES CURRENTLY receiving an overseas housing allowance can continue to draw these allowances, if the money they receive from Rent Plus would result in a lesser amount.

The option of receiving either Rent Plus or the old housing allowances will stop when a Marine completes his overseas tour or when the country the Marine is stationed in has been on the Rent Plus program for four years. Also, Marines changing their overseas off-base residence will automatically be placed on the Rent Plus program.

Marines moving to an overseas assignment after Rent Plus has been adopted will automatically be placed on the new system.

ACCORDING TO manpower officials, personnel on the Rent Plus program will be required to submit monthly rent and utility cost information to their local disbursing officers.

This information will be forwarded to the Marine Corps Finance Center in Kansas City, Mo., where it will be included in the individual's personal financial record.

The United Kingdom was converted to Rent Plus July 1, and Bahrain and Puerto Rico were converted during July. Korea is scheduled to be converted this month and the Philippines in September. Other countries having a housing allowance, including Hawaii and Alaska, will be phased in over the next 12 months.

RENT PLUS WILL provide a more equitable means of reimbursing service members for the high cost of housing experienced overseas.

Cost of living allowance increases

Marines drawing cost of living allowance here will notice an increase in their paychecks soon, according to 1stLt A.E. Hockman II, Deputy Disbursing Officer.

"THE COLA INCREASE WENT into effect Aug. 4," said 1stLt Hockman, "but it will take a while to get it worked into the computer, so the recipients probably won't see it until the Sept. 15 paycheck."

The amount of increase varies from grade to grade, month to month and for members with or without dependents.

For instance, on a 30-day month, an E-5 with no dependents would receive $28.50, while an E-5 with one dependent would receive $34.50.

AT THE HELM — Petty Officer 2d Class David McNulty looks at home behind the wheel. He earned the Shore Sailor of the Year award for the Fleet Marine Force by his exceptional performance.

Achievement

Petty officer claims Shore Sailor of the Year award

"Since reporting aboard in March 1980, he has continually demonstrated a superior level of performance," states Chief Warrant Officer Rob Robbins, officer-in-charge of the Waterfront Operations and Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron.

COLONEL MEL Sautter, former commanding officer, MCAS Kaneohe Bay refers to him as "an outstanding sailor whose thorough knowledge of seamanship and perseverance has enhanced the operational effectiveness of his unit and gained the respect and admiration of all who associate with him." When officers speak highly of an individual such as Petty Officer 2d Class David McNulty, it's no wonder why he was chosen as this year's Fleet Marine Force Pacific Shore Sailor of the Year.

"It seems they were impressed with my service record," Petty Officer McNulty commented. "The first time around I was nominated for Sailor of the Quarter, but didn't make it. For selection of Shore Sailor of the Year they reviewed all the past nominees and selected me."

ACCORDING TO

Chief Warrant Officer Robbins, Petty Officer McNulty has been a constant leader at Waterfront Operations. His knowledge of the missions and responsibilities of his unit makes him the person sought out when problems arise.

His seamanship and boat handling are superb and he is always ready to perform no matter what the circumstances or conditions. Petty Officer McNulty has been called upon on numerous occasions to assist civilian boaters as well as local military units. Due to this fact, his

Street Scoop

Should the Air Traffic Controllers be required to honor the terms of their oath?

William Fairbrother, BrigGen retired: "Of course. The reason why goes without saying. It's just like us when we took our oath."

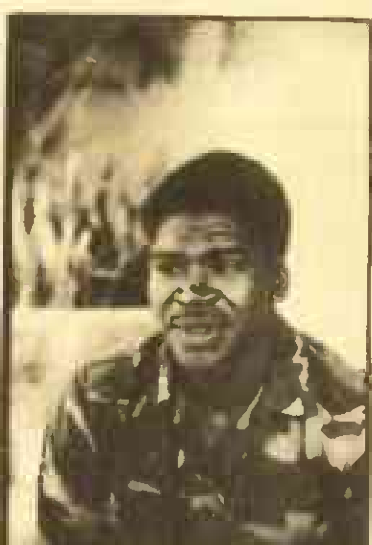

PFC Alphonso Bing, Co. C1/3: "If they feel that being on strike and fighting for their contract negotiations is right, they should be able to strike."

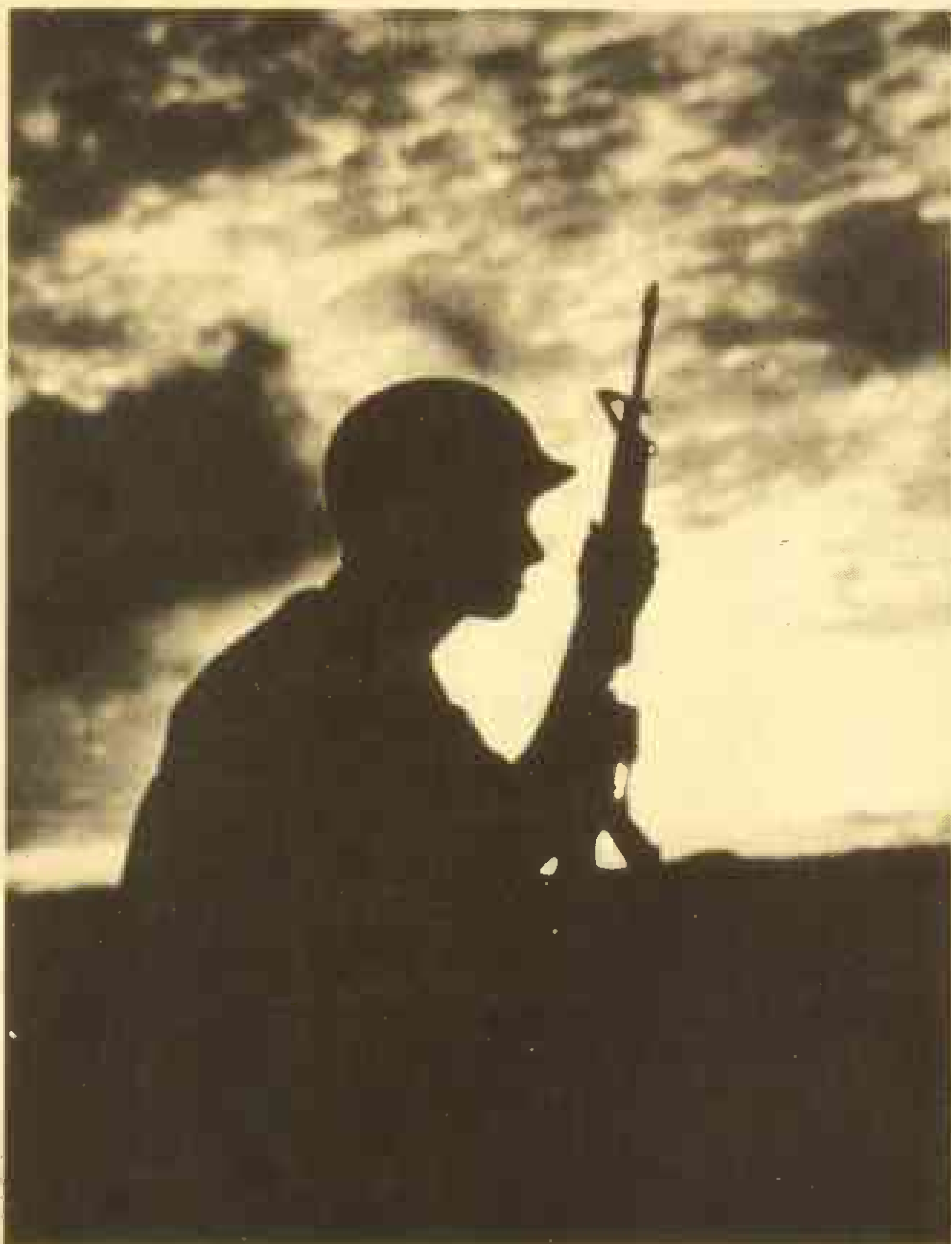

Petty Officer 3d Class Sonial Coder, SOMS: "They have a right but, if you stop and think about it, they are making so much money as it is."

SSgt Lorenzo Luna, BSSG: "Yes. If they don't they are just getting over on the government, and what good is the government if you can get over on it?"

LCpl Daniel Murray, Co. C1/3: "No, because they are civilians. They should stay on strike until they get the benefits they want."

Corps lives on

In the words of one writer they are "hammered into form in a different forge... hardened in a different fire." He was, of course, talking about Marines. And although times have changed Marines, for the most part, haven't.

We still apply relentless pressure in boot camp to test a recruit's mettle. Our Marines graduate from recruit training at Parris Island or San Diego with two priceless assets they didn't enter with; intense pride and strong esprit.

THE PRIDE IS BOTH PERSONAL and unit pride, and goes hand in hand with steady confidence to meet the challenges of the unknown. It's tough to beat a man when he knows he's 10 feet tall.

It's impossible to define esprit de corps as we know it. It has to be experienced. But we have seen it work miracles on the battlefield, producing fighting men that are second to none. Men who have faced impossible odds stood their ground and won. But an ALICE pack full of pride and esprit is not enough in itself. It must be backed up with solid know-how if it is to be considered anything other than hollow egotism. That is why the Corps insists on rigorous combat-oriented training. The battlefield is no place to train Marines. The instinct for survival may be nurtured there but the know-how has to be acquired before.

THE MARINE CORPS TRAINS

each enlisted Marine initially as a rifleman and every officer as a platoon leader. All Marines know what it feels like to wear the boots of one who really has to lay it on the line in combat. And since they understand the rifleman's problems, they can do a better job of supporting him... whatever their role.

There are other elements of professionalism which add up to military skill: high standards of discipline, physical fitness, and appearance. We are keeping ours high.

So despite the constant surface changes, our Corps really hasn't changed much through the years. There are two fundamental things we can expect from Marines... solid professionalism and that special quality of spirit that sets us apart.

MAINTAINING THAT SPIRIT is a job for all of us. The recruits we are getting, like the ones of yesterday, want to be Marines. They want to respond to confident leaders who believe in what they are doing and who believe in their men.

Recognizing this, the Corps is continuing to maintain a high priority in providing top caliber leadership. Leadership which truly looks after our own. Our Marines deserve no less.

This spirit is contagious and these close knit feelings have traditionally been reflected in Marine Corps proficiency in and out of combat. It is only natural that it should be this way.

Discovering the Band of Brothers

by PFC Todd Ramsburg

Well, it's that time of year again. If you're like me, every six months there comes a time when that bulge in your back pocket grows so large that just trying to button it becomes an Olympic event. Being members of the Armed Services, we know that this dilemma can't be caused by an overabundance of legal tender.

SO WHAT IS IT? Things like receipts, old business cards, unimportant telephone numbers, names, and addresses. You name it, and it's probably been in the depths of your wallet.

The only solution to this problem, which has plagued man for centuries, is a technique Marines are quite familiar with... search and destroy. That means to put it in the circular file.

Upon my most recent venture into the cowhide twilight zone, I encountered something I'd forgotten all about. There it was, right behind my autographed picture of the '69 Mets, my Band of Brothers card.

I VAGUELY REMEMBER putting it there, amid threats from my drill instructor that he would do nasty things to sensitive parts of my body if I didn't. And so being of sound mind and body, and wanting to stay that way, I quickly agreed to his wishes. I put the card in my wallet and there it stayed... and stayed... and stayed. Until now.

When I first received my Band of Brothers card, reading it was the last thing on my mind. I feel much more comfortable now that I have the time to think about what it says.

Basically the Band of Brothers creed says three things: take pride in being a Marine, take pride in your fellow Marines, and most of all take pride in the Marine Corps. It's almost hard to believe it's that easy. The truth is, it's not easy at all.

PRIDE, LIKE ALL GOOD things in life, takes hard work. I believe that these few simple guidelines should be referred to more often. For the benefit of Marines, like myself, who have long since forgotten where they kept their Band of Brothers card, here it is:

1 — All Marines are entitled to dignity and respect as individuals, but must abide by common standards established by proper authority.

2 — A Marine should never lie, cheat or steal from a fellow Marine or fail to come to his aid in time of need.

3 — All Marines should contribute 100 percent of their abilities to the unit's mission. Any less effort by an individual passes the buck to someone else.

4 — A unit, regardless of size, is a disciplined family structure, with similar relationships based on mutual respect among members.

5 — It is essential that issues and problems which tend to lessen a unit's effectiveness be addressed and resolved.

6 — A blending of separate cultures, varying educational levels, and different social backgrounds is possible in an unselfish atmosphere of common goals, aspirations and mutual understanding.

7 — Being the best requires common effort, hard work and teamwork. Nothing worthwhile comes easy.

8 — Every Marine deserves job satisfaction, equal consideration, and recognition of his accomplishments.

9 — Knowing your fellow Marine well enables you to learn to look at things "through his eyes," as well as your own.

10 — Issues detracting from the efficiency and sense of well-being of an individual should be surfaced and weighed against the impact on the unit as a whole.

11 — It must be recognized that a brotherhood concept depends on all members "belonging"... being fully accepted by others within.

SINCE I RE-DISCOVERED my card, I've seen several different versions of them. Some are more fancy than others, plastic instead of paper. The wording might be a little different in each one, but the message remains the same.

It takes more than just a uniform to be a Marine. It takes pride, dignity, respect and dedication to succeed in today's Marine Corps. It's not something one attains overnight. It's something to strive for over a period of time. The end result is a better all-around Marine.

Challenges make you discover things about yourself that you never really knew. They're what make you go beyond the norm. Being the best you can, that's what the Marine Corps is all about.

Courage is the bottom line

by Sgt Nora Parrish

Courage is one of the 14 leadership traits, but what does it really mean? Does it mean to be afraid of nothing and be able to face up to anything?

Courage like any of the other traits can be defined as each person sees fit. But according to the "Guidebook for Marines" there are two types of courage — physical and moral.

I SELDOM CONFESS THAT I am afraid. Does this mean that I am courageous? Maybe in a way it does, but it is so bad to be afraid of something or someone?

There's nothing wrong with being scared. But you shouldn't run from fear. Face up to it and turn it around. When people are faced with something that scares them, the adrenaline in their bodies begins to flow and they have more strength and will to fight.

Not only does their physical strength increase, but their moral strength uplifts as well. They find the strength to stand up for what is right in their minds. It takes a lot of courage to stand tall before someone in a position of authority and be firm about how you feel; to stick by your beliefs and not stammer a half-hearted, "well maybe you are right, sir," when you don't feel that way.

TO BACK DOWN TO SOMEONE when you know you're right doesn't do much for your troops, especially when you're there on their behalf. The troops won't have the respect and faith in you as they did before the incident.

But this doesn't mean that you should argue with the person, it just means not to change your views to please him.

When you are wrong, admit it. It's not everyone who can stand up and say they made a mistake, and accept the consequences. That takes courage.

If there is one leadership trait that I feel is more important than any other I have to say it's courage.

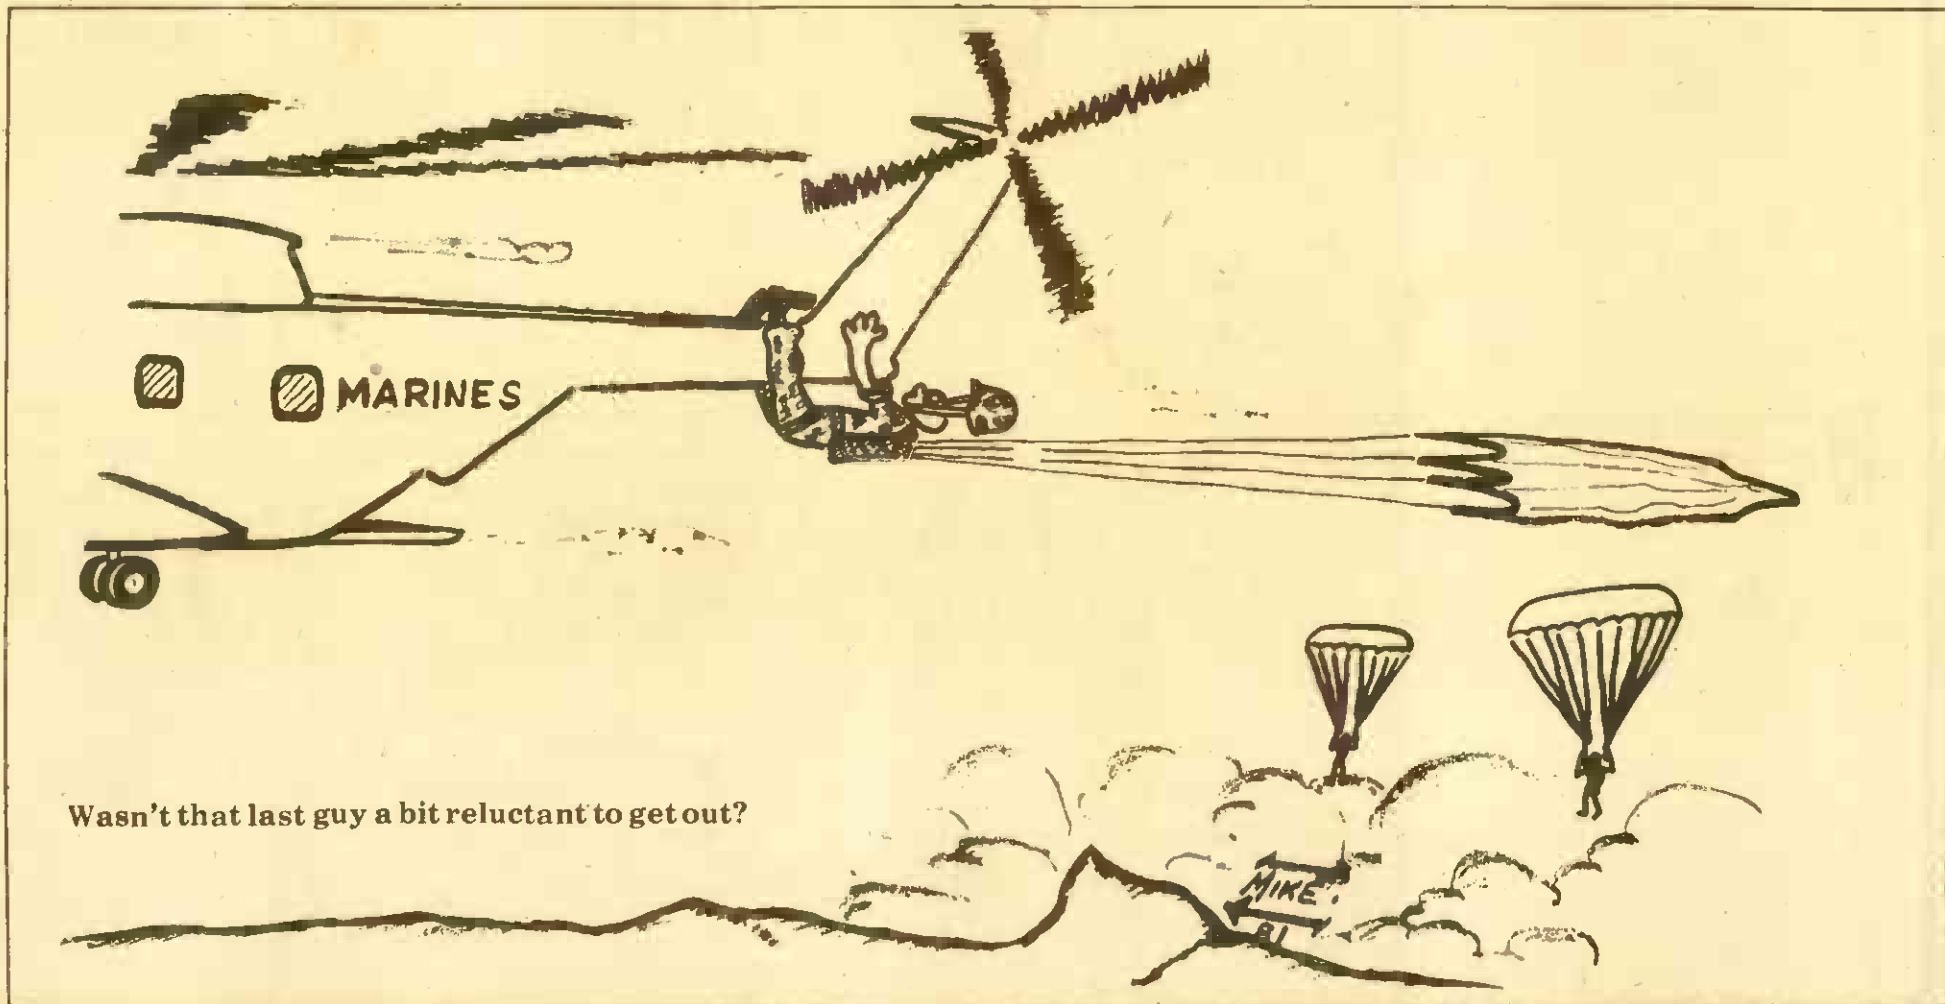

IT TAKES COURAGE to have integrity, to stand up and be honest with others even if it means they will be dissatisfied with the decision or fact you pass on to them.

To take time and further your knowledge of your job by studying when everyone else is out having a good time, takes courage.

To be decisive enough to say what you mean, and mean what you say, and not be swayed by others, takes courage.

By being dependable enough to get a job done quickly and the right way, even when you really don't want to, takes courage.

THE LIST COULD GO ON, naming every leadership trait. But the point is — courage is the bottom line in being not only a good non-commissioned-officer, but in being a good Marine and person.

Wasn't that last guy a bit reluctant to get out?

Energy

People living in Hawaii don't have to worry about pulling out their electric blankets or using a fireplace during the winter months. Instead they constantly try to keep the hot air outside while turning on the air conditioner or fan at a nice cool setting.

ACCORDING TO the Department of Energy, about 36 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity could be saved in a year's time if everyone raised their air conditioning temperature six degrees. When using an air conditioner, setting the thermostat at 78 degrees is an efficient temperature and a reasonably comfortable one.

The closer the outside and indoor temperatures are to one another, the less outdoor hot air will flow into the building.

WHEN SETTING an air conditioner thermostat, don't set it at an exceptionally cold temperature. This will not cool the home any quicker. It will just bring it to a colder temperature and use more energy.

It is also important to replace air conditioning filters at least once a month since dirty filters take longer to move the same amount of air as clean ones. When leaving a room with a window air conditioner for several hours, turn it off. It will use less energy to cool the room than to keep it cool.

HEAT FROM lamps or television sets can be detected by the thermostat causing the air conditioner to run longer than necessary. These items should be placed as far away from the thermostat as possible.

With or without air conditioning there are ways to keep a home or building cool.

The sun shining through a window is a natural heater. This heat can be partially eliminated with vertical louvers or awnings on the outside of the windows. Draperies, blinds or shades may be closed, keeping the building cooler and using only manual energy.

By blocking out the sun, heat gain can be reduced by as much as 80 percent.

THE AIR CONDITIONER load can be relieved by keeping lights low or off when they are not needed since lights generate excess heat in buildings.

On cool days the windows can be opened and the air conditioning turned off.

Hot days feel cooler by wearing lightweight materials with short sleeves.

By following energy saving tips for air conditioning, people can help ensure that on extra hot days next summer, they will have the energy to run their air conditioners.

Officials emphasize financial solvency

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A person might believe that filing for bankruptcy is the only way to attain financial solvency. However, officials here issued an ALMAR 105/81. "Financial responsibility is an important personal characteristic in keeping with the military tradition of honor and integrity," states the ALMAR. "By accepting this responsibility, individual service members have earned certain benefits such as military banking facilities. Department of Defense sponsored credit unions and other institutions providing financial services." Credit unions in particular, have lending policies which help

Marines meet their financial needs. Although credit unions are instructed to have liberal lending policies, the large increase in bad loans over the past two years has threatened the continuation of this policy. Those "bad" loans are only an example of why so many service members have turned to filing for bankruptcy. IN ORDER TO encourage thrift, financial responsibility and sound financial planning, Marines should seek financial counseling from command legal assistance officers, especially before securing loans or undertaking substantial consumer credit transactions.

"Bankruptcy is not a matter to be treated lightly," an official stated. "It should be used only as a last resort when no alternative is available to alleviate an individual's financial situation."

Leathernecks lend helping hand

Story and photos by
Sgt Pepper Davis

WAIMANALO, Hawaii — The engines of huge bulldozers roared with the strain of uprooting trees, moving rocks, dirt and anything else that got in the way.

A GRADER slowly went about its task of leveling mounds of earth. Truck drivers, hauling away debris, made numerous trips to the dumping site until the route became so routine, the drivers could almost do it in their sleep.

Amidst the action — a Marine wearing a white hardhat with the name "McCoy" stenciled on the front, digging. The park cleanup project not the hard-working crew.

THE LABOR was continuous as heavy equipment operators of Engineer and Motor Transport Companies, Brigade Service Support Group, 1st Marine Brigade, hustled to accomplish their training project of clearing 76 acres of the Waimanalo Bay State Park.

Because of state environmental constraints the heavy equipment operators don't normally log many training hours since most of their training requires, ciled on the front, digging. The park cleanup project not only provided the heavy equipment Marines an opportunity to train new operators, but it was a community relations gesture.

ACCORDING TO SSgt Patrick McCoy, project supervisor, "We jumped at the chance to do this job. We have several new operators and they needed a chance to use their equipment."

He added, "It was also an opportunity to show the community that we care."

The BSSG Marines became involved in the park project at the request of Rose Lani, president of the Waimanalo Council of community Organizations.

SHE SAID THE community wanted a safe, attractive site for recreational activities. Because they lacked heavy equipment, cosmetic work was delayed. "The Marines' lending us a helping hand was the greatest thing that happened to us," she commented.

According to Lani, Waimanalo Bay State Park was previously an unsightly area, resembling a junkyard littered with fallen trees and discarded automobiles.

AFTER receiving the nod of approval, SSgt McCoy and his crew began clearing the forest July 7. The demanding schedule required them to work from 6 o'clock in the morning until 6 p.m., seven days a week. They were often assisted by civilian trucking companies such as Lone Star Construction Company.

The Marine samaritans had to cope with flat tires and mechanical problems, but the show went on. "In spite of the few setbacks the crew kept their morale high," said SSgt McCoy.

RIDDING THE park of the disgusting rubbish was the first obstacle the community had to hurdle. Once the acreage is cleared the BSSG Marines will move on, and more beautification plans will be activated.

According to Lani, the BSSG Marines' participation has had a tremendous, favorable impact on military-civilian relations. "There's so many good things that can be said about them (Marines). They did more than their fair share and the community now has something to look forward to. The Marines made it all possible," she concluded.

TEAMWORK — Marine heavy equipment operators from Engineer Company, Brigade Service Support Group, 1st Marine Brigade, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, load debris onto a truck supplied by the Lone Star Construction Company. Marine and civilian truckers hauled away loads of trash at the Waimanalo Bay State Park.

CANDY AT THE BAT — KHON-TV 2 news reporter Candy Fleece awaits her pitch while her colleague Mary Zanakis of the Today Show smiles in the on-deck circle. The KHON-TV2 softball team challenged Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24's Ordinance to a game Aug. 1 but were upended, 17-1.

Softball

Devildog unit defeats KHON-TV2 allstar team

LCpl Charlie Marshall

Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24's Ordinance softball team may never get a chance to play on television's Wide World Of Sports but they experienced the next best thing.

THE STAFF of KHON-TV came to Pollock Field for a celebrity softball match Aug. 1 and were upset 17-1.

Jack Moore, news anchorman and coach for the celebrity team, explains the reason behind the beating his team received. "We were doing real good up to the opening cheer, but from then on it was all down hill."

After the team's opening cheer, "That's a fact, Jack!" Wally Zimmerman ripped to the plate and ripped a single into left field. Unfortunately for them after that hit their bats remained idle until the fifth inning.

MEANWHILE, Ordinance's first six batters scored before the end of the first inning. They returned in the second to add three more runs and at the conclusion of the third inning the score was H&MS-24 11, KHON-TV, a big goose egg.

After KHON went down one, two, three in the fourth inning, pitcher Jack Wiers who also doubles as the sports reporter, amazingly held Ordinance to only two hits.

Wiers knocked a base hit to left to start the seventh inning and Larry Fleece moved him to second. That was about all the stars could do until the eighth inning. First baseman Evans Colson, frustrated with the situation, nailed the ball and by the time the outfield recovered, Colson had crossed the plate.

Now the celebrities were bubbling over the joy. They had scored a run! Plus it was their fifth hit of the game. Even the H&MS-24 team was happy. They should have been, for they had a season record of three wins and five losses. After the game both teams traveled to Fort Hase Beach to discuss the weak points in their playing and celebrate.

Women work for fitness in weight/exercise class

Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday night, 8 to 9 p.m., Cpl Abraham Jones instructs women's weight training and bodybuilding classes in the Mini-Gym. The classes are free, and most of the women seem to enjoy it.

"I THINK IT'S wonderful!" said Anita Zapataoliva. "It gives the women a chance to work out without the men hanging around." That opinion was voiced by most of the women during a recent Monday night class.

"WE TRY TO find out their body building goals, and then we work with the women to help them achieve their desired form," commented Cpl Joe Zapataoliva, Assistant Instructor. He also explained that, "Some women are afraid to work out with weights because they think they'll get too muscular." This fear is greatly exaggerated.

"AFTER THE first class I put signs up all over the place," he said.

It must have worked, because the sessions grew larger and larger.

Cpl Jones has a terrific relationship with the women. "They don't mind if I yell at them or push them," he says. "They know it's for their own good."

Once again, the classes begin at 8 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and they're absolutely free.

Naval Sea Cadets visit Air Station

by Sgt Cheryl Martin

Twenty strong, enthusiastic voices simultaneously echoed through the gray bus on an equally gray morning announcing the arrival of the Naval Sea Cadets aboard the Air Station, Aug. 4.

Naval Sea Cadets are a group of young men and women between the ages of 14 and 17 who have the experience like JROTC."

THEIR ONE-DAY visit to the Air Station and 1st Marine Brigade was only a small part of their overall boot camp training. They spend three weeks in an environment that closely resembles Marine Corps recruit training complete with smokies.

Head drill instructor, SSgt Robert

LaRose said, "These kids accomplish more in two weeks than male recruits do in their first phase of basic training, and they look forward to graduation day with the same excitement and pride that real Marines do."

"Sir, yes sir!" in unison was their response to the command to fall out and fall back in outside the bus. Their eyes and bodies were locked at the position of attention while they awaited their next command.

After a panoramic view of Mokuapu Peninsula from Kanas Tower, the cadets were briefed on the mission and function of Marine Corps aviation. Following the short briefing, representatives from each squadron in Marine Aircraft Group 24 explained their roles and capabilities in the Brigade.

THE HIGH school aged youngsters were then shuttled to Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 265 to climb aboard a CH-46 "Sea Knight" helicopter. The crewmen explained their jobs and the responsibilities of the squadron.

Next, they were off to Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron 24 for a look at a TA-4F aircraft.

The Sea Cadets lunched at Pless Hall and then moved over to the ground side of the Brigade for demonstrations by the 3rd Marine Regiment.

Members of Company D, 3d Assault

Amphibian Battalion took the cadets for a spin around the day movement course and out onto the beach; while Marines from Company A, 3d Reconnaissance Battalion explained their equipment and methods of reconnaissance.

LEATHERNECKS from 1st Battalion, 3d Marines and 1st Battalion, 12th Marines also participated with static display of weapons and combat tactics.

Cadet Thu Schlesinger from the Kamehameha division of the Sea Cadets stated, "This has been one of the best experiences in boot camp. I really enjoyed everything, especially the ride on the antrak." The 14-year-old also said she definitely wanted to be a leatherneck. "I want to be a Marine military policeman!"

The cadets completed their visit to the Air Station with a final stop at Pless Hall for their evening meal, and then it was back to Naval Air Station, Barbers Point for their final three days of basic training.

Course. He and his fellow Sea Cadets experienced the course during their three week "boot camp" in Hawaii.

IT WAS INEVITABLE

Sooner or later, someone had to take all this proven microcomputer hardware and software technology and wrap it up in a portable package at a price that shocks the industry. Adam Osborne decided to do it sooner.

The OSBORNE 1st, from Osborne Computer Corporation. You get full CP/M[®] disk computer capabilities—Z80A[®] CPU, 64K bytes of RAM memory, a full business keyboard, a built-in monitor, and two floppy drives with 100K bytes each of storage. You get two interfaces: the IEEE 488 and the RS-232C. Just connect a printer, via either interface.

Software? You get CP/M[®], CBASIC[®], the WORDSTAR[®] word processing system with the MAILMERGE[®] mailing list feature, and the SUPERCALC[®] electronic spreadsheet package. All standard. All for $1795.

And it's portable. When the keyboard is clipped over the display panel, only the weatherproof brushed aluminum case is exposed. (There are even optional modem electronics, couplers, battery packs, and external monitor connections, providing practically unlimited system portability.)

It's all business. The OSBORNE 1 delivers significant productivity at an irresistible price. At $1795, its immediate and lasting success as a personal business computer is quite simply, inevitable.

BOBBING HEADS — Half of the Sea Cadets wait anxiously at the side of the Camp H.M. Smith swimming pool while the other half treads water for five minutes. This was just part of the extensive training the cadets receiving during the Naval Sea Cadet Corps' annual summer training July 19 through Aug. 7.

Youngsters utilize island for training

Sea cadets experience boot camp

Story and photos by
Sgt. Inez Stoner

CAMP H. M. Covington and David SMITH, Hawaii — Scott and LCpl K. Military inspections, Linda Christman, academic and physical fitness tests, rifle range details, and Camp Smith; and Sgt. Juan Morales from Marine Barracks, Pearl Harbor, took the cadets through three weeks of extensive training this summer.

"We put them through the same thing we went through in Marine Corps boot camp," said Sgt. Covington, a 22-year-old from Chicago. "We taught them self-pride, self-discipline and motivation, among other things."

THE CADETS, ranging in age from 14 to 17 years old, received training from July 19 through Aug. 7 in preparation for a military career, according to retired Navy Capt. Charles Crockett, boot camp commander. "The cadets were exposed to discipline and indoctrination into the military," he explained.

As in the past, much of the summer training was conducted by Marines. This year four Marines from Camp Smith and one from the Marine Barracks at Pearl Harbor acted as drill instructors for the cadets.

SSGT ROBERT LaRose, Sgts Prince and Sgt. Covington, "These kids are highly motivated. If they maintain the discipline and motivation that we have taught them, in a few years when they are old enough, they'll probably join the Marine Corps."

During the three weeks of training, the cadets spent one morning at the Camp Smith swimming pool learning water safety. After swimming the length of the pool several times and treading water for five minutes, the cadets practiced survival swimming, floating techniques and basic tows.

Other days of training were spent qualifying with the M-16 rifle at the Puuloa Rifle Range, participating in personnel and barracks inspections and receiving lectures and tours at Naval Air Station, Barbers Point and at Naval Base, Pearl Harbor. Also, the cadets spent an entire day with the Marines of the 1st Marine Brigade at MCAS Kaneohe Bay.

THE THREE weeks of training was not all hard work, however, as tours of the USS Arizona Memorial and the USS Constellation were scheduled. One morning was set aside for sailing on catamarans to the Hale Koa Hotel on Waikiki Beach where a picnic had been planned.

According to Capt.

Crockett, the Naval Sea Cadet Corps training program offers the youths other advantages in addition to the military training and education which they received. Upon enlistment into the Navy, the cadets must still successfully complete the Navy's basic training. They are paid from the time they enter recruit training, as E-3s. All this occurs if the recruit has spent at least one year with the Naval Sea Cadet Corps and had completed the annual summer training. It was three weeks of very tough training for the cadets, but according to Sgt. Covington, the biggest shock of all was the 'Marine Corps hair cuts' which each of the male cadets received. The training concluded Friday with 10 a.m. graduation ceremonies at Naval Station, Pearl Harbor.

WITH A LITTLE HELP — A swimming instructor shows a cadet the proper way to float at the Camp H.M. Smith swimming pool. Twenty-two cadets spent one morning out of three-week-long Navy Sea Cadet Corps Boot Camp, learning floating and towing techniques in addition to swimming laps of the pool and treading water for five minutes.
