Happy Birthday Marines

Birthday messages

It's my honor as commander-in-chief to extend congratulations to the United States Marines on their 207th anniversary.

As Marines, you're upholding an honored tradition stretching back through our history to 1775. Your motto, "Semper Fidelis" — always faithful — says it all. Whenever and wherever our country is needed, you were there, from riggings of ships during the American Revolution to the brutal island battlefields of the second world war.

As we celebrate your birthday, your fellow Marines stand watch in Beirut. Their mission in the finest tradition of the corps is that of peacekeepers. Today, we understand that peace through strength is more than a slogan. In a world such as ours it's a moral necessity and in the tough job of preserving the peace and defending our nation's independence and freedom, the United States Marines have always been there, ready to do their duty.

I'm grateful for this opportunity to thank all of you for upholding this noble mission. Whether on the land, sea or air, you're making your family, friends and country safer by what you do. This is a precious gift and we're grateful for it. So, to the United States Marines, Happy Birthday, congratulations, and carry on.

President Ronald Reagan

Greetings to the world's most elite fighting force on the occasion of your 207th birthday. You may be justifiably proud that your enduring reputation for military professionalism, for courage and valor, for honor, and for your famed spirit is not surpassed by any military organization in the world. None. For you, "first to fight" and "semper fidelis" are not mere slogans. They are the essence of the Marines, high standards of morale, training, and readiness. They are the essence of each Marine.

As your fellow Marines ashore in Lebanon have again — as so often in the past — spearheaded America's continued efforts in pursuit of world peace, you may reflect on a magnificent history spanning over two centuries. Your fellow Americans are most grateful for the sacrifices that you and your families have made in the past, and are making today in a turbulent world of swiftly changing and often threatening conditions. Never before have the exemplary qualities of the Marine Corps been more important to America than they are today.

It is with the deepest pride and respect that I send these greetings to each Marine. I want you to know I consider it a high honor to serve with such a peerless organization. Happy Birthday to each of you, and to each member of your families — Marines all. Arrgah.

John Lehman,

Secretary of the Marine Corps

We, who are Marines, are the most fortunate of American men and women. We are entrusted with the privilege of service in a Corps unsurpassed in valor, fidelity, and success. In the two hundred seven years of our history, Marines have responded to protect the nation's interest — from Nassau to Lebanon and every clime and place between.

On this special day, as always, those who rely on us can be confident that, if needed, we are ready.

As we celebrate this birthday, I can propose no more appropriate words than those which have characterized Marines since 1775, and which I am certain will continue to distinguish Marines for generations to come — SEMPER FIDELIS!

Veterans Day, a grateful nation remembers

BENEFITS COUNSELING — Roy Seaman benefits with Eugene Bohley in the Wilmington, (right) holds a bedside discussion of veterans Del. VA Medical Center.

America's national salute to veterans on Nov. 11 is an annual time for prayers, parades, and speakers attempting to emulate an address delivered 119 years ago.

There was no Veterans Day then. There was only a time of great uncertainty — during a bloody struggle — when Abraham Lincoln spoke of an obligation to those who died so the Nation might endure:

"It is for us, the living . . . to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they have thus far so nobly advanced."

"It is . . . for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us — that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave their last full measure of devotion . . ."

The meaning in Lincoln's words is enhanced today by the fact that 85 percent of today's 30 million American veterans served during their country's wars.

But Veterans Day is more important than statistics. It is a day for all citizens to recall battles and dark periods of adversity. It is a day to remember bright victories, devotion, and bravery.

Most importantly, perhaps, it is a day when a grateful Nation rededicates itself to Lincoln's call on the Congress and the American people "to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan."

This charge has become the motto of an agency that honors veterans all year long.

The Veterans Administration is the third largest agency in government. It has 230,000 employees and a $24 billion budget.

The VA has 172 medical centers and 226 outpatient clinics which treated 1.3 million inpatients and 18 million outpatients last year. The VA also has 136 outreach Vet Centers to serve veterans.

VA medicine is affiliated with more than 100 of the Nation's leading medical schools. Its medical budget is more than $6 billion a year.

Since 1973, the VA has been running the national cemetery system — 107 cemeteries, with several more opening in the next few years.

Since 1944, 19 million veterans and active duty personnel have received educational benefits under the GI Bill.

The VA sends compensation and pension checks totaling $12.5 billion a year to 5 million recipients.

It administers a life insurance program with more than $100 billion worth of policies.

For while it is large — large in buildings, large in range of activities, large in dollars — the VA must also be large in individual dedication and compassion.

More than any other government agency, the VA is people helping people.

One at a time, its people meet with veterans — in hospitals, clinics, and offices . . . in person, on the telephone, or by mail — and help with some need or solve some problem.

On this our 207th anniversary, the Marines of the 1st Marine Brigade can be justly proud of their accomplishments during the past year. Successful deployments spanning the Pacific and Indian Oceans from the Aleutians to Diego Garcia and at training areas within the Hawaiian Islands have demonstrated the professional excellence that has come to be characteristic of all Marines. These and many other achievements have added to your reputation and have shown that you are a combat force in readiness, prepared to serve the cause of freedom and peace.

The "Esprit de Corps" that has made us unique in the annals of military history continues to flourish, because we are embodied with the motto "Semper Paratus", thus ensuring the name "Marine" remains synonymous with success and valor. Continue your outstanding performance and make our 208th year our most illustrious. Happy Birthday Marines and best wishes.

BGen J.W. Moore
Commanding General
1st Marine Brigade

On this occasion of the 207th birthday anniversary of our Marine Corps, I wish to extend my warmest personal regards and greetings to all Marines assigned to the Fleet Marine force, Marine Corps Bases and Marine Security Forces throughout the Pacific.

As we continue into our third century of service, it has become increasingly apparent that we Marines will continue to play a significant role in determining the destiny of our nation. Historically, this is as it should be. As a Corps steeped in an unparalleled tradition of success on the battlefield and unsurpassed valor and fidelity, I am confident that we will continue to lead the way in deterring and defending against aggression whenever and wherever it may occur throughout the globe. This is a special trust endowed by the American people and imbued by the legacy of those Marines who have gone before.

The spirit, high morale, eagerness and professionalism that I have witnessed during my visits to units throughout the past year serve as testimony to the continued readiness of the force and the individual Marine. I am extremely proud of each one of you and I deeply appreciate the many sacrifices that you and your families have made in the service of our country. With all the modern technology and advanced machines that continue to be added to our fighting capability, the individual Marine, as always, remains the vital spark of our success.

LtGen J.K. Davis
Commanding General
Fleet Marine Force
Pacific

Two hundred and seven years ago, this nation, while in its infancy, created a small, elite force of fighting men, the Marines. Since that time, the men and women of the United States Marine Corps have existed in peace and war demonstrating extraordinary courage, spirit and dedication, to protect the foundations upon which this nation was built.

Today, all Marines celebrate yet another year of proud and dedicated service to our country. As we look back on our individual and collective accomplishments, we can take great satisfaction in knowing we are part of and have contributed to a strong and ready Corps. Everyone's job has been important and each Marine's top effort is required as we look to the future.

Marines and their family members here at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay have witnessed significant progress over the past year. Facilities are being both improved and constructed, programs such as Special Services are being refined, the Air Station appearance is impressive and family member programs are receiving increased emphasis and attention. Most importantly, the heart of all the accomplishments are directed to, for, and by Marines themselves.

On this day, as on every day, Marines can be proud of what they represent to the country and the world. I wish all Marines and their families a very happy birthday and much success for the future.

Col C.D. Robinson
Commanding Officer
Marine Corps Air Station Kaneohe Bay

Ombudsman

If you have a question or complaint about the content of the Hawaii Marine — or a suggestion or compliment — please telephone our Ombudsman, Gunnery Sergeant Don Gilbert, at 257-2178.

Gilbert, the Joint Public Affairs media operations chief, will endeavor to answer your questions and complaints through impartial investigations. He will accept calls between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Housing Consolidation

Have no fear, Army Housing is almost here. That's right folks, military housing in Hawaii will be consolidated and come under the directorship of the Army, according to Dave Simon, housing manager at MCAS Kaneohe Bay.

All the details haven't been worked out yet, Simon said, but the consolidation is scheduled to become effective July 1, 1983. "All it means is that the people working in the housing office here will be working for the Army instead of the Marine Corps," he said. "There won't be any effect on the occupants. However, the government will save a lot of money in administrative costs." There'll be more details on the consolidation in a July 1983 issue of the Hawaii Marine.

Pigskin Skipper

In last week's issue, the pigskin skipper for Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron was listed as First Lieutenant Danny Ball. The Hawaii Marine hit the streets Wednesday, but on Tuesday, one of our reporters noticed that the lieutenant had been promoted to captain. Without a Marine Corps uniform, it's difficult for our sports editor to observe a change in rank. Although his promotion missed our deadline, our congratulations go to the SOMS pigskin skipper (quarterback) who is now a captain.

Magnum Fans Identified

Magnum PI fans wanted the Hawaii Marine to know that Larry Mannetti was the unidentified friend with (Magnum) Tom Selleck (Open House photo) published in last week's issue. Mannetti plays the character Rick, who is the manager of a club where Magnum runs up his tab. P.S. our reporter doesn't watch the show.

Student Loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Joe and Jane used federal student loans to help pay for their education, got their degrees and went to work for the Defense Department. Joe joined the military, and Jane went to work for the Department of Defense as a civilian.

One made a few payments, and the other made none because they knew other people who had either forgotten, or who had purposely neglected, to pay back their loans with impunity. Joe and Jane have nothing to worry about. They can "get away with it," too. Right?

"As part of the government-wide effort to improve collection of debts, federal agencies have cooperated in providing information for interagency computer matches to identify employees who have an outstanding debt owed the federal government. A recent such computer match of the civilian and military payroll records with defaulted student loan accounts disclosed a significant number of DOD personnel.

"The President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency will oversee and monitor this debt collection effort on a government-wide basis. When specific information is provided to the Department of Defense, I will expect your full and complete cooperation in actively seeking repayment of each legitimate debt owed the federal government by DOD personnel.

"Meanwhile, please try to advise all who are benefitting from any government loan to keep up their payments, because any defaults by DOD employees will be dealt with seriously."

Baskin-Robbins is coming

Because of a forthcoming Baskin-Robbins 31 Flavors Ice Cream Store, the Marine Corps Ex-

Recon unit conducts adventure training with ropes

by Sgt Marie Woods

Jumping out of a helicopter with only a rope in hand is what reconnaissance Marines call rappelling. They also use such tactics as special insertion and extraction, and riverine operations.

Called Adventure Training, Marines of Company A, 3d Reconnaissance Battalion conduct training exercises using these tactics, but they also teach the techniques to other units here. "We like to do that," said Captain Bob Crabb, company commander. "Training other Marines helps us. We don't actually use these techniques that much operationally, but we have to know how."

According to Crabb, the mission of a reconnaissance battalion is to execute ground reconnaissance in support of a rifle battalion. In other words, they're a battalion commander's eyes. They patrol 5,000 to 15,000 meters beyond friendly lines gathering any information a battalion commander may request. Accomplishing this sometimes involves getting into a certain area, no matter how inaccessible. This is where Adventure Training comes in.

"When we transport Marines by helicopter into an area where there is no landing zone, we use SPIE-rigging," said Crabb. A rope is anchored to the bottom of a helicopter using a series of knots. Marines can then fasten themselves onto that line. "This way they can be lowered or pulled-out of the thickest of forests," Crabb said. "One line can hold four to eight Marines," he added.

"Rappelling is also used as an insertion tactic," Crabb continued. "We rappell from helicopters, cliffs, and buildings. When we train we use our rappelling power here."

If reconnaissance Marines are traveling to their destination on foot, they may come up against some obstacles. A river is one of them. "To transport Marines and their equipment across a river, we use a one, two, or three rope bridge," Crabb explained. "One rope is usually sufficient; however, if there's a lot of gear to be transferred, then two or three ropes are used."

Crabb says that building a rope bridge is fairly easy, but knowing how to tie the right knots is essential. A transport knot is used for building the bridge, and a retrievable knot is used so that once across the river, the rope can be pulled back and used again.

"We've sent some of our Marines to school to learn the techniques of adventure training," said Crabb. "This includes the Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center in Bridgeport, Calif." These Marines are now master rappellers.

"When people think of reconnaissance battalion, they usually associate us only with adventure training techniques," said Crabb. "But that is such a small part of what we do."

The fundamentals of reconnaissance are patrolling, land navigation, and communication, according to Crabb. So, adventure training techniques are only a means to an end, or as Crabb puts it, "It's the icing on the cake."

Mokapu Peninsula bears distinguished history

DEDICATED TO THE 98th

FORT HASE ISN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE. When the 98th Division departed from Fort Hase, it left memories behind. Many sailors visited the army base frequently. The 98th was at Fort Hase preparing for the invasion of Japan soon after this. Late in 1945, it departed for Japan as an occupation force where it has been doing a wonderful job. Photo by Col. Herbert G. Sparrow, the new chief of staff.

MOKAPU MEMORIES — The Feb. 9, 1946 issue of the now defunct Naval Air Station, Kaneohe Bay newspaper, known as the Kaneohe Klipper, paid tribute to the Army's 98th Division, one of Ft. Hase's major occupants during its peak activity years in World War II. Ft. Hase began in 1918 as a small 322 acre Army outpost known as Kuwaaohē Military Reservation. By the time the Army base was decommissioned in April 1947, thousands of soldiers had been either stationed, trained or had traveled through the vicinity of Ft. Hase on their way to the Pacific theater.

by SSgt Dennis Litalien

Mokapu Peninsula bears a long and distinguished history as a military stronghold. This tradition dates back to the early Hawaiian monarchy and includes such legendary warriors as Peleiholani, a 16th century king of Oahu, Kahekili, the fierce warrior who reigned over Maui, Lanai and Molokai and finally Kamehameha the Great, military tactician and revered leader who united the Hawaiian Islands. Each of these warrior kings is closely linked to the story of Mokapu. Their military legacy was continued when the United States established the first of its three military facilities.

MOKAPU PENINSULA became established as home to part of the United States defense system during World War I. President Woodrow Wilson signed Executive Order 2900 in July 1918 — establishing a tiny 322-acre Army outpost on the Windward side of Oahu as Kuwaaohē Military Reservation. Better known as Camp Kuwaaohē it was one of the oldest U.S. military installations in the islands.

At some point during the late twenties or early thirties, Camp Kuwaaohē became Camp Ulupau. In February 1942, it was again redesignated. This time it was titled Ft. Hase. The outpost was named in honor of MajGen William Hase, U.S. Army, former commander of the Hawaiian Department of the Army's coastal defense system. It was during World War II that Ft. Hase assumed its greatest significance. It became an invaluable link of the Windward Coastal Artillery Command and served as headquarters for the harbor defense of Kaneohe Bay.

FT. HASE WAS ORIGINAL-ly designed to handle a small force of two battalions. Once World War II heated up its size increased along with its mission.

When Kaneohe Naval Air Station became established, Ft.

Hase became responsible for its coastal defense. Protection was provided by French Battery situated in the area between Hale Koa Beach and the house that now serves as the commanding general's quarters. A second, more familiar emplacement was situated at the tip of Mokapu Peninsula and was known as Battery Pennsylvania or Penn Battery. This facility wasn't fully operational until four days before VJ day and never played an active part in the defense of Mokapu.

A STRING OF 155MM GUNS faced the open sea between Penn Battery and the eastern base of Ulupau crater. Since the guns were designed for mobility they were not placed on stationary mounts. They were located in the general area of the present rifle range complex, however, there is no longer any visible evidence of their existence. This artillery unit had the distinction of being the only one to see action at Kaneohe. This defensive arsenal was credited with the sinking of a Japanese submarine off-shore in 1942.

Emplacements for three-inch guns were situated on the western face of Ulupau. Their purpose was to repel and defend against any landing craft attempting to embark Ft. Hase beach. The installations are still visible on the face of the volcanic tuff cone.

Defense along Heleloa Beach was provided by 50-caliber machine gun emplacements stretching from Pyramid Rock to the seaward side of Ulupau.

QUARTERS FOR THE soldiers stationed at Ft. Hase consisted of a tent city at the southwest base of Ulupau. By 1945, most of these tents had been replaced by small wooden structures. Today that same site is the location of MCAS Kaneohe Bay's newest base housing units and is home to a large number of Marines and their dependents. Its commonly known as Ulupau housing area.

French Battery was a low mound of earth lying inland from Heleloa Beach. It was designed to accommodate six-inch guns but, for some reason long forgotten, eight-inch guns were installed on stationary Panama mounts. The guns supposedly were designed in 1888 and constructed in 1917. The mounts are said to have come from dismantled railway cars. The guns were considered to be only "fairly accurate". The walls of this beachfront fortress were 20 feet in height and overall height of the emplacement was 82.6 feet.

BY 1945, FT. HASE'S rapid growth demanded more breathing space. An additional 474 acres of land were acquired by the Army from Harold Castle who owned a great deal of the land on Mokapu. The Capehart housing area now occupies this same location.

By the time World War II finally drew to a close, thousands of soldiers had been either stationed, trained or had traveled through the vicinity on their way to the Pacific front.

When the 98th Army Division departed Ft. Hase in late 1945 for occupation duty in Japan the base became a virtual ghost town as shown in Feb. 9, 1946 issue of the Kaneohe Klipper, the base newspaper when Kaneohe Bay was still a naval air station. The 98th was busily preparing for the anticipated invasion of Japan when hostilities abruptly ceased.

In the mid-fifties, after the Marine Corps had taken over the old Kaneohe Naval Air Station, The Corps also acquired the rest of Mokapu Peninsula. For the first time since the reign of the Hawaiian monarchy Mokapu was again under the jurisdiction of one military organization. Sadly, the once fast-paced Army outpost known as Ft. Hase faded into the mists of Mokapu's colorful past. Today the existence of Ft. Hase is only hinted at by the small beach that still bears its distinguished name.

Family Service Center

New team helps families cope

The continual tears of a child has replaced a happy smile; he can't seem to do anything right. His parents look as if they hate each other; their frustration and anger are shot with the accuracy of a sharp arrow at each other and their son.

This family, on the verge of destroying each other, is not without help. A team that works with chronic cases of spouse and child abuse is available at the Family Service Center.

The team is Owen Norton, Elizabeth Parks, and Karen Field. They're new employees aboard the air station, who began work at FSC Oct. 18.

Their services, which include house visits as well as phone contacts, are available for active duty and dependents.

Norton, social worker and team leader, feels that the team concept is unique in their field, since most social workers carry enormous case loads alone. He also feels that having such a team available aboard the air station lets people know someone cares.

"People don't know that person on the crisis line," he said. "Here they know somebody who also knows them."

Norton, who has a bachelor's degree in social work, has over five years experience in clinical social work, providing direct treatment to individuals and families. He has been employed as a social worker with both the New England Medical Center in Boston and Brockton VA Hospital in Brockton, Mass.

Norton's goal is to help families cope with their problems without violence.

"We're not investigators," he said. "All abuse investigations are confirmed by the Family Advocacy Team before being referred to us."

Norton explained that it seems more beneficial for him to initially be involved with the husbands, since he is the only male member of the team. He also explained that the team limits the number of cases they handle at one time.

"We carry a maximum of 25 cases at a time, because we can't give the treatment needed if we have too many cases," he said.

A second member of the team, Elizabeth Parks, has also had experience with social work. The 22-year-old Outreach worker was a Behavioral Science Specialist in the Army for four years.

"I'm involved with counseling people who are high risk or possible child or spouse abusers," said Parks. "I've also worked with delinquent children while in the Army. I basically talk to the people and act as someone the wife can normally relate to. I re-teach values to abusers, such as parenting skills and ways of discipline. I also act as a role model."

The third member, Karen Field, has been a registered nurse for a little over two years and was previously employed at Kapiolani Children's Medical Center.

Field also has experience in maternal child nursing as well as obstetrics gynecology (OB GYN).

While still in school, she worked in Phoenix, Ariz. at a shelter for abused and neglected children.

"A lot of people we work with are young mothers who need help in child development," said Field. "A lot of parents have unrealistic views of what their children can do."

The 24-year-old nurse also works with couples who have no children. She explained that some chronic cases are able to call any of the three members at their homes after working hours.

"We work with clients on a long-term basis," Field said. "We try to see whose background will help them most. We have also gone on house visits together."

Modeled after Norton, their team concept is modeled after the Hanalike Home Visitor Program at the Parent and Child Center of Hanalike.

"Hanalike has been extremely successful with a more than 90 percent success rate," said Norton. "We have a goal of at least a 75 percent success rate here at the air station."

You can count on the Corps.

This party says more about pride than words ever could.

That's because this party is the Marine Corps' Birthday Ball. A tradition. A salute to all Marines past and present. The feeling of camaraderie and pride you find here, you won't find anywhere else.

That's worth considering if you're thinking about taking a civilian job. So are your benefits. Like low cost medical care for the whole family. A retirement plan that lets you retire with half base-pay after 20 years. Plus excellent educational benefits. Take a long hard look at the facts. You'll find plenty of good reasons to...

Boy Scouts introduce program

Tiger Cubs B.S.A., an all new kind of Scouting for the 7 year old boy and adult family member, will be explained to interested families on Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 16 in the Cafeterium of Mokapu School. Tiger Cubs joined the traditional youth programs of the Boy Scouts of America this fall.

Tiger Cubs is family oriented, each boy joins with an adult. They spend a year participating as a team in family and group activities according to 1st Lt Lee Halverson, Scouting Coordinator for MCAS Kaneohe.

"We emphasize the word 'adult' as opposed to 'parent'," Halverson said. "The participating adult in most cases will be a parent, but it could be an aunt or uncle, grandparent or even a neighbor. The program is organized this way because of the increasing number of non-traditional families that exist today. This way all boys can join, no matter what their family situation is" Halverson noted.

Halverson noted that Tiger Cubs stresses fun, simplicity and flexibility. The official uniform consists only of a Tiger Cub emblem (an adult tiger and tiger cub side-by-side) that is ironed onto a T-shirt, polo shirt, or blouse. Tiger Cub groups, consisting of four to eight boy-adult teams, meet monthly.

Tiger Cubs will use a Family Activity Book that lists dozens of activities and projects to bring the boy and family closer together. Most of the activities are ones that lend themselves to family participation. The activity itself is the desired end-Tiger Cub includes none of the badges or ranks that are part of traditional Cub Scouting and Boy Scouting.

"With Tiger Cubs, we are giving people new opportunities to do things with their sons," Halverson said. "We are supporting family life by encouraging people to bring the rest of their families into the action as well. And we are expanding Scouting's ability to build character by offering a program to younger boys."

The Tiger Cub program was field-tested last year in Minnesota, Kansas and Iowa. It is one of four new activities developed by the Boy Scouts of America for introduction this fall as part of the BSA's Foundations for Growth project. Other components of the project include an enriched plan for second-year Cub Scouts; a new set of marketing tools for the BSA Explorer program; and a project that provides self-reliance skills to children from single-parent and dual-earner families.

"With Tiger Cubs, we are giving people new opportunities to do with the 7 year old in their family," Halverson said. "We are supporting family life by encouraging people to bring the rest of their families into the action as well. We are expanding Scouting's ability to build character to even more boys."

Adults can get more information by attending the first meeting on Nov. 16 or by calling Halverson at 257-2931 or 254-2580.

Registering a vehicle here can be a frustrating task, or it can be a simple matter.

Marines and sailors have 10 days once they receive their vehicle to have it registered with both the state of Hawaii and the Provost Marshal's Office here.

There are two routes a person can take when registering an out-of-state vehicle for the first time. The out-of-state plates may be kept until expiration by applying for an out-of-state permit, or Hawaii plates may be obtained.

An out-of-state permit costs $5 and Hawaii plates cost $5.50 with a non-resident certificate.

To get an out-of-state permit, a person needs the following documents: valid out-of-state vehicle registration in applicant's name; bill of landing or shipping document showing date of receipt; vehicle safety inspection; application for an out-of-state permit and proof of Hawaii no-fault insurance.

To register a vehicle for the first time, or upon expiration of an out-of-state permit, a person needs the following documents: valid out-of-state registration in applicant's name; bill of landing, shipping document or out-of-state permit; vehicle safety inspection; application for vehicle registration; certificate of validation of vehicle identification number; vehicle title and non-resident certificate (available from unit administration offices).

All forms, except the non-resident certificate, are available from satellite city halls.

Armed with all the proper documents, a person can register their vehicle at Honolulu City and County Motor Vehicle Registration, 1455 S. Beretania St. in Honolulu.

Once a vehicle is registered with the state, the next step is getting a station decal from the Provost Marshal's Office. The following documents will be needed: valid driver's license; valid Hawaii state registration or out-of-state permit; Hawaii no-fault insurance card showing policy number and expiration date; valid safety inspection permit (the form as well as the bumper sticker) and valid military or civilian identification.

These documents and a few minutes of time are all that's needed to get a station decal at the Pass and ID Section located at the 11-3 Gate.

For more information on state requirements, especially for vans, trucks and International Harvester vehicles, call 955-8348. For information concerning station regulations, call 257-3547.

Civilians play role in readiness

by Sgt Corrina Murtell

Who guides that young corporal as he does repair work on aircraft? It is repair work that must be accurate and complete—the life of its pilot depends on it. And who assists the pilot himself in thoroughly understanding the intricate details and proper use of digital computers aboard the aircraft?

Who? None other than 21 civilians of the Naval Aviation Engineering Service Unit.

Master Sergeant Earl McGeoghegan, officer in charge of NAESU, and Leo Hyez, Naval Engineer technician specialist supervisor, explained that NAESU is made up of the highest qualified personnel available. Many are prior military, and all have attended several schools in their field, as well as having numerous years of experience in avionics.

"We provide field engineering assistance and instruction to naval aviation activities in the installation, maintenance, repair, and operation of all types of aviation systems and equipment," said Hyez. "We also work in the area of radar and electronic warfare, as well as in fields that support the airframe, such as Calibration Laboratory, Ground Support Equipment, Corrosion Control, and engine test cells." McGeoghegan said that NAESU workers undergo continuous training, always learning the new and updated techniques of their field.

Chil Chadwick, NAESU worker holding a GS-12 rating, explained that NAESU employees have accumulated their knowledge over the years.

"We're the experts," he said. "We have been in the field for years before coming to NAESU." Chadwick said that he began learning avionics in 1955 and that there is a lot of equipment composed of technical parts that no one new in the field would know about.

"Our age and experience has a lot to do with our job," he said.

According to Hyez, there are more than 2,100 NAESU engineers positioned at every Navy and Marine Corps air base throughout the world, of which 478 work for the Federal Civil Service. These civil service workers are known as Naval Engineering Technicians (NETS). The remaining technicians are known as Civilian Engineering Technicians (CETS).

NAESU engineers are also stationed aboard all aircraft carriers in both the Sixth and Seventh Fleet, including the LPH carriers.

NAESU technicians can also be sent to remote locations with deploying squadrons, according to Hyez. In the event of an emergency request, modern communication networks can identify a technician at another NAESU detachment and have him on his way within a matter of hours to provide assistance. If there is no expertise within NAESU, the organization also has the authority to procure the services from private industry.

Captain Don Schwartz, Marine Aircraft Group-24 Aviation Maintenance Officer, said the NAESU workers train both enlisted and officers on a daily basis. "They provide a valuable commodity as far as training goes," he said. "They play a vital role in our combat readiness."

Job interview decides who they hire

Most American companies use the job interview as a way of deciding who they hire. According to Dr. Adam Savage, head of the Career Preparation Center at Hawaii Loa College, many people who interview make the mistake of pressing the matter of salary, benefits and future promotions too early. "That's a good way of getting yourself eliminated from consideration. It is always better to try and separate the interview, which is everything that leads up to a job offer, from the salary negotiations which should follow. In fact, it's best not to ask anything for yourself until an actual job offer takes place.

Interviewing and salary negotiations are only a small part of the things covered by Adam Savage in his "Finding Jobs, Changing Careers, and Deciding What to Do with the Rest of Your Life." This workshop is being presented by the Hawaii Education Association on Nov. 20 at Leeward Community College, Nov. 27 at Hawaii Pacific College, Dec. 4 at Hawaii Loa College, and Dec. 11 at UH-Hilo. Information-application forms are available at public and school libraries, from high school and college counselors, and at many major supermarkets.

WHEN AN INTERVIEW BEGINS, the person being interviewed should only be concerned with what the organization needs. It is a good idea to get as much information as you can from the interviewer before you start talking. Ask such questions as, "Can you tell me more about the problems being faced by the organization? Can you tell me more about the day to day problems I'll be handling? Can you tell me about the kind of person you're looking for? What problems have you had with people who've held this position before?" After you have an understanding of how the interviewer sees the organization's needs and problems, then talk about what you have to offer in terms of those needs and problems.

"Keep your responses concise and to the point. Many people make the mistake of volunteering too much information about themselves. After you've made a statement, you can always ask if that answered the question or if you need to elaborate.

Always keep in mind that you are discussing the company's needs and problems until a job offer has been made, then it's time to talk about our needs."

"IF POSSIBLE AVOID GETTING yourself committed to a salary until a job offer has been made. Sometimes that can be as simple as saying something like, 'Well, I try not to discuss salary until a job offer has been made. Are you making me a job offer now, and are we ready to negotiate a salary?' If pressed about salary, try to get the other person to commit first. You can try something like, 'The job you describe sounds ideal and I'm sure I could do an excellent job for you. You probably have a perfectly fair salary range in mind, and it's probably best if we start with that. What salary range did you plan to work with?'

Remember that starting salary isn't everything, and you need to negotiate for the future. Ask how you're going to be evaluated after three or six months, and that if you're working out well, what additional responsibilities you will be assigned. After the additional responsibilities have been spelled out, ask what new title will go with them. After a new title is specified, ask about what additional pay goes with the new title. This is a good pattern to follow and it's wise to try it twice: once for an initial period of three to six months, and again for a year or so."

Kunia upsets Marines in last minute

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

TRIPLEX ARMY MEDICAL CENTER, Hawaii — After exchanging baskets for the first three quarters, Kunia Post steadily pulled away and beat the Hawaii Marines 58-48, Thursday.

Kunia Post, a group of soldiers stationed at Wheeler Air Force Base, rallied in the fourth quarter, scoring 21 points to the Marines' 13 to defeat them by the largest margin of the game.

"The Marines had a good team," said Columbus Pollard, Kunia's strong forward. "We just had a better one." Our 5-4 record doesn't reflect the kind of season we've been having. We lost to Schofield by two points and to Jolly Roger by one.

Jolly Roger remains in first place with an unblemished record of nine wins and no losses. The Marines are tied in fourth position with Kunia.

The leathernecks jumped out to an 8-3 lead early in the game, but mistakes, turnovers and fouls presented Kunia with an opportunity to catch up. Capitalizing on the situation, the soldiers whiddled down the led to a 12-12 tie.

With two minutes left in the first quarter, Kevin Sulton completed a three point play which pushed Kunia into the lead for the first time in the game, 15-14.

From that point on, the lead changed hands nine times before both teams retired to the locker rooms for halftime, tied at 29.

The Marines' lack of defensive rebounds gave Kunia three and four attempts to score. Either they made the basket on the last attempt, were fouled attempting to shoot or sometimes both.

At the start of the second half, Corporal Larry Titus had four fouls and Lance Corporal Larry Volley had three. Three minutes later, Titus, totaling four points for the game, hit the showers after fouling out. Volley received his fifth personal with a minute and a half left to play in the game.

Despite foul trouble, the Marines stayed point for point with Kunia, trailing by three points at the most.

But, as the fourth quarter started Kunia picked up the tempo. A tired and much smaller Marine team did their best to stay with their fast breaking opponents, but soon the Kunia's lead increased to four and then six.

The Marines changed their 1-3-1 defense to man-to-man trying to slow down the Kunia attack, but valuable seconds ticked away as the clock was running down.

With one minute left to play, Staff Sergeant Norris Chappell sank a jumper to bring the Marines to within four points, 51-47. But, Kunia went into the four corners and stalled for time.

During the final 41 seconds of the game, Kunia scored seven unanswered points, five of which were from the free throw line.

"We made too many mental mistakes," explained Gunnery Sergeant Skip Best, coach of the Hawaii Marines. "It was anybody's game right up to the final minute and we could have won it. They just had the superior height advantage, which caused us to commit a lot of fouls."

Mark McDonald 8 2-2 18, Columbus Pollard 6 5-7 17, Kevin Sulton 3 2-4 8, Frank Frazier 2-2 6 6, Ron Davis 1 3-4 5, Alfred Jones 1 1-2 3, Totals 21 15-25 58.

VALUABLE COUPON

Aussies win at their own game

SSgt Moses Reynolds

HONOLULU, Hawaii — The Moanalua Rugby Club of Hawaii was pitted against the visiting Ganiada Rugby Team of Australia for an 80 minute contest of the rugged sport recently at Kapiolani Park.

The game was surprisingly characterized by the aggressive scrummage, rucks and mauls from the American forwards led by team Captain Paul Trill, a seaman stationed at Naval Base, Pearl Harbor. Unfortunately for the Americans, the Moanalua backs were unsuccessful against the enormous Australian possessions throughout the game.

For the American side, which was made up mostly of soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines stationed on Oahu, it was a game to be proud of in spite of the final score, 7-0 in favor of the Australians.

"A few of us were injured near the beginning of the game," explained team coach Art Corcoran, a Marine Captain, stationed at Camp H.M. Smith.

The injuries gave the Ganiada team the opportunity to score early. A mishandled punt deep in the Moanalua territory was swiftly scooped up by an onrushing Australian team member for what seemed like an incredibly easy score.

Much of the rest of the game was spent inching towards the Australian goal but the Americans were unable to score against the formidable Australian defense. The final score came with a penalty kick at the beginning of the second half.

"Despite the defeat, it was worthwhile for us all," said Corcoran.

SCRUMMAGE — Marine Sergeant Leo "Spanky" Brooks of Camp H.M. Smith binds into the scrum during set play against the visiting Ganiada Rugby Team from Australia.

An All Day Affair

Lance Corporal Glenn Taylor, Weapons Company, 1st Battalion, 3d Marines, will attempt to run around the Pop Warner Field track for 24 straight hours. An earlier attempt in Sept. 1981 left Taylor short of the world record as he completed 146 miles 880 yards. He believes the world record for a 24 hour run is 168 miles and "with a little luck and a lot of support" he believes he can break it. On his last lap his battalion will follow him around the track to the finish line ending at approximately 6:15 a.m. today. (Photo by Sgt Chris Taylor)

Running shoes: A good investment reduces the possibilities of injury

by SSgt Dennis Litalien

Injuries are the scourge of runners; novices in particular. Nothing dampens the enthusiasm of a new runner more quickly than nagging hip, knee, or foot ailments.

The simplest, most efficient common-sense way to prevent problems before they begin is to invest in a decent pair of running shoes.

THIS ISN'T TO SAY THAT by buying a pair of shoes you can eliminate the chance of injury. What it will do, however, is greatly reduce the possibility. When gambling with physical well-being it makes sense to have the odds in your favor.

In attempting to select a good shoe, new runners often discover they've opened a Pandora's box. There are literally hundreds of different running shoes on the U.S. market. They range in quality from outstanding to outright rip-off. The road to the proper choice is littered with disgruntled, disillusioned men and women. The purpose of this article is to offer some ways to avoid unnecessary pitfalls in choosing a shoe. What we will discuss in particular are training flats.

TO BEGIN WITH, THE following qualities are essential in a good running shoe.

The sole of a good running shoe must provide traction, protection, cushioning and flexibility. If the shoe is lacking in any of these areas it should be avoided.

In training shoes the heel should be elevated to reduce leg strain. Heel width may vary, but the heel must provide stability for the user. Heel wedges, the inside layer of the sole, should end at the point where the foot flexes to provide freedom of movement and proper flexion.

INNER MATERIAL SHOULD be non-irritating but durable. Pay close attention to seams and other protrusions inside the shoe that could cause rubbing and blistering. The insole of the shoe on which the foot rests should be of a soft non-irritating material.

Finally, the shoe should also have a heel counter, a solid piece of rubber or similar material around the rear of the shoe to aid stability. A good running shoe should have padding at the ankle, Achilles and tongue. It should be lightweight and properly balanced to avoid any feeling of bulkiness.

The aforementioned qualities rule out tennis shoes and basketball shoes. Such foot-wear is inadequate for anyone seriously into running and can be hazardous.

AT ALL COSTS, AVOID THE department-store type shoes. These basically cheap imitations of name brand running shoes are not only of poor construction, but are often sold at prices equal to or above that of a good shoe.

Keep in mind during your quest for a running shoe there is no one shoe which can be worn comfortably by all people. One runner's treasured shoe is another's shin splint. A good rule to follow is the heavier the runner, the heavier the shoe. A large person needs the added shock absorption of a well-cushioned heavy shoe.

BEFORE BUYING SHOES, a neophyte runner should gather as much information as possible. A good place to start is by talking to other more experienced runners. Another is by doing some research on the subject. There are several excellent running publications on the market and most carry information about selecting shoes. Some even devote entire issues to rating running shoes. A quick check at the library may be especially beneficial and save you the cost of buying all those magazines.

Once you've done all this, it's time to visit a running shop. Avoid regular shoe stores and department stores. Most running stores are operated by reputable, sincere businessmen who also share your affinity for running. They usually know what they are talking about and carry a large variety of quality shoes on hand.

A good pair of shoes can cost anywhere between 20 and 70 dollars. It makes sense to buy a less expensive shoe if at all possible. In a quality shoe less expensive does not mean a cheaply made shoe. Then again, if you find a less expensive shoe doesn't meet your particular needs by all means buy a more expensive shoe.

SPEND THE EXTRA money. In running, protection and prevention go a long way toward making it the beneficial activity it is. To take unnecessary chances is downright foolish.

Artillerymen trace history back to Smedley Butler

by GySgt R.R. Keene

CAMP S.D. BUTLER, Japan — Check fire! It's the 12th Marines!

This regiment of cannon cockers — who've loaded cannons with practically no fuse and sighted down water-cooled machine guns while smoking cigars in the China sun — are as Asiatic as their infantry counterparts in the 4th Marines. They've lowered the muzzles on their artillery, fired point blank, then slugged it out toe-to-toe against frenzied attacks on Pacific islands. They rained thunder on "Charlie" in "Nam" and hauled their regimental colors up and down the Far East so much that they're more at home on Okinawa than most Americans have a right to be.

Take a look at those scarlet colors and you'll see eight streamers with countless battle stars all sounding more oriental than Chinese gongs. There's China, Bougainville, the Solomon Islands, the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Japan, Thailand, Indonesia, Da Nang, Chu Lai, Cam Lo and Khe Sanh. Those are only a few places in a long series that rings out valor louder than a 105 round on impact.

Impact. Artillerymen call it splash nowadays, but those rounds echo back to October 1927, when old Asia hand, Smedley D. Butler, was ordered to scrounge a brigade for China. "In order to protect American lives and property."

Pulling men from units throughout the Pacific, the two-time Medal of Honor winner, put machine guns, howitzers and riflemen together in Tientsin, China under a lieutenant colonel and formed the 12th Marines. In the early 1930's they hauled down their colors, leaving China and the rest of the Far East to the 4th Marines. The regiment was then deactivated.

Pearl Harbor changed all that. In the wake of oil slicks and burning, sinking American ships on Dec. 7, 1941, World War II was under way.

The 3rd Marine Division was born and with it came the reactivation of the 12th Marines. Again they came from every unit the Corps could spare. The battalions were spread out to every training area available in the U.S., with the regiment headquartered in California.

It was a trend that would continue even to this day; namely direct artillery support of a specific unit or general support of a number of units within a division. What it means is that the battalions and batteries seldom have worked as a massed regiment in conflicts.

In February 1913, 3rd Battalion sailed to peaceful Pago Pago, American Samoa. The 4th Battalion fared little better. They landed to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka" played by the New Zealand Army Band in Auckland.

The regiment reunited on New Zealand and wasted no time preparing for action. Sixty-mile hikes with full packs were one officer's answer to those who said American youth had become physically soft. He slipped in "R"-rations which were measured, but inadequate portions of rice, bacon, coffee and raisins. The practice was later abandoned, but by then 12th Marines were already on their way to their baptism of fire on Bougainville.

D-Day was total confusion and disorientation. Units landed wherever they could. Firing positions could not be set up. The first request for fire support was received and registered, but went unanswered.

It may have been disaster, but these Marines were rugged from 60-mile hikes on rice, bacon and raisins. They proved their mettle by clearing fields of fire in swamps and constructing firing platforms. Firing their weapons while in water up to their knees, they transported ammunition by rubber boats.

They used their artillery so effectively that the enemy met disaster whenever he tried to mass. Twelfth Marines provided such close-in barrages that one thankful survivor went so far as to plant a kiss and hug on the barrel of a howitzer.

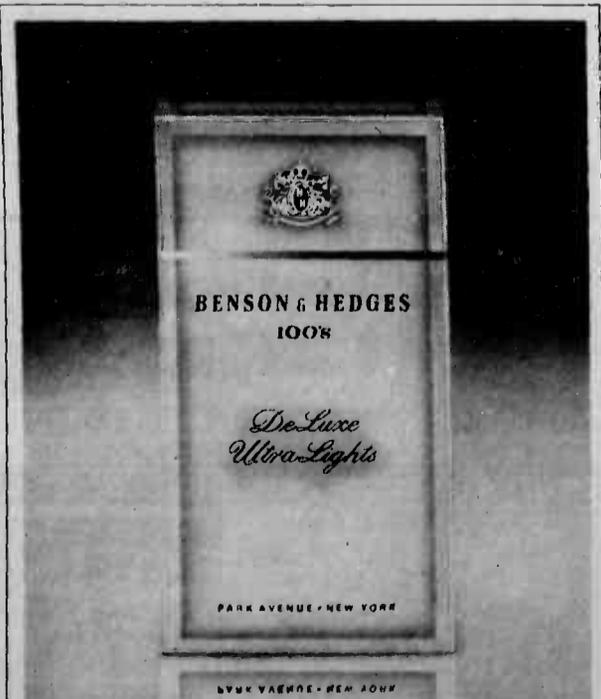

One Japanese prisoner later remarked, "I don't know what kind of jungle fighters you (Marines) are because you don't fight in the jungle. You blow it away with your artillery." cont. on Page B-6

Signal School celebrates 40th year

THE COMBAT CENTER, MCA-GCC, 29 Palms, Ca. — When Marines began their march up the Pacific islands during World War II, their movements were kept precise with information passed by communicators trained at the Signal School, Signal Battalion, Quantico, Va.

Today, the communicators are trained here at the Marine Corps Communication-Electronics School, the Marine Corps largest formal school, which celebrated its 40th anniversary Oct. 5.

Several former commanding officers of the school joined the 2885 Marines of today's 'C&E' for parade field and birthday cake cutting ceremonies.

What is now the communications and electronics field began as the Pigeon and Flag Handler Platoon in 1932, relying not on modern-day technology but clear visibility and animal instincts.

As the Marine Corps moved into the electronic age and World War II, the Signal School was activated October 5, 1942. In 1943, the school was moved to Camp Lejeune, N.C., where, throughout the war radio operators, field wiremen and switchboard operators were trained for Pacific operations. Marines were trained for 15 military occupational specialties within the communications field.

AT THE END OF THE WAR, smaller numbers of Marines needed training and the need for immediate training ended. Signal School, which had several name changes throughout its time at Camp Lejeune, was redesignated as Signal Battalion, Marine Training and Replacement Command, and moved to Camp Del Mar, Camp Pendleton, Calif. on Aug. 12, 1946.

Before the Korean conflict, the school began to grow. Marines had to be trained to use newer and more complex equipment, like the Marine Tactical Data System and the radars that went with the system.

Still located at Camp Pendleton in 1949, the school became the Signal and Tracked School Battalion, a name it carried when it moved to the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif. during January 1950.

In September 1950, the school was redesignated Signal School Battalion. Oct. 1, 1953, the school was again redesignated, this time becoming the Communication-Electronics School Battalion, a title more fitting its now widely-varied course offerings.

Although the school was not completely moved to the Combat Center until Feb. 1, 1971, Phase I of the transfer operation began five years earlier.

ON SEPT. 7, 1967, COMMANDING officer Colonel J.A. Blakely and Congressman Jerry L. Pettis (R-Ca.) jointly cut the ribbon on a new $2.5 million complex at the then Marine Corps Base, 29 Palms. The project, begun June 2, 1966, included the building of structures 1859, 1760, 1761, 1757, 1758, 1747, 1748, 1737 and 1738, along with renovations to buildings 1640 and 1620 to serve as administration buildings. The first classes began here Aug. 1, 1967, and 400 members of the total 3000-Marine battalion were studying the Marine Tactical Data Systems course here by 1969.

The opening of the 29 Palms classes reflected an increase of 135 percent in the number of students being trained since Korea. They were to take their own part in the larger waves of troops going to the Republic of Vietnam.

Phase II of the transfer plan was to have been completed by August 1970. It was delayed for six months because of a lack of adequate support facilities here, a critical family housing shortage and anticipated implementation of Vietnam redeployments.

THE BIRTHDAY ACTIVITIES began at 7:45 a.m., Oct. 5 with a concert by the Center Drum and Bugle Corps on the main parade field. Following morning colors, birthday cake was shared by MCCES dependent families and special guests of the command.

A shuttle bus took guests from the parade field to the MCCES auditorium where a slide presentation on the school was shown. After the show guests were invited to take a walking tour through classrooms and work areas to learn about the Marine communicators and the equipment they use.

WORKING WITH THE REAL THING — Lance Corporal Brian Rossi, Company B, practices for a practical test on the van he would really be working in during combat. All vans and equipment possible are set up inside the school for hands-on instruction.

Patient Education

Remember any non-food substance may be poisonous. Keep plants, medicines, and cleaning products out of your child's reach.

Children in the one to five year age group account for the majority of accidental ingestions each year. At this stage of growth and development children are constant explorers. Natural curiosity and inexperience makes children prone to ingestion accidents. The three areas of the home where the majority of incidents occur are those rooms where products are stored — bathroom, kitchen, and garage.

Shelves and under the sink are involved in more accidental ingestion than all other storage places. Storage for dangerous products should be locked or inaccessible to children.

Containers which the child would normally associate with food or beverage should never be used for other products. A significant hazard may exist during a visit by the child to a home where children are not often present, and where the precautions taken in his usual environment may be absent. If an ingestion occurs, call a physician or the Poison Control Center for advice in Hawaii at 941-4411. Do not induce vomiting until instructed to do so. Have the container or label at the phone. Do not induce vomiting if the ingestion involves a strong corrosive, gasoline or other petroleum distillate.

and make us fight in the open."

The results were similar in mid-1944 when the regiment landed on Guam.

There it became apparent that every Marine is a rifleman when the regimental command post, firing artillery in support of Marines elsewhere, came under attack. Without any reduction of firepower, artillerymen from cooks to ammunition handlers, using machine guns, carbines and bayonets prevented attackers from destroying a single howitzer.

On Iwo Jima there was still a lot of fighting after the famous flag raising. The 12th provided smoke screens for Marines forced to pry the Japanese from concrete bunkers. Concrete-piercing, high-angle rounds were used. It was exacting cannoning. The Regiment was effective enough to earn another battle star in their Navy Unit Commendation streamer.

What U.S. artillery would have had to face on the Japanese mainland will never be known, for the war ended shortly. The 12th found themselves back in China as part of the 3rd Marine Brigade which was standing between uneasy Nationalist and Communist Chinese forces. Tensions were still unresolved in 1946, when the regiment sailed for home. They didn't remain home for long.

By 1953, they were back in the Far East working out of Camp McNair on the slopes of Mt. Fuji. In 1956, the Regiment arrived on Okinawa and set up housekeeping at old Camp Hague and later, Camp Hansen.

They had picked up a motto by then, "Shoot, move and communicate."

In 1957, 1st Battalion was afloat off the Persian Gulf in the event the Lebanon crisis spread. It didn't, but there were soon to be other challenges.

In 1962, elements of 2nd Battalion were part of the expeditionary force sent to Thailand at that government's request. President John F. Kennedy said the Marines were there on the Laotian border to "insure the territorial integrity of this peaceful nation (Thailand)." Thailand is still free.

Thailand was only a small clue to the powderkeg smoking in Southeast Asia. It exploded in Vietnam.

The landing at Da Nang in 1965, was only the start of countless rounds to be fired, battles to be fought, lives that would be shattered, and lists of vicious engagements to be added to the Regimental chronology. There was Chu Lai and Operation Starlite. M Battery alone had fired 45,000 rounds by October 1966.

At Phu Bai and Hue City the hills burned with fire from 12th Marines. H

Battery pumped 50,000 rounds at the Communists streaming through Northern I Corps.

By 1967, 12th Marines became the largest de-facto regiment in Marine Corps history with some 11 battalions, including three Army battalions. They needed every battalion on operations like Lancaster, Prairie, Hickory, Napoleon and Saline. They fired the Demilitarized Zone and gave as well as took at Khe Sanh. In operation Dewey Canyon they helped account for 1,617 enemy dead. Often, as in the Pacific, artillery men fought hand-to-hand from their gun positions.

By mid-1969, Vietnam was coming to an end for the U.S. and the 12th Marines would be cut back to regular strength and on Okinawa again. Twelfth Marines would eventually move to Camp Zukeran, (Foster).

They have a long lineage, those cannon cockers in the 12th Marines. They don't hike 60 miles on raisins and rice anymore, but often can be seen hiking 10 or more miles along the coast. They can also be heard running in formation past the headquarters units of Camp Butler, their cadence echoing across their Far East base like it did years ago in China. It echoes of firepower that stretches the vast Pacific.

For Once Again Granting Me the Privilege of Serving You.
With deepest appreciation,

MAHALO

Marines don't get laid off.

You're not subject to strikes or loss of pay due to illness either. No civilian company can give you that kind of guarantee.

Bicycles, mopeds are easy targets for a thief

by Sgt Greg Berry

Bicycles and mopeds are easy targets for theft. They're lightweight and easily stuffed into the bed of a truck or the trunk of a car.

They don't have to be easy marks, though.

There are a number of things that can be done to protect two-wheelers. Registering them with both the state and the Provost Marshal's Office is the first step. A registered bike is easier to recover than one that isn't.

Bicycles bought from retail outlets in Hawaii are registered with the state at the time of purchase. The only exceptions to this are purchases made from military exchanges, and even then the purchaser is provided with the necessary forms to take to a satellite city hall.

But what about the bikes brought over from the mainland? Satellite city halls have all the forms needed to register them. Once completed, the forms are sent from the respective city halls to Honolulu, where the forms are processed. It takes a few weeks for the registration decal to be mailed, but it's worth it. The two-wheeler now carries proof of its ownership.

Mopeds are registered the same as bicycles. The cost is $3.10 for both initial and renewal registration, but transfer of ownership is free.

Registration aboard the air station is also free. State registration, a valid ID card and, in the case of mopeds, a valid state driver's license, are all that's required. Bicycles and mopeds are registered with the Pass and ID

Section located at the H-3 Gate.

Other tips for keeping two-wheelers safe and sound are: engrave owner's name and social security number on frame; keep all paperwork, including a photograph, to help identify the bike in case of theft; buy a high-quality bike lock, and use it, and when possible, keep bicycles locked in quarters or in a bicycle rack. People living in the barracks should take advantage of secured storage areas.

Prevention is always the best defense against theft.
