Improved M16 called best rifle in world

"One of the important decisions made during my tour as Commandant was to approve the M16A2 as our new service rifle. It will soon start arriving in the Fleet Marine Forces.

I am well aware of the largely unjustified criticism that has plagued the M16 since it was first introduced in 1967. I am quick to remind each of you, however, that since its introduction we have made significant engineering changes which have made our current M16A1 a sound and reliable weapon. This was more than adequately proven in the NATO small arms trials, conducted from 1977 to 1980, where it was determined to be most reliable.

Although the M16A2 program had been described as a product improvement, it is, in fact, much more than an evolutionary upgrade of the M16A1. The program has taken into consideration the shortcomings our Marines have identified with the M16A1 in the field over the years.

Consequently, the M16A2 is a new rifle in many important respects — one which has been designed by Marines as their service rifle.

For example, we have: strengthened the plastic parts making the weapon more durable; designed interchangeable hand-guard halves and a modified slip ring to allow for easier removal and replacement; added a muzzle brake compensator that reduces barrel rise or jump; improved both the front and rear sights; replaced the full automatic fire with a burst control device; strengthened the barrel; added a brass reflector for left-handed shooters; and most significantly, incorporated a 1-in-7 twist barrel to allow the rifle to fire the new, heavier NATO standard 5.56mm round, thereby improving accuracy, penetration, lethality, and effective range.

Thorough testing and evaluation of the M16A2, conducted at Quantico (Virginia), has satisfied me that there is no finer service rifle available in the world today.

Our Corps' well-deserved reputation for military professionalism stems in part from the unique relationship that has existed between a Marine and his rifle, and from our devotion to marksmanship proficiency as a fundamental skill of all Marines.

I am confident that the selection of the M16A2 as our next service rifle greatly enhances our combat effectiveness and serves well our steadfast commitment to those important traditions. In a word, we are in the black.

Wives stand lonely vigil waiting for husbands' return

by Sgt Corrina Martell

In the days of kings and pirates, women waited in castles, staring out over the sea for their loved ones to return.

Today, they wait in modern apartments or houses, but their lonely vigil is the same.

The wives of Marines deployed aboard the USS Belleau Wood, Ogden, and Cayuga have been waiting for their husbands to return since the 31st Marine Amphibious Unit left Hawaii Sept. 10. Their approximately five-month wait is sometimes lonely and depressing, and the adjustment to their lives is more often than not, difficult.

Jeri Nisely is the wife of Second Lieutenant Scott Nisely, who is serving aboard the U.S.S. Belleau Wood. She is pregnant and her baby will be born sometime in December. The child will be about two months old before meeting its father.

"This is the first time Scott has been on float," said Jeri. "The first two weeks or so were an adjustment period and it went slowly. I had to get used to him not coming home for dinner.

"Sometimes I resent the fact that he's not here, and other times I get mad at myself for not timing the pregnancy better. I think what bothers me most is that we're missing that time together when the baby is born. My husband is really into being a part of natural childbirth. He wrote that he didn't think he could forgive himself for being away at a time I need him the most."

Jeri said that she has her good days and bad days since her husband left.

"I'm used to having Scott gone, though," she explained. "After we met he went to OCS (Officers' Candidate School) and TBS (The Basic School). But, being pregnant makes it different now, because I'm more emotional. After crying it out, though, I feel okay."

The 24-year-old mother-to-be explained that she keeps busy with natural childbirth classes, as well as reading and sewing.

"I try to go swimming every day if I can," said Jeri. The hardest times without her husband are supertime and weekends, she said.

"It's the little things about his presence that I miss," she said. "We're the best of friends and enjoy talking. We would always do a lot together on the weekends. He's also affectionate and I miss that."

A neighbor has offered to drive Jeri to the hospital when she begins labor.

"I'm hoping my mother will be able to come here for the baby's birth," said Jeri. "Both my husband and I are hoping for a girl."

Like Jeri, Janice Davis's husband is also on float for the first time in their marriage.

Janice, married 8½ years to Staff Sergeant Curtis Davis, who is stationed aboard the USS Cayuga, has a very exact way of describing her emotions during her husband's absence.

"You wait and you wish and cry and pray," she said. "Waiting for that first letter was the hardest time."

Janice and her husband have a son and daughter, ages six and two.

"I'm involved with a craft class to keep me busy," she said. "And I also get involved with my son's class parties."

"My husband writes that he is lonely and asks how the kids are. He will miss my daughter's birthday in January, so he asks how big she's getting."

Although Janice admits to the loneliness and occasional lateness of allotment checks, she says she doesn't have any problems yet that she can't handle.

"Before we came here my husband was a drill instructor at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego for 18 months. That helped me prepare for being lonely. I lived in Riverside, Calif. and my husband came home once a week, if at all.

"The commanding general of MCRD said that if we made it through DI duty, we can do anything. And I think I can."

Also believing she can carry on is 22-year-old Pierette Franco, whose husband, Lance Corporal Raymond Franco, is aboard the USS Ogden.

Pierette, who was born in Puerto Rico, said that this is the second time her husband has been deployed. The first time was one week after they were married.

"The first time my husband was on float I stayed with my family in Puerto Rico," said Pierette. "This float has been harder for me because I'm alone here with no family."

Pierette occupies her time as a full-time student at Windward Community College. She also works part-time at the college as a chemistry lab assistant. She is pursuing an associate's degree in liberal arts and will graduate this December.

Despite her busy schedule, Pierette said that supertime is hardest without her husband because that's the time they talk and share their experiences of the day.

"But I have to accept that my husband is not going to stay with me during this period of time," she said. "I have to face reality and have a good attitude."

"Sometimes we think it is the end of the world, but it may be the beginning of a new life. Now, you have the opportunity to know your potentials as a human being — not only for your own benefit, but for your relationship with your loved one."

Pierette believes that the most essential thing is the support of the husband in helping his wife pursue her goals.

"You may ask how this is possible if he is far away," explained Pierette. "But it doesn't matter if he's in the opposite side of the world. You can feel his strength and love. This is not just physical, but spiritual."

Pierette said that through her husband's letters, he sounds very depressed. "I want to assure him that I am fine," she said. "I don't want him to feel my own depression."

Intelligence Brief

The T-54/55 medium tanks come in many versions. The main armament is the 100mm gun with an effective range of approximately 1,000 meters. A coaxial 7.62mm machinegun and a secondary 12.7mm anti-aircraft machinegun for the T-55 completes the weapons. The crew is four men. The T-55 is approximately 1 meter shorter in height than the US M-60 tank. The cruising ranges are 400 and 500 kilometers, respectively, and the speed of both tanks is 48 Km/h. The T-55 is fitted with infrared searchlights, and two-plane stabilization for the main gun.

FUELING AROUND — Gunnery Sergeant Robert Tokunaga, noncommissioned officer in charge of the fuel pits, closes a fuel valve on one of the pit's pumps. The high-speed refuelers were recently renovated, and are now mission effective by reducing aircraft fillup time. (Photo by Sgt Pepper Davis)

Aircraft don't wait, petro pumping freely

Renovations on the fuel pit's two high-speed refuelers are complete, and that means shorter waiting times at the pumps for the station's pilots. According to Ron Vargas, fuel division director, new aluminum filters were added to the pumps and has cut the old refueling time of 25 minutes in half. "At first there was only one filter at each two lane pump. That restricted the flow of fuel to 130 gallons per minute on each lane. Now that four new filters have been added, we can pump 250 gallons of fuel per minute at each lane. This way the aircraft don't have to wait that long," he explained. Although the project included a few more details, Vargas said the filters were primary. He said the renovation cost approximately $200,000, and was started in July.

Patient Education

INTERVIEW WITH DR. RICK HILDER, DERMATOLOGIST, NRMCL PEARL HARBOR

Question: Please define acne and tell us what causes it?
Answer: Acne is a disease of the sebaceous (oil glands). The basic cause is unknown.
Question: Most of us have had at least minor problem at one time in our lives with pimples, usually as adolescence, but there were always a few unfortunate kids that had more of a problem than others. What makes one person more susceptible to a severe case of acne than another?
Answer: Probably the most important factor is tendency of some people's skin pores to plug up, causing the oil to back up and become stagnant.
Question: Why is it that some people can go through their whole lives never having so much as a single pimple?

Answer: These people are lucky; their pores do not have this tendency.
Question: How effective are the numerous preparations advertised to the control of acne? Do they really do any good?
Answer: There are several useful preparation available. These include alcohol containing solution for removing excess oil from the skin. Benzoyl peroxide is also available in several forms. This is a very effective treatment if used as directed.
Question: Is there anything that can be accomplished by a visit with a physician?
Answer: If the acne is controlled well by over-the-counter drugs (OTC) — No. If there is no response or problems with the OTC drugs — a visit to a physician is indicated.
Question: A dermatologist is available if you're active duty, but where can a dependent go to be treated?

Answer: The Adult Clinic at NRMCL Pearl Harbor sees dependents with dermatology problems. If the physician there feels it is indicated, he may write for a consultation visit with the dermatologist at Tripler.
Question: Is there anything a doctor might be able to do for a person afflicted with acne that he can't do for himself by buying these OTC astringents and cleaners?
Answer: Yes, especially if the OTC drugs are not working well. There are several prescription drugs which may be added.
Question: If a patient is put on tetracycline (or antibiotic) for the treatment of chronic acne problems, is the taking of the drug likely to produce any ill effects over a long period of time?

Answer: No, especially if the patient takes his tetracycline at the dosage and times he is directed.
Question: Almost anyone who has ever had any problem with pimples knows that there is quite a temptation to squeeze the pimples in an attempt to make them go away faster. What are the positive and negative aspects of this type of approach?
Answer: There are no positive aspects to squeezing pimples. What usually happens is the pimples, blackhead or whitehead ruptures into the deep layers of the skin. This causes the surrounding skin around the pimple to become red, angry and painful. Not only that, but there is now a good chance that scarring will occur.

Wise up.

Wives stand lonely vigil

Pierette has advice for other wives whose husbands are on float. "I trust in human nature," she said. "We always tend, no matter how bad our emotional mood is, to improve our lives in a better way. Have faith and accept the situation and keep going." And that's exactly what Cindy Morrell, wife of Major Richard Morrell, is doing. Cindy's husband is on his second deployment, and he is stationed aboard the USS Belleau Wood. "Overall, you just do," said Cindy. "Life goes on whether he's here or not." Cindy said she expected this second float to be easier, but is finding it more difficult than the first. "The first time you don't really know what a float is," she said. "You don't really understand about the mail and how everything is done. You don't know if you're going to cope. This time, I knew what to expect, and I'm finding it more trying." Cindy also explained the importance of having support from someone. "My husband is my best friend," she said. "When he goes I need a substitute. During the first float I found that substitute in a very close friend who offered support. This time I'm alone with the children." Like Pierette, Cindy is also a full-time student at Windward Community College. She is studying business and is also an avid tennis player. "It gets lonely, though," said Cindy. "You can do for awhile without a husband or lover, but not without a friend. I had a really bad week last week and there was no one I could talk to." "Last time Dick was on float we knew where they would be most of the time. This time we don't. It's frustrating." If possible, Cindy hopes to join her husband at the port he will be in during New Year's. She said that despite the loneliness, she realizes her husband is performing a vital role for the country. "When Dick calls he tells me to explain to the children that what he's doing is for the defense of our country, which makes the world a better place for them to live in." Peggy Holowechi agrees with Cindy that a friend plays a very important role in helping a wife to cope while her husband is away. Peggy's husband, First Lieutenant William Holowechi, is spending his second float aboard the USS Ogden. "A friend helps you cope," said Peggy. "You definitely need someone to pick you up when you're down. Sometimes you can be high as a kite, and other times so low." "A lot of people say that the second float is more difficult. I'm finding that it's so. The hardest thing this time is not knowing where they're going. The uncertain schedule and not knowing when mail is coming through has made it hard." In addition to caring for two daughters, ages six and three, Peggy works at the Preschool. She explained that the first five weeks of the deployment were the most trying. "The car broke down, one of my daughters got sick, one had an accident and needed stitches, school started, and on and on," she said. "At those times you search out the friends. Sometimes you need to have a good cry. Everyone has a coping mechanism." Peggy explained that during the first separation she had discipline problems with the children, but that this time they are carrying on with their schedules a little better. "The children can't always comprehend time," she said. "Everyday they ask for Bill and want to send him things. Bill specifically called once to talk to the kids because he missed them. That gives the kids reassurance that daddy isn't leaving them." "You can't replace the husband, but you can reassure the children that daddy is coming back." Peggy said that Sundays feel especially lonely for her. "One Sunday I was coming back from church and I heard something emotional on the radio and started crying. My daughter Melissa, who is six, understood that I missed Bill, and she told me a joke and tried to cheer me up."

WAITING ARRIVAL OF BABY AND HUSBAND — Jeri Nisely attends a natural childbirth class at a private home in Kailua. Jeri's

Peggy explained that a lot of wives take out aggressions during this period on their husbands. "It's okay to feel bad that he's gone," said Peggy. "But don't blame him that he has to go. If you truly love your husbands, you can try that extra effort for them. When it's over, it seems they never went away." For the holidays, Peggy and her children will be going home to New York. "We're planning a trip to the Big Island when Bill returns," she said. In contrast to these five women is Pat Rutter, wife of Hospitalman First Class John Rutter who is a copman aboard the USS Ogden. "It hasn't been too hard on me because I've been married a long time and I'm an older person. That makes a difference compared to the younger women," said Pat. "We knew when we came to Hawaii that it would mean sea duty for my husband." Although the Rutters have been married 18 years, this is the first time HMI Rutter has been deployed on sea duty with Marines. Pat, who works as social director for the wives of deployed Marines, said that she and her six-year-old son are doing fine. "But once in awhile my son wants to call his father and doesn't understand why he can't," she said. "After 8 p.m. my son goes to sleep, and then I'm alone. That seems to be the hardest time." Maintaining a cheerful attitude, Pat said that time seems to have been going by fast. "It's already November," she said. "Before we know it, it'll be February and they'll be back."

PROUD TO CLAIM TITLE

Lots of callers thought the Hawaii Marine had made a mistake on last week's front page birthday message from the Secretary of the Navy. The Honorable John Lehman signed off on the message, "Secretary of the Marine Corps." It wasn't a mistake; that's the way he wanted it.

Further explanation was offered in an editor's note in Navy Times. The editor's note stated, "... officials in SecNav's office said — the Secretary often refers informally to himself as the 'Secretary of the Marine Corps.' An aide told Navy Times that it is a title Lehman is proud to use when he is with or talking to the green-suiters. The SecNav, he said, even wears a flight patch bearing the title when visiting Marine commands."

Practice makes perfect

by Sgt Corrina Martell

Making cakes, cleaning dress uniforms, selecting cake escorts and color guard details, planning and practicing for hours are required to prepare for the pomp and pageantry of a Marine Corps birthday.

Preparations for this year's 207th birthday were no different than those of years past. It took coordination, work and sweat and it all begins with meetings.

"The initial meetings for the balls begin in March or April of each year at Camp Smith," said Sergeant Major Willie F. Truwick, station sergeant major. "Guests of honor and bands must be selected, as well as photographers."

Truwick explained that several people were involved in the preparations. Staff Sergeant Keith Ward, Enlisted Club Manager, and Master Sergeant Russ Johnson, Staff Noncommissioned Officers' Club Manager, were responsible for the dinners. Decorations for the E-Club Ball were taken care of by the E-Club Advisory Group, headed by Sergeant Glenn Hall. The SNCO Wives Club provided decorations for the SNCO Ball.

"The Marines who participated in the ball ceremonies were mostly volunteers," said Truwick. "We had 23 ceremony participants for the E-Ball and 26 for the SNCO Ball. They put in about eight hours of practice before the ball."

Gunnery Sergeant Louis Stokes, Gallery Captain at Pless Hall, made the birthday cakes for both the Enlisted and SNCO Ball.

According to Truwick Graphic Arts also played a role in the birthday ball preparations. SSgt Jesus Torres, noncommissioned officer in charge of Graphic Arts, said that his section was responsible for designing the program cover and program for the balls, as well as laying out the text.

Joint Reproduction then spent approximately five days in printing the programs, according to Sgt Cheryl Ogles, repro worker.

In addition to the birthday balls, the Marine Corps Birthday Pageant, held Nov. 10 at 8 a.m., also required a great deal of work.

Sgt Maj John C. Lowery, brigade sergeant major, and project officer, Lieutenant Colonel James Brandon, brigade assistant G-3 officer, were responsible for the coordination of the pageant.

Lowery explained that the ceremonies involved approximately 130 people. All ceremony participants for the pageant, from the color guard to guidon bearers were selected for their professionalism, according to Lowery.

"The actual pageant required a two week evolution," said Lowery. "There were about 20 to 30 hours of practice."

According to Lowery, Marine uniforms from 1775 to the present were obtained from Camp Smith Protocol.

On the day of days, Nov. 10, Marine planning paid off. The work and sweat of preparation was replaced with square shoulders and a smile. The Marines danced all night.

MACS-2 wins 4th football title

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

Marine Air Control Squadron-2 swept the playoffs and upended the National League champions, Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron, 19-14 to claim their fourth consecutive flag football title on the Marine Corps' birthday.

Corporal Larry Titus rushed 11 yards for MACS-2's first touchdown, threw a 16-yard pass to Sergeant Steve Mobley for the second and place kicker, Lance Corporal Roger "Ox" Dunnun added two field goals to keep the Ducee ahead of SOMS for the entire game.

The game started as a defensive battle with neither team being able to gain significant yardage until MACS-2's quarterback, Sgt Tim Bougher found Sgt Ken Patterson for a 23-yard gain and a first down. Three plays later Bougher hit Titus for another first down on the 14-yard line.

Titus received the call again and caught the ball in the endzone, but a penalty denied the touchdown and the Ducee had to settle for a Dunnun field goal.

As SOMS started its offensive drive, Capt Danny Ball's second down pass was picked off by Sgt Michael Woodward who returned it to the SOMS 11-yardline. On the first play from scrimmage, Titus ran the ball in for the score. Dunnun added the extra point and MACS-2 led 10-0.

Ball had a tough day against the MACS-2 secondary. He was intercepted six times. But when he was on target, he completed passes like a 40-yarder to Lance Corporal J.B. Thomas and a touchdown pass to Sgt Robert Williams.

Cpl Wayne Hall's interception on the first play in the second half set up the Ducee's second touchdown. On second down and with the ball on the SOMS 8-yardline, Bougher threw a screen pass to Titus who looked into the endzone and found Mobley wide open. Dunnun's extra point attempt failed, but MACS-2 maintained a comfortable lead, 16-7.

Ball marched his team down to the 2-yardline with 18 minutes left in the game. But on third down, Woodward intercepted his second pass of the game. As Bougher faded back into his pocket, his pass was picked off by Engineman Third Class Baron Murray who returned it eight yards for a SOMS touchdown. Ball added the extra point and MACS-2's lead was narrowed to two points, 16-14.

After Bougher completed a 62-yard pass play to Woodward, MACS-2 was on the verge of scoring again. With the ball on the 2-yardline Sgt Scott Wright's touchdown was called back and MACS-2 added an insurance field goal making the score 19-14.

MACS-2's coach, Chief Warrant Officer-2 Jim McClelland was a little disappointed in the officiating and said, "the penalties took the enjoyment out of it, but we played well. We're just happy as hell to win our fourth championship."

Captain of the team, Sgt Mitch Earle, who has been with the championship team for the past four years, said, "We deserved it. Everybody said Ducee was going down, but we showed them. We're going straight thru Camp Smith (referring to the HAMC flag football championships scheduled to begin Saturday). Eighty percent of last year's team returned to play again this year. This defense is the best I've seen in four years and Camp Smith can't win if they can't score."

Navy Relief provides visiting nurse program for those in need

Navy Relief provides the services of a Visiting Nurse at the Hawaiian Auxiliary. Our nurse's are available to supplement military medical care with appropriate home nursing assistance on a non-emergency basis.

Most of our nurse's time is spent visiting new mothers and their infants. A new family member brings many changes and new responsibilities into the lives of military families. Knowing that someone is available to turn to for consultation and assistance is a reassuring comfort well worth having. In the event that further medical attention is required for mother or child, our nurse's close liaison with our medical facility will provide prompt referral and treatment.

The Visiting Nurse also visits retirees and elderly widows or widowers. While our nurse's do not do regular bedside nursing, she will teach techniques to family members so that patients remaining in their home environment can be cared for properly. Perhaps the most important benefit to our senior citizens is simply knowing that the Navy/Marine Corps community still has an interest in their well being. Our nurse's provide that precious link for us.

The service of all Society Visiting Nurses is free. Referrals are made by Navy medical officers, civilian health care providers, local Commands and interested friends and relatives. To request a visit from our nurses, please call 423-1314. Since our nurses spend most of the day on the road, your request will be recorded by a Society volunteer and our nurses will return your call within a day.

Don't stop and die, push on

by MSgt Julian R. Mills

As an assignment for the next class, an English professor gave his students the following creative writing topic: "Dying in the First Alcove."

The students, very confused about what the professor expected, asked him to explain his assignment. He said that some people have the potential to do great things in life but choose to stop in the first alcove of life and die there. They limit themselves to just one nook when they could enjoy the entire house.

Many people's lives are like this — they have the ability to be much more than they are, yet they seem content to stop and die without fulfilling their ultimate potential. They could do more for themselves and for others if they would just leave that first alcove.

The dictionary states that an alcove can be a breakfast nook. Some people desire to remain in the breakfast nook of life rather than venturing out into the hallway, living room or even the recreation room. While they are in the breakfast nook they are constantly feeding themselves and getting fat by themselves when they could go out and share their blessing with others.

There are many who remain in the first alcove because of illness and disease. They have not been able to proceed out into the fuller, richer rooms of life. Yet, there are persons like Helen Keller who, despite her handicaps, chose to venture into the more beautiful areas of sharing, thus aiding other persons who were blind, deaf and mute with a path to follow.

Some people, unlike Helen Keller, prefer to keep their faith in the first alcove. Faith can be the driving force that inspires us to leave that first alcove. Faith can help us enjoy the benefits of life. But the Bible says: "Faith without works is dead." Thus, individuals who claim to have faith but do not apply it in their lives find themselves remaining in the first alcove.

Try having faith in others. Trust them — it could help you take that first step outside the first alcove.

Carrier of the Week

Teresa Phillips

This week's cute and active "Carrier of the Week" is 11-year-old Teresa Phillips. Teresa was born in North Carolina, and lived in Virginia before "going Hawaiian" with her family over two years ago.

"I've delivered the Hawaii Marine for nearly three months now," Teresa notes, "and I like my job best when the people pay for my service!" she laughs.

Teresa attends Mokapu Elementary, where reading is her favorite time-filler, and where she made the decision to become an elementary school teacher someday.

Residents along South Lawrence and Hanson Circle, watch for this dedicated and helpful young lady — Teresa Phillips — Hawaii Marines' "Carrier of the Week." Good luck, Teresa!

McDONALD'S ASTOUNDING HAMBURGER STATISTICS

Enough shakes to wash down 18 billion hamburgers will fill every gas tank in the U.S. and that doesn't even include the countless gallons of soft drinks and coffee consumed at McDonald's.

TURN YOUR TV INTO A TELEPHONE

And now for an incredible difference in remote controls only Zenith can offer: Computer Space Command with Advanced Space Phone in Model SY2541X. Lets you make and receive phone calls through your Zenith TV. Even lets you store two 13-digit telephone numbers for automatic dialing any time!

Navy squadron conducts anti-submarine training

Squadron VS-33 from Naval Air Station, North Island, Calif., arrived here Nov. 10 to conduct training exercises at the Pacific Missile Range Facility, Barking Sands, Kauai.

The squadron is comprised of 10 Anti-Submarine Warfare Aircraft, (S3-A Viking) five of which are here, and are capable of detecting submarines under the water, according to Lieutenant Norm Hansen, pilot. "We'll be practicing torpedo delivery and mining tactics," explained Hansen. The exercises began Monday and will end Friday.

The Viking, 8 years old, has four seats and is equipped with Sonobuoys that can monitor sounds of submarines below water surface. "We've had 100,000 accident free hours since flying the Viking," Hansen said, "and our squadron has gone 20 years also accident free."

Squadron VS-33 has been to Hawaii before, but this is the first time they've been to the air station. "We love it here," said Hansen. "And we'll really hate to go." The Squadron leaves Nov. 22.
