3rd Marines celebrate 66th birthday

It was 66 years ago Dec. 20 that Marine detachments from U.S. ships belonging to the Atlantic Fleet formed the original 3d Marines. The ships were at anchor in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The year was 1916 and World War I was in full swing.

Until 1922 the regiment served in Mexico and the Dominican Republic. Following the war, the 3d Marines was redesignated as a reserve unit and stationed in San Francisco. The regiment disbanded in December 1937.

Due to the increased requirement for Marines during World War II, the Corps expanded its numbers. As a part of this expansion program the 3d Marines was reactivated on June 16, 1942 at New River, N. C.

Throughout the war the regiment fought on many Pacific islands and took part in memorable battles such as Bougainville and Guam. In fact, it was during those two battles that a sergeant and two privates first class were awarded Medals of Honor. After the war the regiment deployed to assist the Chinese Nationalist Forces against the communists.

The American involvement in the Korean Conflict resulted in the regiment training in Okinawa, Japan and Hawaii. Elements of the 3d Marines were used to form the 1st Provisional Marine Air/Ground Task Force, forerunner of today's 1st Marine Brigade.

Elements of the regiment moved to Vietnam in 1965 to provide security for the air base at Danang. While in Vietnam, six members of the regiment received Medals of Honor including Private First Class James Anderson, in whose honor the 3d Marines' dining facility is named.

Following Vietnam the regiment was attached to the 5th Marine Amphibious Brigade at Camp Pendleton, Calif. In early 1971, it was transferred to the 1st Marine Division. But the stay was for only two months. In June the regiment moved to Marine Corps Air Station Kaneohe Bay to become the ground element of the 1st Marine Brigade.

Today, the 3d Marines remain unique in several ways. It is the largest Marine Corps regiment. It is the only regimental-sized unit in the Corps to have artillery, reconnaissance and an amphibious assault element as organic parts of its organization. And, it is the only Marine Corps combat unit to both live and continuously train with an air element.

The regiment's 66th year has had many highlights. Colonel H. J. M. Radcliffe took command in August. Elements of the regiment took part in training exercises Team Spirit-82, Kangaroo-IV, RIMPAC-82, Bead Crystal, and Kernel Usher. Additionally, the regiment maintained a combat ready battalion landing team in the Western Pacific and Indian Ocean as a component of the 31st Marine Amphibious Unit, known as the "cutting edge" of Marine forces in the Pacific.

Always ready, constantly willing and able, the 3d Marines stand prepared today even as their predecessors did at Guantanamo Bay 66 years ago.

Delinquent student loans

Servicemembers could lose up to 25% of pay

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

The Department of Education has announced another system for collecting delinquent student loans.

Their target is the 46,860 federal employees including the 30,000 military members who have defaulted on some 50,393 outstanding debts.

According to the Navy Times, servicemen could have 15 percent of their pay deducted, or with a court order, 25 percent of their wages could be collected to pay back the $42 million they owe in student loans.

Earlier this year, to demonstrate the seriousness of the problem, the government repossessed cars of defaulters until they had made arrangements to pay back their outstanding debts. Now, Uncle Sam has chosen a more direct route in recovering his money, deducting it straight from debtors pay checks.

Sen. Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) announced in a Dec. 6 press conference that all outstanding bad debts owed to the government total $40 billion. Percy's Debt Collection Act of 1982 gives the government the power to dock employee's pay, to use computers and Internal Revenue Service records to find "deadbeats", and to send bad debts to collection agencies.

Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell, said in the same conference, that 14,549 loans worth almost $19 million are held by active duty military, 12,645 reservists account for $17.3 million and 4,690 military retirees are responsible for $5.1 million in student loans.

An education official said that almost all of the defaulters have been contacted and refuse to pay. His agency will give them three options: they can voluntarily get into a payment status; lose 15 percent (of their take-home pay), or go to court with the possibility of losing 25 percent of their pay.

Bell said the loans are in the form of Federally Insured Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans, National Direct and Defense Student Loans as well as Health Profession Student Loans and Nursing Student Loans.

Qualified military and DoD people can defer the repayment of these loans but only up to the first three years of service. People in financial trouble can arrange to pay off their loans at reduced rates.

Warning letters were sent out Dec. 6, 7 and 8 notifying defaulters that they must start making payments within 60 days of the date of the letter. If a debtor still refuses to pay, the monies could be taken from paychecks as early as April.

Corps challenges drunken driving

Drink and drive?

Sounds fine to me.

by Sgt Pepper Davis

The Marine Corps has won a lot of campaigns but it's now engaged in a most treacherous battle: the campaign against drunk and drugged driving.

"In the two-year period ending this holiday season, as many Americans will have been killed as a result of drunk drivers and drivers who use illegal drugs, as were killed during the war in Vietnam," stated the Commandant of the Marine Corps in a message to all Marines.

Addressing the problem of drunk and drugged driving among leathernecks, the Commandant called it, "a major initiative that will be the subject of a more comprehensive policy in directives to be issued in the near future." He said existing driving laws must be strictly enforced and emphasized during the holidays, "and vigorously pursued as a matter of course."

Lieutenant General John K. Davis, commanding general, Fleet Marine Force Pacific, is also adamant about driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs. He stressed that local Marine commanders should put forth every effort to highlight the importance of safe driving not only during the holidays, but as a matter of regularity.

"Casual warnings on Friday afternoons to 'drive safely during the weekend' will not suffice. Marines quickly interpret such comments as being a 'cover your six measure.' Lip service does little or nothing because concern and interest in the individual welfare of our Marines is not conveyed," he said.

LtGen. Davis further commented that offenders of the drinking and driving laws should be dealt with accordingly, and not allowed to think their actions are condoned.

"Marines who are cited for improperly operating their vehicles either on or off base must be singled out and counseled/disciplined... the intent of our actions remains unchanged - to preserve our most precious commodity, our Marines."

Expanding the responsibility of safe driving the Commandant said: "(Marines), their dependents and Marine Corps civilian employees must be made aware of the waste of human life and property caused by driving under the influence of alcohol and illegal drugs."

Christmas comes early

Reservists brighten children's lives

The snow may have looked a lot like rain and Santa Claus may have arrived by helicopter, instead of the usual reindeer-drawn sleigh, but it was Christmas just the same, Dec. 17, for the children of Mauna Loa on the island of Molokai.

Leathernecks of Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-463 joined forces with the Marine Reservists from 4th Force Reconnaissance Company in the final phase of the annual Marine Corps Reserve Toys For Tots campaign. They delivered the toys.

Toys were delivered to nearly 200 orphaned and underprivileged children on Molokai. In addition, toys were delivered to needy children on Oahu and for the first time, approximately 500 toys were flown to the storm-damaged island of Kauai.

Every year, Marine Reservists collect, repair and distribute new and slightly used toys to needy children around the world. This year approximately 10,000 toys were collected by reservists here for the islands' needy children.

The Volunteer Information Referral Service screens applicants and determines which families are eligible for the toys. The number and type of toys given to the children is determined by the reservists, with a little help from the families, and is based on the individual family's needs. For example, families with six or more children are eligible for a bicycle.

For the third year, the children of Mauna Loa were selected to participate in the Toys For Tots Program because of the large number of orphaned and deserted children living there. Although the toys were a little late arriving and the rain was a little cold and miserable, the children didn't seem to mind at all.

"It was worth the wait," said Susan Miller, whose 3-year-old son, Aaron, received a drum. "The kids got so excited when the helicopter finally landed. You just can't go wrong with toys and kids."

The Molokai Toys For Tots Program was coordinated with the help of Mike Shelton, pastor of the Baptist Church in Mauna Loa.

"This is fantastic," said Diane Adachi, mother of two boys and a girl. "So many of these kids just don't have anything. The kids really appreciate it." Needy children up to the age of 12 were eligible for a Christmas present from Santa.

According to Evelyn Stevenson who initiated the program on Molokai three years ago, "It's the greatest thing that ever happened to Molokai. The adults around here actually tell the children that there is no Santa Claus because they know that they can't afford to buy any toys." Stevenson and her husband, retired Master Sergeant Jim Stevenson, operate the Marine Training Support Facility on Molokai, 16 miles from Mauna Loa.

"We've lived half way around the world and all over the islands," said Mrs. Stevenson, "and we feel that this is truly the most humanitarian feat we've ever seen undertaken."

Gunnery Sergeant David Kalama, platoon sergeant for the Reconnaissance Indoctrination Platoon, played a very important part in this year's program. Kalama donned a red suit and white beard to impersonate Santa Claus and hand out the toys.

"I really feel good about this," said Kalama. "I enjoyed it. This was my first time as Santa. Just looking at the kids' faces... it's really nice."

Kalama, a resident of Kailua, has been in the reserves just wish more people would get involved by donating toys," he added.

The reservists have several ways of collecting toys from the civilian and military communities. Collection boxes were located throughout the islands, at all Jack-in-the-Box locations and the Aikahi Branch of the Bank of Hawaii.

The Volunteer Information Referral Service donated $4,000 to the Toys For Tots Program and the public accounting firm of Coopers and Lybrand hosted a party that netted more than 1,700 toys. Pacific Resources also hosted one of several parties. Three tennis tournaments, directed and hosted by Tom Sugita, generated about $1,000, according to First Lieutenant Joe McHoney, public affairs officer for 4th Force Recon, and coordinator for this year's Toys For Tots Program.

A HELO FOR A SLEIGH - Santa Claus (Reserve Gunnery Sergeant David Kalama) and Staff Sergeant Paul Forney, 4th Force Reconnaissance Company, hand out toys from the back of a UH-1N Huey. Marines

In addition to the hard work of the reservists, according to McHoney, the Inspector and Instructor Staff contributed immeasurably.

"The pay-off for all the hard work of the Reserve Marines and the I&I Staff is seen when the toys are distributed," said McHoney.

The Toys For Tots Program began in 1947 as the brainchild of Marine reserve Major Bill Hendricks, a public relations from Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-463 flew Santa and the toys to Molokai Dec. 17, as part of the annual Marine Corps Reserve Toys For Tots Campaign.

executive with Warner Brothers Studios in Burbank, Calif. Originally, it was a local program for children who had lost their fathers during World War II. It was just a matter of time before the program swept the nation and in 1959, Toys For Tots went international.

Every year a national celebrity chairperson hosts the Toys For Tots Campaign. This year, Nancy Reagan and Henry Winkler are sharing the job. Al Harrington, the South Pacific Man, is this year's local Celebrity Chairman.

Intelligence Brief

M1937 82-mm Mortar. The M1937 has been widely used since the early days of World War II. It can be trigger fired by lanyard or drop fired. In recent years a safety device has been fitted to the muzzle to prevent double loading. The M1937 has been replaced in some units by the M1943 120-mm mortar. This mortar can be broken down into its three major components (tube, baseplate, and bipod) and transported in a light truck or in an APC; it can also be carried by the crew.

Marines plight with boredom

by Sgt Inez J. Stoner

For hundreds of years, Marines have been battling enemies with an array of weaponry. Today, a Marine's most fearsome enemy is often boredom and the weapon he chooses to fight it with can be as deadly as any known to man.

"A lot of Marines are just sitting around the barracks getting bored," said Sergeant John Bloodworth, drug and alcohol noncommissioned officer for Headquarters Company, 3d Marines. "If we can give them some type of lead about things to do, maybe they won't get into drugs."

It was for this reason that the 26-year-old Marine from Cambridge, Mass. came up with his program "Alternatives to Drugs."

"After reading the Commandant's policy on drugs, I felt they needed something to keep their time occupied while off duty," explained Bloodworth. "That's when I came up with the Alternatives to Drugs Program." Bloodworth began organizing the program at the end of August. "It's been going strong ever since," he said.

The Alternatives to Drugs Program covers a wide scope of activities including a comprehensive athletics program, a senior citizen visiting program and a bi-weekly newsletter.

Since the inception of the program, Bloodworth has organized several athletic events and tournaments within the company. So far, the Marines have competed for trophies in weightlifting, pool and basketball. A pingpong tournament is planned for January and a bowling tournament is on the list of ideas. Company-size field meets are also arranged by Bloodworth.

"Participation has been very good," he said. "Each section gives good support and we get a lot of support from the wives. Many of the games are held in the evening after work."

A suggestion box, established by Bloodworth, allows Marines within the company to ask questions or make comments or suggestions anonymously. Answers from the first sergeant or the commanding officer are then printed in a newsletter that comes out every two weeks. The newsletter contains information on the company and recognizes individuals for events like promotions and reenlistments. Entertainment and outings offered by Special Services are mentioned in the newsletter along with information on drug and alcohol abuse.

"So many people walk around here saying that they're bored and there's nothing to do," Bloodworth said. "Basically, it's because they don't know where to look. The individual Marine is not going to go out and organize something on his own," he continued. "They just need a boost."

Another aspect of the program involves senior citizens within the community. Approximately once a month, volunteers from the company visit senior citizens in the community. In the past, the Marines escorted residents of the Pohai Nani retirement and convalescent home to a Halloween party.

"Those who have been participating in the program have not had the problems with drugs since," said Bloodworth. "I have seen evidence where the program has worked," he continued. "They haven't had the time to get involved with drugs."

Bloodworth is now working on the idea of organizing a large dinner party for the Marines and their wives and dates. It's an idea that he hopes will allow the noncommissioned officers and the staff noncommissioned officers to get to know the younger Marines in the company. "It's better than just working with them," said Bloodworth. "Sometimes, by knowing the individual, we can know what he might be having problems with. We may be able to find some of the problem areas. "I'm always looking for areas where more people would be interested and more people will want to participate," he said. "I want to make this program even more effective than it is right now."

Dr. Tom Ditzler, director of the Counseling and Assistance Center here, had his comments about Bloodworth's Alternatives to Drugs Program. "Isn't it a shame more people aren't doing it," he said. "We applaud his efforts. What he (Bloodworth) is doing is the only thing I know of that is apt to stimulate change. When you take the drugs away, you better offer them something else instead."

According to Ditzler, this long-term prevention-oriented program is the first line of defense. According to Bloodworth, it gives them more time to benefit themselves and less time to become involved in drugs.

EDITORIAL / OPINION

Being a Marine calls for pride and tradition

by SSgt Bob Torres

I came aboard the air station recently and, as I looked around, I saw sights that disturbed me. At first I was angry, then I became sad.

It had to do with being a Marine, about things called pride and tradition.

That's what disturbed me. I saw Marines walking around with their hands in their pockets, chewing gum in uniform. I saw Marines holding hands with their wives or girl friends. I saw Marines walking around with cigarettes in their mouths. And, I was angry.

I went around telling Marines to get squared away, to polish their boots. Some looked like they had never received a spit-shine, much less have a fresh layer of Kiwi in the past couple of days. I saw Marines needing haircuts. That's when I got sad. I wondered how they felt, walking around knowing they needed haircuts.

I've known some damned good Marines who gave their lives proudly and bravely, because they felt privileged to wear the Marine uniform. They joined the Marine Corps because they believed in the things I'm talking about — pride, tradition, honor — something called "esprit de corps" that we all found out about in a place called boot camp.

I've seen Marines who brought a welcome smile to my face. They were women. Yes, some of them looked very proud to wear the uniform. Maybe, because they realize that for every billet that is currently available in the Marine Corps, there are four young women out there who would like to be a Marine.

But then again, I saw whose hair needed a little more attention. I saw a couple who looked like they could and should have spent a little more time with the iron.

Don't get me wrong, I didn't see a whole group of Marines who looked like they needed a boot camp refresher course, or needed instructions on how the uniform is supposed to be worn. But I did see some, and that's what I'm talking about.

I've seen Marines walk right past an officer and neglect to salute. What happened to the common courtesy of saluting all officers in uniform? Are we losing some of our traditions?

No, I say we live tradition. What we do today will be history tomorrow. The way we conduct ourselves as Marines, portray ourselves to our peers, junior troops and to civilians is what the Marine Corps is today.

When we walk down the streets of Kaneohe, Kailua or Waikiki, do we stand proud and let people know that we're Marines? Or, because of some antics of "other" Marines, would we just as soon people did not recognize us as Marines?

Take a moment to think about what you could have done this morning to enhance your Marine Corps appearance. What can you do today to let someone know that you're proud to wear the uniform? Tell someone today that you're proud to be a Marine, and mean it. After all, no one made you be a Marine, you volunteered!

THE SAD SACK

From WWII through the 1980s, the military used the "threat" technique in its information films. The horrors of venereal disease became a classic of genre. In 1943 cartoonist George Baker in YANK magazine presented one soldier's reaction to such a movie.

SGT GEORGE BAKER

Scare tactics don't always work

Scare tactics and strong threats are relatively ineffective in getting people to change their unsafe habits. So say communications experts who evaluate individual and group responses to accident prevention programs.

In the past, many people felt that films and posters which realistically depicted the violent aftermath of accidents — crushed vehicles, ruined equipment and painful cries of injured survivors — aroused fear and thus motivated viewers into "safe" behavior. During the 1950s and 1960s, for example, many military recruits were well-schooled in the danger of infectious social diseases through exposure to films showing horribly diseased tissue and crippling deformities. The more viewers became sick, the more successful the film was judged to be.

But educators and researchers have changed these assumptions. They observed that if such forms of communications are effective, then attitudes, motivations and actions should reflect changes in the desired directions — safer driving and improved work habits, for example.

Various follow-up studies of groups who had been subjected to lectures and illustrations of different emotional appeal showed that persons who heard the least threatening presentation evidenced the greatest conformity to suggested recommendations. In contrast, the groups exposed to the most frightening lectures and illustrations showed the least change from previous practices. Even a year later, these differences still existed.

Researchers generally concluded that strong threat appeals were considerably less effective than mild threat appeals. The reason seems to be that when fear is strongly aroused, it is associated with strong anxiety which causes many people to protect themselves, unconsciously, by "tuning out" the threat of harm, resulting in their taking no protective or preventive action.

Studies also show that communications are most effective when their informational content provides a means for threat reduction. The use of how-to approaches serves as reassurance and helps direct mildly aroused emotions into the desired or safe course of action. More recently, tests indicate that an effective safety message is one that is basically factual and has some content of serious emotion presented in a novel way.

Thus, the message for persons planning or involved in safety programs: explicit fear-arousing messages are counterproductive to safety efforts. Use materials which portray accidents and their consequences in a sensitive manner, and offer simple, easily-understood solutions so that such situations can be avoided.

Child abuse is the crime

Adults may not recognize child neglect

by Sgt Greg Berry

The victims are young and innocent. They sometimes don't even know they're victims because their attackers are people they know and trust.

The crime is child abuse. Abused and neglected children are easily seen as victims, but there are other victims of child abuse — the parents.

Child abuse is a crime of victims. Unfortunately, the victims seldom seek help on their own.

Children naturally love their parents, and for this reason they may not realize they are being abused. Adults may not recognize that they are abusing or neglecting their children, and in the case of infants, the little ones certainly can't seek help on their own.

For those reasons it is the moral responsibility of every adult to help the victims of child abuse.

The biggest problem is defining child abuse. A child who is bruised from beatings, burnt with cigarettes, and found wandering the streets is definitely abused. But what about a child who is spanked and sent to bed without supper? Where is the line drawn between discipline and abuse?

There is no easy answer to this question.

According to the Department of Health and Human Services, in their publication "Child Protection in Military Communities," a child is a person younger than 18. An abused or neglected child is a child whose physical or mental health or welfare is harmed or threatened by the acts or omissions of the child's parent or person responsible for the child's welfare.

The causes of child abuse and neglect are as hard to pin down as its definition. The most constant common denominator, however, is a family heritage of violence. Adults who were abused as children are more likely to abuse their own children.

"Abused or neglected children may be impaired in self concept, ego competency, reality testing, defensive functioning and overall thought process."

The effects of child abuse are also numerous. Physical abuse produces everything from bruises to broken bones. Brain damage and even death has resulted from severe cases. Harder to recognize, but just as damaging, is emotional and mental damage.

"Abused or neglected children may be impaired in self concept, ego competency, reality testing, defensive functioning and overall thought processes," according to the Health Department publication. "They also often have a higher level of aggression, anxiety, low impulse control, and self-destructiveness."

Both victims of child abuse, the kids and their abusers, need help. Counseling family planning, medical and self-support services are available to help these families.

The Family Service Center here is ready and willing to help families in need, but they can't help unless they know a family needs help.

If child abuse or neglect is suspected, call Child Protective Services at 947-8650. CPS is a state agency that investigates suspected child abuse. Once a suspected case is confirmed here, the Family Service Center steps in to help.

A special team working with the Military Family Advocacy Program here works with families to help alleviate the problems that cause child abuse and neglect. They can be reached by calling 257-3389.

If someone sees a case of child abuse in progress, then the Military Police should be called to the scene. The quicker help arrives, the better.

Some people may think that child abuse is a problem only in the civilian world. More than 45 cases of child abuse and neglect are treated each year at the medical facility here. No one knows the number of unreported cases.

Protect the young and innocent. Report child abuse.

Street Scoop

If you had the power, what punishment would you give to a child abuser?

Cpl Kevin Biddle, CommSpt-Co: "I think that anyone who abuses a small child should have a mandatory prison sentence of no less than five years."

Karen Biddle, Dependent: "At least 10 years hard labor."

Sgt Richard Martin II, H&HS: "Same as the child received or worse."

GySgt Michael Lundmark, H&SCo, 1/3: "It would depend on the degree of abuse, but the death penalty would not be harsh enough in extreme cases of child abuse."

LCpl Marlon Brown, Hq, 1/12: "I think I would give them time in jail and make them go see a psychiatrist."

Sally Gerian, Dependent: "The punishment I would give a child abuser is to have him or her seek mental help so they could understand the nature of their crime. Then they would also have to serve time in prison and make amends to the child (mental help for child and a better environment)."

Dependent lauded for excellence

by Sgt Inez J. Stoner

The wife of First Lieutenant John Chester, assistant education officer here, has been named the University of Hawaii's winner of the George C. Marshall ROTC Award for 1982-83.

Erin Chester, a Distinguished Military Student with a grade point average of 3.8, is majoring in nursing. She will receive her commission as a reserve officer in the Army's Nursing Corps next May.

"I'm really honored by this,"

said Chester. "My goal for the longest time has been to be an officer."

Gen Marshall, the 1953 recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, served as the Army Chief of Staff during World War II, as Secretary of State during the Truman presidency and as Secretary of Defense. The Marshall Award was established in 1976 and is sponsored by the U.S. Army and the George C. Marshall Research Foundation.

The award is presented each year to the senior ROTC cadet with the most outstanding leadership qualities and excellence in academic and military studies.

In addition to the Gen Marshall Award, Chester received the Department of the Army's Superior Cadet Award during her freshman year and hopes to win it again this year.

Chester served as a cadet lieutenant colonel and executive officer of the Corps of Cadets during the fall semester at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. She will attend the Annual Awards Conference in Lexington, Va. next April.

GETTING READY FOR MID-TERMS — Erin Chester, wife of Marine First Lieutenant John Chester, prepares for mid-term finals at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. WHAT IS BIBLE CALL?

Bible Call is a free public service Religious Information Library consisting of hundreds of different five-minute tape recorded messages on a wide variety of Bible subjects.

The Library is arranged to provide a means by which the public can quickly and accurately locate Bible information on almost any important topic.

This may be done by simply calling and asking the tape librarian to play a recording on any of the subjects listed.

HELPFUL AIDS

This advertisement is important to your being able to effectively use this service, since it contains a list of all the subjects which are currently available.

A DAILY BIBLE STUDY GUIDE

In addition to calling about specific subjects the Bible Call Tape Library may also be used as an effective Daily Bible Study Guide. Just call for a different tape each day until all of the subjects have been studied.

G.I. Bill termination

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There have been several recent attempts in Congress to eliminate the Dec. 31, 1989 termination date for educational benefits under the Vietnam-era G.I. Bill. But officials here say there appears to be little hope the termination date will be extended or repealed anytime soon.

As a result, Marines who are eligible for benefits (those who enlisted before Jan. 1, 1977) must use them within the next seven years or lose them.

The Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) has been the education program available for Marines since 1977. This program, however, has not been accepted as well or used as much as the Vietnam-era G.I. Bill.

A proposed new G.I. Bill (H.R. 1400) has received fairly strong support in the House of Representatives and is now awaiting floor action. This may come during the upcoming "lame duck" session. A Senate version of a new G.I. Bill is not expected to surface before next year.

Some basic provisions of the House Bill include:

- an educational program for active and reserve members;
- basic benefits funded by the Veterans' Administration;
- in-service use; and
- a requirement for honorable service.

Despite the best efforts of some legislators, Marines should not count on seeing a new G.I. Bill in the near future. With the services currently meeting their end-strength goals, and with the current economic situation, a new educational benefits program is not considered by some to be a top priority.

Therefore, those active duty, Reserve, retired and former Marines who joined the Corps before Jan. 1, 1977, should consider taking full advantage of the Vietnam-era G.I. Bill educational benefits open to them.

At present, various programs are available to eligible veterans seeking educational training. Institutions within the U.S. providing education at the elementary school level or above may be approved for training through the G.I. Bill program. They include public or private elementary and secondary schools; vocational, correspondence, business and flight schools; colleges; universities; professional, scientific and technical institutions; and on-the-job, farm cooperative and apprenticeship programs.

Qualified Marines on active duty may also attend school part-time and receive an allowance from the V.A. However, G.I. Bill educational benefits may not be used by Marines attending school full-time under formal Marine Corps degree completion programs.

For more information on G.I. Bill educational benefits, contact your local education office or the Veterans Administration.

Re-installing emission control

WASHINGTON — Marines returning from an overseas tour with an American-made car should pay special attention to refitting their automobile to meet U.S. emission control standards.

According to the Military Traffic Management Command, this generally involves re-installing emission control components (catalytic converter, oxygen sensor, etc.) that were removed when the car was shipped overseas and adjusting the engine to the manufacturer's original specifications.

Anyone returning to the U.S. from overseas areas — except Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Mexico or Canada — must have the components reinstalled near the overseas departure point or in the U.S., upon arrival. If the original components have ever been operated with leaded gasoline, new parts must be obtained.

If components are not reinstalled overseas, they must be shipped in the vehicle to obtain a customs release. Members then have five days to have parts reinstalled and certified.

Servicemembers who need new catalytic converters for cars built by Ford Motor Company should contact the Ford Export Division prior to their return. The company offers converters for overseas personnel at a considerable discount. Year, make, engine size and vehicle identification number should be included in your request. Information on the special program can be obtained from the Ford Export Division, 153 Halsey Street, Newark, N.J. 07102.

Additional information on shipping privately-owned vehicles can be obtained from your local household goods office or supply office.

Scrooge would never approve this!

by Sgt Greg Berry

"Scrooge would never approve of this," exclaimed the dour little elf as he flew into the night leaving a trail of broken stars.

The elf reported to his master, and Scrooge became very upset at the news. "Bah, humbug," he muttered to himself, but he knew there was nothing he could do. The Christmas spirit described by the elf was undefeatable.

The elf flew back into the night. Homes and offices that radiated with warmth sent chills down his tiny spine. Cheerful greetings assaulted his ears and smiling faces made the corners of his mouth drop further toward his chin. There wasn't anything disturbing enough to cheer him.

The area had been racked by a hurricane just before Thanksgiving, but the traditional bird still found its way to numerous tables. Now the Christmas spirit was upon the land and the elf could do nothing to stop the cheer.

This Christmas would be better than ever for the Marines, sailors and their families here.

Christmas host program makes Marines spirits bright

by SSgt Bob Torres

For younger Marines, being away from home, even in a place like Hawaii, can be lonesome. A lot of acquaintances and people have parties, especially during the holiday season, but it's a long way from home.

So, with the help of interested civilians in the area, some Marines are venturing into the communities and deciding that even here, there are people who care. Part of it has to do with a program known as the Christmas Host Program.

Recently, 10 Marines from the air station were invited to join the Kailua Senior Citizens for their annual Christmas program at the Mid-Pacific Country Club.

"I thought it was a really warm and friendly gathering," related Lance Corporal Beau Cross, a native of La Hambra, Calif. "Some of the people I was sitting with bragged about their family members who were in the Marine Corps. It was nice to be invited again for their next function. I was surprised at how friendly everyone was." He added with a smile, "It was really good food, too."

This is the first Christmas in the Marine Corps for Private First Class Don Atkins from Augusta, Ga. "I think it's outstanding (the host program). The people seemed to act young. They said one of the best things about this year's program was having Marines there. I'd like to go again."

Lance Corporal Kim Harris from Dallas was emphatic about the reception he received from the senior citizens. "The people were contagious. I know from past experiences that a lot of times, they are very quiet. I have some grandparents and I thought it would be nice to visit with someone like them. These people were very enthusiastic. It enables you to communicate through the generation gap."

"One of the ladies I was sitting with surprised me," expressed LCpl. Harris, with a touch of pride. "She had a lot of trust in me. She had a package for someone at the air station. When she asked if I knew him, and I said yes, she asked me to give it to him. I felt good about her trusting me like that. It's a nice feeling."

It's not just the senior citizens who would like to have Marines join them for Christmas. Several people who wanted to have Marines over for Thanksgiving are anxious to have them over for Christmas, because Hurricane Iwa upset their plans.

"We had three Marines over last year," remarked Lee Keller, who has asked that six Marines join her at home in Honolulu for Christmas. "We also had some people from Australia. Everyone ate dinner and we talked and sang songs from home. Everyone had a good time. Our guests were friendly and I really enjoy having people come over and join us."

"Going out for Christmas dinner gives you a chance to get away from the barracks," said PFC Atkins. "It gives you a chance to get with some of the people out there, and have dinner with them. They make you feel comfortable."

"There was one lady who invited me over for Christmas dinner," said PFC Norm Jacobson from Los Angeles. "She said that her husband had been in the Marine Corps and that she thought that I'd get along well with him. She gave me her phone number to come over. It's nice to get away and socialize, especially when you're invited because you're a Marine."

For more information about the Christmas Host Program, contact your sergeant major.

BACK ON THE MAINLAND — Sergeant Mario Vasquez relays some of the things that his family does for Christmas. Carrier of the Week

Marie Thomas

This week's Hawaii Marine "Carrier of the Week" is Marie Thomas. Marie was born in California, and moved here only 14 months ago. "I became a carrier about three months ago," she notes, "and I really like seeing the smiles on people's faces when I give them their paper."

Marie is a 5th grader at Mokapu Elementary School where her favorite subject is math. Someday, being a doctor is what Marie would like to do, and she's preparing for a career helping people right now. "I'm active in Girl Scouts," she says, "and we do a lot for our community."

Marie is saving her money to buy a car, so most of her spare time is spent doing things that don't cost anything. "I like to play softball and spend as much time outside as I can," she says.

Nation's top amateur athletes compete in Gymfest

The nation's top college and club women's gymnastics teams will compete in the Seventh Annual Aloha Gymfest at Kailua High School Gym Dec. 28 and 29.

The University Division will have the nation's 2nd, 5th and 8th ranked teams in competition. Outside of the national championships, this is the only place that all of these teams will be together in the same meet.

California State University, Fullerton, ranked 2nd in the nation, will defend its Aloha Gymfest title against strong competition from 5th ranked Arizona State University and 8th ranked University of Nebraska and Montana State University in competition which will begin at 7 p.m. Dec. 28. Women's college gymnastics is both a beautiful and dynamic sport in which the spirited team competition offers an exciting evening of gymnastics action.

from Canada, California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Florida, New Jersey and Hawaii.

The National Academy of Artistic Gymnastics was founded in 1973 by U.S. Olympic coach Dick Mulvihill and his wife, three-time Olympian Linda Metheny Mulvihill. A testimony to the excellence of this team is the number of Olympic gymnasts they have produced in their short history: 1980 U.S. Olympians Tracee Talavera and Julianne McNamara, 1976 and 1980 Canadian Olympian Karen Kelsall, 1976 U.S. Olympian Carrie Englert, 1976 Canadian Olympian Patti Rope. NAAG is not resting on these accomplishments and is looking to the future.

According to Dick Mulvihill, "One of the most exciting aspects of our National program is the extremely talented youngsters coming up in Class I and II."

While he didn't mention it, he should be very proud of his Elite teams which has captured the U.S. Team Championship for an unprecedented four years in a row. It is this caliber of gymnasts that will be seen in the Seventh Annual Aloha Gymfest. The club teams will compete Dec. 28 and 29 beginning at 11 a.m.

The top gymnasts from the club and university sessions will come together on Wednesday evening for the finals and compete for individual honors. The finals begin at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 29.

Admission to the Aloha Gymfest is by a modest donation ticket that can be obtained at the door of the Kailua High School Gym during the meet, or from the sponsoring Kokokahi Gym Team of Kailua/Kaneohe (235-6866 or P.O. Box 1247, Kailua, HI 96734). Free parking and a food concession will be available at the meet.

Plan to attend this meet which is unique in format and by far the biggest and best women's gymnastics meet of the year in Hawaii. This is a rare opportunity to see the nation's top gymnasts and teams in action here in Hawaii.

Marines dominate tri-service powerlifting

CAMP SMITH, Hawaii — The Special Services Department here sponsored the Tri-service Powerlifting Championships Dec. 12 and the Marines totally dominated the event.

Leathernecks won first places in five of the seven weight classes and second place in the other two.

Lance Corporal Kathy Elquist of Camp Smith was the only woman entered in the tournament and won her weight class (123 pounds).

Dave Schultz of the Air Force was named the most valuable lifter and fell 17 pounds short of tying the state record of 677 pounds in the deadlift.

The final results are:

Marine returns airline tickets

by Sgt Greg Berry

An envelope containing four airline tickets to Washington, D.C. was found and returned to the Scheduled Airlines Ticket Office Dec. 9. "If I lost something I would hope someone would return it," said Lance Corporal Jerry Miller, who found the tickets across the street from the Dishursing Office here. He was checking out of Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-24 and returning to civilian life in Honolulu.

Miller took his unusual find to SATO and gave the tickets to Hilda Wilcox, who said the tickets were worth more than $1,300. "Anyone could have used them," she said, adding that the person who lost them owed Miller a debt of gratitude.

When Wilcox contacted the person who had been issued the tickets, she learned that the tickets hadn't even been missed.

What prompts someone to turn their back on the old adage, "finders keepers, losers weepers?" Miller said, "No matter what you do, good or bad, it will come back to you sooner or later."

For additional information call 257-3520 or 257-3108.

Celebrate the advent of 1983 at the Hale Koa Hotel at your choice of not one or two, but three spectacular parties! The grand-daddy of them all will be held in the beautiful new Banyan Tree Show Room. New Year's Eve Magic With Ron Miyashiro & Friends will feature the best dancing music in all Waikiki. Ron Miyashiro and his incomparable combo have been playing to overflow crowds in the hotel's Warriors Lounge for more than a year. Featured will be vocal dynamo Caryl Challis, and making a guest appearance will be the talented Rebecca. Festivities will begin with a gourmet prime rib au jus dinner, before Ron, Caryl, and Rebecca present a fantastic show and terrific dance music. The night includes dinner, dancing, entertainment, party favors, New Year's champagne, gratuities, plus an unlimited number of standard cocktails.

New Year's Eve with a South Seas flavor will be held in the Waikiki Ballroom at the Polynesian New Year's Spectacular. A special edition of Tama's Polynesian Revue will lead the way into 1983 with color and excitement, Hawaiian-style. Included in the ticket price is a lavish Polynesian buffet dinner, music for dancing, dazzling Polynesian show, party favors, New Year's champagne, gratuities, and unlimited standard drinks.

And last but not least, the young at heart can dance their way into the new year at the New Year's Eve Rock Around The Clock. KKUA

Radio will provide a sensational light and sound show, and a live DJ will play Top 40's hits. No-host bars will be open throughout the night, and snacks and party favors are on the house.

Advance tickets for all New Year's Eve events are on sale now at the Hale Koa Activities Desk and all military ticket outlets on Oahu.

Paradise Park is pleased to present the well-known puppeteer and folksinger, Willy Claffin. Willy is back in Paradise to do another great puppet show at Paradise Park on Jan. 17 through 21 and Jan. 24 through 28, 1983 and also to do a television musical show starring the Krush and Andy Bumatai to be aired on Channel 9.

Willy will be doing two shows a day at Paradise Park and the public is welcome to join in on the fun. Come and see Willy in person at beautiful Paradise Park.

Admission: Adult $5.50
Children $3.

ELEGANT CHRISTMAS DINING IN THE HALE KOA DINING ROOM: Treat yourself to Christmas dinner in the award-winning Hale Koa Dining Room. A special Christmas menu will be featured with such entrees as Roast Tom Turkey and Baked Virginia Ham. All entrees will be served with an appetizer, soup, fresh vegetable and holiday dessert. Christmas dinner will be served from 5 to 9 p.m. Reservations are highly recommended; call 955-0555.
