Commandant of the Marine Corps' policy on minorities

(Editor's note: The following reprinted from ALMAR 311/93 dated Nov. 4, 1993.)

This is a message for Marines, for the sailors that serve with us, for our civilian Marines, and for the families of our Corps. It is my means of communicating to each of you.

Last Sunday, the television program "60 Minutes" presented a segment on the general subject of minority officers in the Marine Corps. Many of you are concerned about remarks that I made, and I understand your concern. Those remarks represented less than 90 seconds edited from a two hour on-camera interview. I want to clearly, and without editing, state Marine Corps policy and direction with regard to minorities in our Corps, and I want all of you to understand that this is not just Marine Corps policy, it is my policy as well ... both as an individual and as your Commandant.

Every Marine that wears the uniform, every sailor that serves with us, and every civilian that is employed by our Corps, has an equal opportunity to compete, to develop to his or her potential, and to move ahead in our Corps. This is the reality that we strive for each and every day in our Corps.

I am fully aware that our numbers of minority officers are not where we want them to be, even though we have made progress toward the goal of achieving an officer corps that more accurately resembles the racial and ethnic diversity of our great country. We intend to remedy this disparity. We have been taking actions to improve the accession, assignment and promotion of minority officers to achieve the goal of ensuring that our Corps represents the epitome of what equal opportunity is meant to be. Those actions will continue.

I truly regret that the remarks that "60 Minutes" chose to broadcast created the impression that minority officers do not possess the required skills to succeed as Marine officers. This is categorically incorrect and I do not now believe, nor have I ever believed this to be the case.

Our Corps is unique. Most of you have heard me say that in one form or another on many occasions. The pride in being a Marine, the confidence we have in our Corps, our faith in each other ... these are the strengths of our Corps. I look forward to a time when our current efforts result in a Corps that is even stronger because of its heightened diversity, even more respected because of its clearly stated policies of equal opportunity, and a true role model for America.

HMH-463 returns from Cambodia

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

A detachment of 45 Marines from Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-463 returned Tuesday from a 36-day joint field activity in Cambodia. The detachment was supporting a Joint Task Force Full Accounting (JTF-FA) team in search of Americans missing or otherwise unaccounted for from the Vietnam War. The Marines from HMH-463 provided helicopter support with three CH-53 Sea Stallion Helicopters.

The HMH-463 CH-53 helicopters provided support by transporting the teams into areas they were unable to get to because the location of the sites made it difficult for the JTF-FA team to get to them by vehicle or by foot. "Each day we sent out two aircraft, one went with the recovery team and the other went with the investigative team. Our Marines were also out there with the teams helping them dig and sift dirt," said Capt. Tim Flanagan, HMH-463 Operations Officer.

In total, twelve cases were covered by the JTF-FA. Ten out of the twelve cases were investigated for future excavation. While gathering information, two sites were excavated. Two other sites were excavated from prior investigations.

"Usually, first we go and gather information and then we send out a team to excavate the site," said Maj. Roger Overturf, JTF-FA public affairs representative. "While gathering information, the investigative team found two sites and excavated them."

Human remains were recovered at the sites excavated. The remains will be delivered to Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii (CILHI). There the remains will undergo analysis in an attempt to determine individual identity.

The mission of JTF-FA is to provide the fullest possible accounting for the 2,248 individuals still listed as missing or otherwise unaccounted for in Southwest Asia, 78 of whom are unaccounted for in Cambodia.

"The operation was very productive. We flew about three times more than we had anticipated," said Lt. Paul Ryan, a CH-53 pilot for HMH-463. "Everybody did outstanding work."

Marines from HMH-463 returned Tuesday from a mission in which they provided helicopter support for Joint Task Force-Full Accounting.

New Chairman of JCS visits Pacific

By Cpl. Aaron Martin
Staff Writer

The newly appointed chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff made a brief visit to Hawaii Nov. 4-5 in which he addressed several military issues, including the situation in North Korea.

Army General John M. Shalikashvili held a pre-departure plane side media opportunity at Hickam Air Force Base, prior to returning to Washington D.C. Friday at 8:45 a.m. This was his first press conference since his appointment.

The chairman had just completed meetings with Adm. Charles R. Larson, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Pacific Command and Secretary of Defense Les Aspin in Korea. Upon arriving in Hawaii to receive a briefing about the Pacific Command, which focused on the mission of Joint Task Force-Full Accounting, and included a visit to the Central Identification Laboratory.

During the press conference Gen. Shalikashvili fielded a variety of questions including the role of women in combat, the situation in Korea and the role of the Navy and Marines in the future.

Prior to questions from the media, the chairman spoke about the morale and mission of the military.

"I spoke with some of our men and women in uniform and I see them as a great source of pride, clearly the very best to ever wear America's uniform. You cannot meet with them or speak with them without sensing a pride, as well as a deep sense of responsibility," Gen. Shalikashvili said. "We should continue to do everything we possibly can to help support them. We often talk of readiness, which isn't just fixing ships or tanks, but making sure that the people are well taken care of. The care for all the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine personnel and their families is a responsibility I take very seriously."

Concern over the issue of downsizing the military in the Pacific was one issue Gen. Shalikashvili addressed.

"After conferring with Adm. Larson, I think the Pacific as a whole is over the major hurdles. There are still some difficult times ahead ... but through it we will be better than ever before. We must be very sensitive to the impact these changes make on civilian communities."

When questioned concerning the role of women in the military the chairman responded "We should do all we can to give women every opportunity. I think we all ought to take a great amount of pride in what has been done up to now.

During this process we must make sure that we don't over reach in those things which would detract from the combat readiness. I am satisfied we are on the right glide path and are opening as many jobs as possible with as many opportunities as we can."

Perhaps the most pressing issue he addressed pertained to the North Korean government's unwillingness to comply with inspections of their nuclear facilities. The International Atomic Energy Agency has been unable to conduct inspections of their facilities and this has caused great concern among senior military officials and was one of the concerns Gen. Shalikashvili addressed.

"In regards to North Korea there is justifiable reason for deep concern. They have taken the path of not being responsive to the nuclear safeguards... We must explore every diplomatic option

NQLB to talk safety

Joint Public Affairs Office

The Neighborhood Quality of Life Board meeting will be held a week earlier than usual because of the Thanksgiving holiday. The meeting will be held Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. in building 267, the Training and Audio Visual Center (TAVSC), in classroom 1. The meeting will last about two hours.

Representatives from the Station Post Office will be at the meeting to discuss proper procedures for mailing packages during the holidays, and a representative from the Joint Safety Center will give holiday safety tips.

Due to the Christmas holiday, there will be no NQLB meeting held in December.

Following the presentations the floor will be open for other issues brought up by those in attendance. The importance of those issues are prioritized by a vote from the audience.

Everyone in the air station community is welcome to attend the meeting. Capt. Chris Martin, the NQLB chairman, explained it is important for residents to attend the meetings regularly.

"The board can only be as responsive as the input it receives from the community,"

Martin said.

In addition to the monthly meetings, quality of life issues may be addressed by filling out an NQLB suggestion form located at the Commissary, Main Exchange and 7-Day Store.

The board is not intended to circumvent the normal chain of command or the normal procedures of station facilities. What it is intended to do is solve quality of life problems when normal procedures haven't worked. It also serves as a place where people who use the air station can suggest ways to improve the quality of life here.

Marine Corps League to meet

Joint Public Affairs Office

The Aloha Detachment of the Marine Corps League will hold a meeting at the 19th Puka aboard the air station Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. The meeting is open to all ranks, active duty, retired personnel and civilian members of the local community.

In an effort to increase awareness of the league and recognize young Marines, the league will be awarding a one-year membership to the Honor Graduates of the Sergeant's

Course. A one year membership will also be awarded to the Marine of the Quarter, alternating between the 1st Marine Expeditionary Brigade, 1st Radio Battalion and MCAS Kaneohe Bay.

The goal of the league is to form a group which will carry on the traditions of the Marine Corps as well as promote interest in the Marine Corps. It also is a chance to bridge the gap between retired and active duty personnel by allowing a time for fellowship and esprit de corps between the two groups.

"We're all Marines and friends of Marines. Usually we're involved in our duties, but sometimes we need to break away and socialize together. We need to build comradeship and take time to find out what is going on in our community. We also need to find out from retired Marines what it used to be like and let them know what is going on today," said Col. R.R. Crawford, station commanding officer.

To join the Aloha Detachment, call the detachment at 943-0543.

1 Peace agreement between Israel and Jordan possible

While the details of the peace agreement between Israel and Palestinian Liberation Organization are still being worked out, it appears as if Israel is on the verge of another historic agreement.

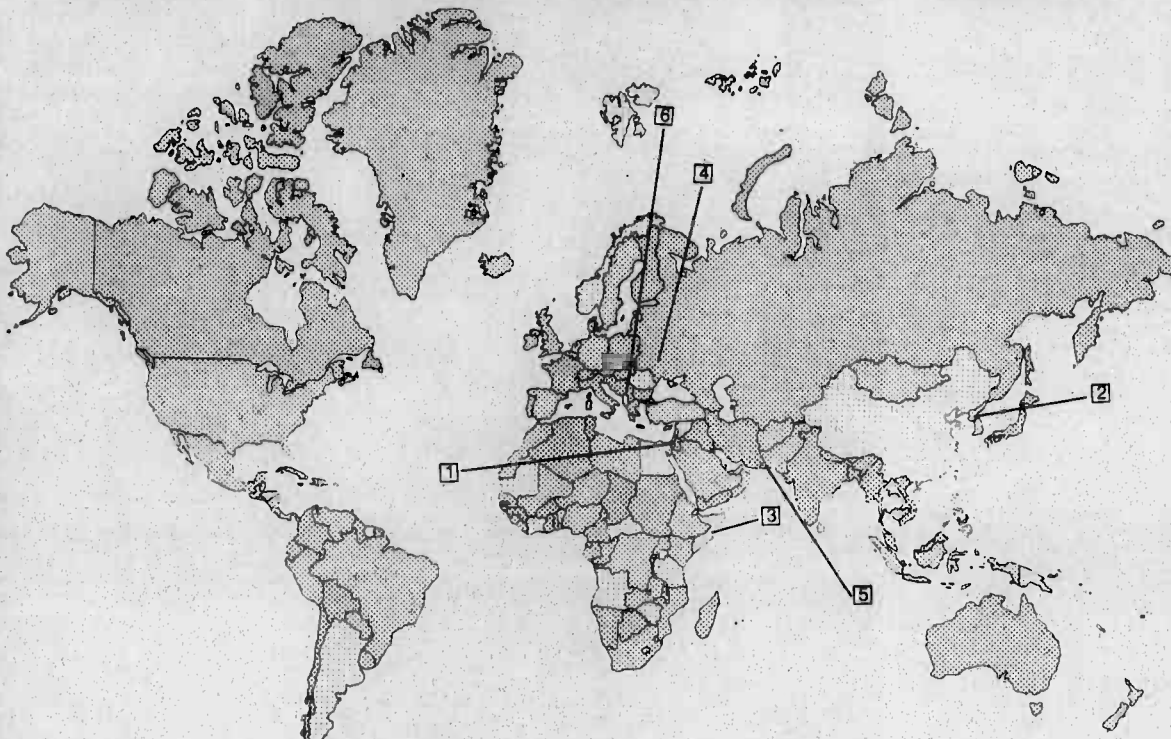

Israel and Jordan may be close to reaching a peace agreement which would end the war-like state between the two countries and define economic relations between Israel, Jordan and the Palestinians.

The one thing which may hold up an agreement is the stalemate in the Israel-Syria talks. Syria may keep Jordan's King Hussein from signing an agreement.

While Israel was making further peace agreements, talks with the PLO were scheduled to resume this week. The PLO had ended the meetings in protest over Israel's troop withdrawal plans from the Gaza Strip.

The PLO announced a joint committee was formed to resolve the problem with the Israeli troop withdrawals.

The negotiators have a deadline of Dec. 13 to complete the detailed agreements. Dec. 13 is the date set for the beginning of Israeli troop withdrawals from the Gaza Strip and Jericho.

Intelligence analysts believe the north may be only a couple years away from completing a nuclear weapon.

2 President Clinton warns North Korea

President Clinton warned North Korea not to build nuclear weapons and not to attack South Korea.

The president said an attack against South Korea would be viewed as an attack on the United States.

The warnings came after North Korea's continued refusal to allow the International Atomic Energy Agency to inspect its nuclear facilities. North Korea is suspected of developing nuclear weapons.

In an effort to get North Korea to comply with inspections, the United States offered to improve relations if North Korea would allow inspections. To date, North Korea has not accepted the proposal.

Clinton's remarks were not taken well. In fact, North Korea issued a statement Tuesday saying Clinton was getting on their nerves.

3 Aidid warns United States

Somali warlord Mohamed

Farrah Aidid warned the new United States troops to stay off the streets of Mogadishu or face another fight like the one which killed 18 Americans.

United States officials announced American troops would resume patrols of Mogadishu's main roads, backed by M1A1 tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles, and gain control of the city.

All foreign troops in Somalia have kept their activities very low key since the Oct. 3 battle. Now that reinforcements and armor are in place, the United Nations plans to be more visible.

Because of the Oct. 3 attack, the United States announced plans to withdraw from Somalia in March. The effects of the planned withdrawal are already having consequences. The French, German and Italian contingents in Somalia have announced plans to withdraw early also.

Serious friction has developed between the United Nations and United States over the planned withdrawal and the conduct of operation.

United Nations officials are concerned that the humanitarian mission will fail after the withdrawal of United States forces.

4 Yeltsin doesn't want early presidential elections

Russian President Boris Yeltsin is going back on his promise to hold early presidential elections in June. He said he wants to finish his term and at the end of his term in 1996 he would not run for reelection.

Yeltsin had promised to hold early presidential elections during the standoff with the parliament. He made the promise in an effort to end the stalemate.

The parliamentary elections will be held Dec. 12. Currently there are 21 political parties which have gained enough signatures to qualify for the elections.

The December elections will be the first true parliamentary elections in Russia.

Another important vote which will take place Dec. 12 will be for the new constitution, which Yeltsin made public Tuesday. The new constitution will give more power to the president, allow for private ownership of property and guarantee human rights.

The constitution would also provide for a formal separation of the executive, legislative and judicial branches. Although the parliament would have less power compared to the old constitution, it would have the power to impeach the president.

The old constitution was written during the communist era and has largely been ignored.

5 Pakistan nuclear talks stalled

United States nuclear talks are making little progress with Pakistan.

Pakistan and India are considered capable of producing nuclear weapons and both are suspected of possessing some weapons. The United States has been trying to get several Asian nations to abandon their nuclear programs.

Relations between the United States and Pakistan have been strained since 1990 when the United States ended aid to Pakistan because of the nuclear issue.

Pakistan has stated it would give up its nuclear program if its enemy, India, does.

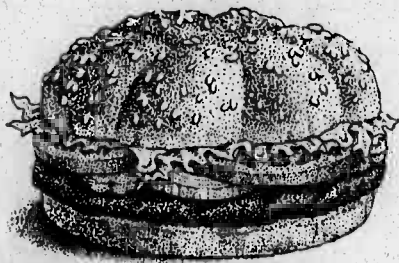

6 Attacks in Sarajevo intensify

Some of the worst casualties in a month have put people in Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina, into a panic. A school was hit Tuesday by mortar rounds, killing at least nine children.

The attack was the worst since October. Sarajevo has been under siege since April 1992. It's unclear now what world reaction to the attacks will be, but NATO has threatened air strikes against Serb positions in the past because of the Serbs' siege of the city.

More than 200,000 people have been killed in the civil war since the breakup of the former Yugoslavia. To date, the United Nations has not been able to resolve the conflict.

Marine Barracks celebrates Corps' 218th anniversary

By Cpl. Barry Baker
Staff Writer

The sun was setting on Puller Hall for the beginning of a sentimental 218th Marine Corps Birthday Sunset Parade and historical uniform pageant Nov. 4.

The parade was one to remember because during his remarks, Col. W.W. North, commanding officer of Marine Barracks Hawaii, stated this could be the last sunset parade held at the barracks.

The Marine Forces Pacific Band, conducted by CWO-2 R.W. Miller and Drum Major GySgt. R.W. Gooding III, started the festivities with their sharp sounds and precision drill moves that awed the audience in the packed bleachers.

Headquarters and Service Company and Guard Company, Pearl Harbor, were next in the spotlights as they marched flawlessly into position abreast to the crowd.

Evening colors was then presented by Sgt. W.S. Carter carrying the National Ensign; Sgt. J.K. Roberts carrying the Marine Corps Colors; and LCpls. P.M. Hudson and J.A. Ray as the riflemen.

As the colors began to separate at center stage, darkness covered the grounds. Narrator CWO-2 D.A. Boggs broke the anticipation with the beginning of the Historical Uniform Pageant.

Walking through the colors first was Cpl. A.C. Carter wearing the Marine Corps uniform from the American Revolutionary War of 1775. Carter came walking down to the microphone. He then explained who he was in a very gratifying manner.

GySgt. J.N. Greenblatt, noncommissioned officer-in-charge and the 26 Marines in the pageant, were from Brigade Service Support Group-1. His Marines represented the Marine Corps from the Revolutionary War, to the 1840's Mexican War, to the Frozen Chosin in the Korean War, to the present-day female Marine.

As the remarks from each Marine in the pageant sent tingles up the spines of onlookers, North and Capt. C.J. Page, commander of troops, proceeded with the inspection of the two companies.

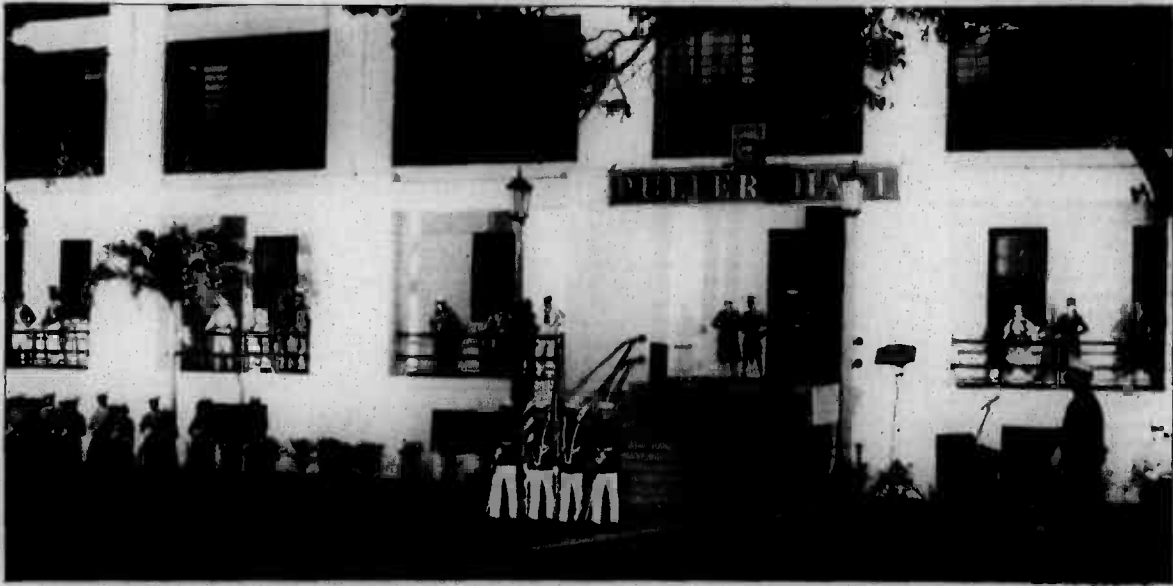

Unique to parades, the first squad of each company performed a modified inspection arms, producing a ripple effect from the squad leader down to the last Marine.

"This will probably be the last Sunset Parade," North said during his remarks. "We are going to feel the downsizing of the Marine Corps here, too. We have one of the last intact Marine Barracks; and I am very proud to be part of it."

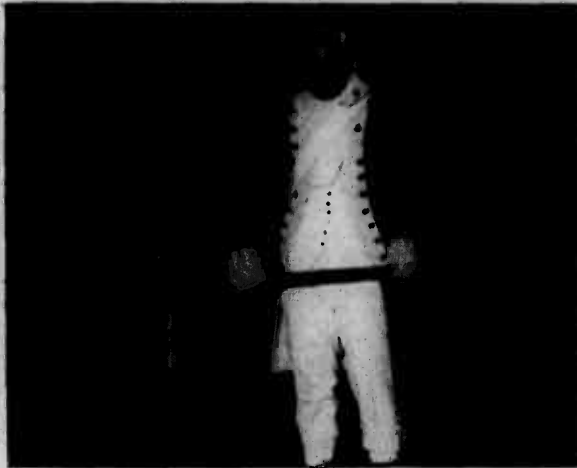

After North thanked distinguished guests and his staff for the ceremony's success, echo taps was played with one bugler on top of the Headquarters building standing next to the POW/MIA flag and the other off in the dark.

Camp H.M. Smith's Saluting Battery, under the direction of CWO-2 R. Watkins, shook the grounds with the 105mm howitzers for the 21-gun salute to end the ceremony.

Marine Forces Pacific Band Combo then played at North's residence for a social gathering that followed the ceremony.

The 218th Marine Corps Birthday was celebrated with, perhaps, the last Sunset Parade to be held at Puller Hall, Marine Barracks Hawaii. The historical uniform pageant Marines can be seen standing in Puller Hall's veranda.

Part of the Sunset Parade included the historical uniform pageant. Here, the American Revolutionary War is portrayed.

Col. W.W. North, commanding officer of Marine Barracks Hawaii, spoke to the audience during the 218th anniversary Sunset Parade Nov. 4.

Bicycle safety for kids and adults

By GySgt. Louis Rowe
Joint Safety Center

For many parents, our worst possible nightmare would be to receive a call from a police station starting with the words, "We must inform you that your child was struck by a car while riding a bicycle this evening..." The call would probably end with "...there were no lights on the bicycle and the driver never saw your child until it was too late!"

As you read this article, a parent somewhere in the United States is receiving this phone call. The true tragedy of this experience that some parent and child will live (or not live) through is that it could have been prevented through some simple actions on the part of the child's parents.

To be perfectly candid, riding a bicycle at night is not a safe activity for parent or child. However, if riding home from football practice in the evening is the only alternative available for junior, then read on.

The first thing a parent must do is help the child realize how hard it is to see a cyclist at night. The next time you are driving at night, point out a cyclist to your children and explain why they have to take special precautions at night. This is a good time to review the rules of the road pertaining to bicycles. Those specific rules are beyond the scope of this article, but the most important are to ride with traffic, obey all traffic signals, and cross roads only at intersections or crosswalks.

Equipping the bicycle to make the child visible should be the parent's next step. Air Station Order 5500.6C specifies that at a minimum, a bicycle ridden at night must have a 3-square-inch white reflector and a white light (i.e., flashlight) that is visible 500 feet to the front. A 3-square-inch red reflector must be visible from the rear, and amber reflectors must be visible from the sides and mounted on the pedals. These specifications are the bare minimum but much better protection does exist and is available at your local bicycle store or exchange.

One option is a lightweight reflective vest similar to what joggers or motorcyclists wear. It is inexpensive and efficient but has one serious drawback; the child may ride out during daytime and forget to bring the vest along, getting caught at sundown without it.

A better alternative is the "Vista Lite" blinking red diode reflector light. This tiny battery operated light is attached to the rear of the bicycle so it's never left at home. Children think these lights are "cool" and they enjoy using them (unlike the reflective vest). Most importantly, these lights are amazingly bright and can be seen from a great distance by motorists. Two AA size batteries will power this light for a very long time and people I personally know have gotten more than a year of service from one set of batteries. The drawback to this option is a cost of $15.99 per light.

A third item I will mention should be a "must have" for any child who gets on a bicycle, day or night. This is the bicycle helmet. Children usually recover from broken arms and broken legs without major complications. A head injury is an entirely different matter. Head injuries are very serious and the best protection against them is a helmet. They are available in different sizes and styles to fit any child.

So parents, don't leave your child out there on that dark road, unseen and unprotected. Take steps today to educate and protect them.

Great American Smokeout is Nov. 18

□ Branch medical clinic to set up information booth

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

Millions of Americans pick up a deadly weapon as many as 25 times a day. More than 3,000 American teenagers pick it up for the first time each day. This weapon, causes more than 125,000 deaths every year. The "weapon" is tobacco.

More than 80 percent of all smokers begin smoking by age 21, reports the American Cancer Society. As people mature they become concerned for their overall health and become aware of the health hazards produced by smoking. In the majority of the cases, by this time they are already addicted to the substance and it is difficult to quit.

To encourage smokers who desire to quit, the American Cancer Society sponsors the Great American Smokeout. Each year, the smokeout is held on the third Thursday of November. The smokeout is a lively, upbeat event which encourages smokers to quit for just 24 hours.

"If they can, maybe they'll go on to quit for good," said LCDR Angela Haffarman, Branch Medical Clinic director. "At the very least, they'll have one success to build on in future attempts to quit smoking."

Although the event is for smokers, nonsmokers should realize that their participation can play an important part in the success of the person trying to quit.

"No one should have to quit alone," Haffarman said. "Our clinic activities will let quitters know that our community is standing with them. Family and friends can offer the support a quitter needs."

The Branch Medical Clinic will celebrate the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout with an information booth in front of the clinic the morning of Nov. 18. All those interested can sign up for the clinic's Smoking Cessation Program.

Another event held to support the Great American Smokeout will be a program at the station theater on Tuesday. Marlene Maneha, an American Cancer Society representative, will provide information on how to quit smoking and how to support someone who is trying to quit smoking.

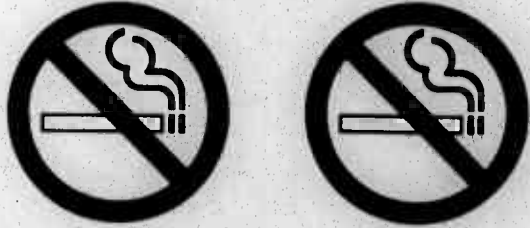

The program will run from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. All personnel and their dependents are invited.

A coffin will be provided in which all tobacco products may be placed for disposal. For more information on the events at the theater, please contact HM2 Mike Bucklew at 257-1371.

Thanks to events such as this, 36 percent of the nation's smokers quit for at least one day and become more aware of the health hazards caused by smoking.

According to a nationwide survey, 17.1 million smokers participate in the Great American Smokeout. A large number of smokers who quit for the day continue to be smokeless for one to three more days.

For more information on Great American Smokeout activities or tips on quitting, call the American Cancer Society at 262-5124.

Neighborhood Night Out Visit

□ MPs encourage everyone to participate

Joint Public Affairs Office

The Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station Provost Marshal Office is hosting a Neighborhood Night Out Nov. 15 from 6-10 p.m.

This program is designed to heighten crime and drug prevention awareness; generate support and participation in local anticrime efforts; strengthen neighborhood spirit and police community relations; and to send a message to criminals letting them know neighborhoods are organized and fighting back.

The Military Police will be hosting a variety of events such as McGruff the Crime Dog making appearances throughout the base, and at building 1096 there will be military dog demonstrations and static displays.

The Military Police are asking for everyone's participation in this event. Meeting your neighbors and knowing what kind of car they drive, how many kids they have, what they look like will help set base residents at ease.

When neighbors know each other and become partners with the Military Police, the crime and drug problems begin to disappear. The Military Police invites your ideas and assistance in coordinating the Neighborhood Night Out. Call GySgt. R.W. Price or Sgt. M.C. Becker at 257-2103.

important than the other. The lesson we learned in Desert Storm is that we must all operate together rather than as the sum of individual parts. All our Navy, Air Force, Marines and Army are vital components of our military readiness."

Appointed as the thirteenth Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Shalikashvili assumed his duties on Oct. 25 in a small private ceremony. Prior to his appointment as the principle military advisor to the president, secretary of defense and the National Security Council, he served as the Supreme Allied Commander, Europe (SACEUR) and also as the commander-in-chief, United States European Command (CINCEUR).

Born in Warsaw, Poland on June 27, 1936, the chairman began his military career in 1959 when he attended Officers Candidate School and received his commission as a second lieutenant as an artillery officer. He served in Vietnam, Alaska, Germany, Italy and in the continental United States to include senior staff positions.

He served as SACEUR and CINCEUR from June 1992 until October 1993 when he returned to Washington D.C. for his present assignment.

General Shalikashvili replaces Gen. Colin Powell, who retired September 30 after serving as the senior military advisor during several military operations.

Fulfilling a childhood dream

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

It started as a childhood dream. Listening to his father talk about being a Marine, he knew that was exactly what he wanted to do.

Corporal Philip Plourde's dream became a reality when he enlisted in November of 1991.

"My father always gave me a choice on what service I should join, but I knew I wanted to be a Marine since I was ten," Plourde said.

After completing bootcamp and Marine Combat Training, Plourde spent seven weeks in the Basic Electrician Course at Camp Lejeune, N. C. Upon completion of this school, Plourde received orders here and was assigned to the station Engineer Motor Transport.

Since arriving here, Plourde decided he did not want to just be one of the rest, he wanted to stand out and be recognized as a Marine who does his best to be a solid squared-away Marine.

"When I see a Marine who does not take care of his uniform or doesn't perform his job well, it just makes me want to strive that much harder," Plourde said.

According to Plourde it is especially important for noncommissioned officers to lead by example and always try to do what is right for their troops.

"I know I make mistakes, but when I do I don't run from them, I admit to them and try to correct them," Plourde said.

"Although we place many tasks upon him, he does an outstanding job in everything he does. Give him a couple more months and he will be ready for a meritorious sergeant promotion board," said SSgt. Charles Moon, Engineer Motor Transport, engineer operations chief.

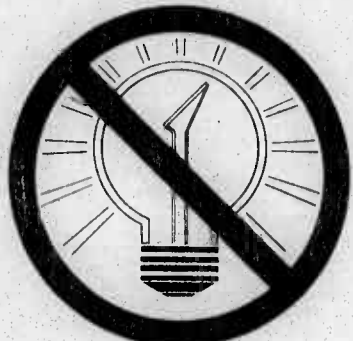

Plourde's ambition was visible by winning the last 1st Marine Expeditionary Brigade Marine of the quarter board.

"Although I am the one who won the board, I owe it to my wife who helped me win it. She spent numerous hours asking me questions and helping me prepare my uniforms," Plourde said.

Striving to be the best is what makes him always look and perform the way a Marine is supposed to, with pride, dedication and professionalism, Plourde explained.

Cpl. Philip Plourde was named Marine of the quarter for the 1st MEB.

Family a vital part of the Marine Corps

As we celebrate the annual birth of our Corps there is the need to reflect on the family that is the Marine Corps. Marines and marriage were a recent focus in the media. The basic facts are that almost half of our Marines are married. Family pressures can disable Marines emotionally and decimate the combat effectiveness of units. Planning ahead for marriage and family readiness are common sense and the only approach to personal readiness. The old view, "if the Marine Corps wanted you married they would have issued you a spouse with your seabag," is dead. Marines are free to marry, but freedom brings an attendant responsibility. Every Marine expects his or her marriage to last forever. Unfortunately, the maintenance manual on marriage often gets misplaced. People, machines and marriages do not run forever without careful attention to detail. Constantly placing a career before family, working longer instead of smarter, and bringing work issues home stress family relationships. Unique pressures bear heavily on married, first term Marines. Couples under the best of circumstances take years to adjust to marriage. Extended deployments and financial hardships may inflict grievous wounds on young Marine families during the critical years. Therefore, first-term marriage is an uphill run with a loaded pack. Only superior preparation, realistic expectations, communication, and love based on commitment rather than emotions without depth and maturity offer the hope of marital success. If only three out of ten Marines completed their first enlistment we would review every aspect of Marine life to fix the problem. Yet only three of 10 first term Marine marriages survive. This is not only the individual Marine's problem. It is our problem. It is a problem of readiness and leadership.

Leadership must prepare Marines and their families for all eventualities. This includes ensuring that Marines prepare emotionally and financially for emergencies during deployment and separations; development of a family care plan that provides for guardianship and care of children or other dependents; maintenance of current record of emergency data and SGLI information; and informing the Marine family as much as possible of the unit mission and location.

Marines also have a responsibility to extended family members. No one will forget the call from the drill instructor or first sergeant and ensuing counseling session concerning the need to write or call home to confirm one's health and welfare to parents or spouse. Responsible Marines communicate with their immediate family on a regular basis. Significant family members must have in their possession their Marine's current military address. Family awareness with the services of the American Red Cross is paramount. Chaplains, family service centers, and other helping agencies are available to help Marines and their families.

A top-notch resource for single and married Marines, "What's Next? A Guide to Family Readiness for the U.S. Marine Corps," is available from Educational Publications, Inc. (800-220-3145). Filled with essential information for the new Marine family member, and useful checklists for old hands, this family handbook is an excellent tool.

No single social institution is as important as the family. Protection and preservation of the family is a Marine value and a quality of life issue inherent to the readiness of the Corps. Stay on the attack and take care of each other. It's the Marine way. Semper Paratus.

Camp Smith wins HMAAC Flag Football championship

By Cpl. Barry Baker
Staff Writer

Camp Smith went undefeated in the 1993 Hawaii Marine Athletic Council (HMAAC) Flag Football Championships tournament held at Camp H.M. Smith's Bordelon Field Nov. 6-7, defeating K-Bay's MWSS-174, 8-2, in the championship game.

Comprised of the top players from the four Camp Smith intramural flag football teams, this "all-star" team was coached by Bennett Ford, who used a passing game strategy to win the title.

The four teams that participated were Camp Smith, Marine Barracks Hawaii, MWSS-174 and MALS-24.

"Most of the teams used the running game and the ones that used the passing game really didn't connect," Ford said. "I wanted to use my receivers because I have one of the best quarterbacks on the island."

One of the receivers Ford was talking about was Kenneth Hodges. "I think he caught nearly 16 passes this tournament," Ford said. "If I had to pick an offensive MVP [most valuable player], it would be Hodges."

One of the most important receptions Hodges made came with 55 seconds left in the championship game. Lining up on the left side, he ran a pattern into the left flat of the end zone for a 15-yard touchdown catch.

Hodges' touchdown catch was the only TD of the game. The only score for MWSS-174 came three plays after the opening kickoff. The Camp Smith punter was standing in his own end zone when the offensive coach failed to declare a kick on fourth down, something unique to flag football. MWSS-174's defense took advantage of the error and grabbed the punter's flag in the end zone for a safety, taking the lead, 2-0.

Throughout most of the game, the offensive drives from both teams were stopped short for one reason or another. MWSS-174's quarterback, George Masaraff, threw strikes all game, but they were continually deflected by the Camp Smith defensive backs or dropped by his receivers. And, when a big play stuck, the next play would be penalized, nullifying any MWSS-174 momentum.

"I counted six flags, three were pass interference calls, the last three minutes of the game," said Talwin Parks, MWSS-174 assistant coach. "The penalties killed us. It was an outstanding game on both sides of the ball, but there were a couple big pass plays that were dropped that were catchable."

"What also killed us was their great passing game. It just wore our defensive backs down," Parks

Marine Corps sports to see changes next year

By Cpl. Barry Baker
Staff Writer

A Morale, Welfare and Recreation news release from Quantico, Va., announced several changes to Marine Corps Sports which will take effect in 1994, due to budget cutbacks. In an interview with the station athletic director, he explained how the changes would affect Hawaii Marines. The changes include:

— Regional, All-Marine and Armed Forces Tennis and Racquetball Championships will not be held.

"Nothing will change as far as this base is concerned," said John Magnus, athletic director for Marine Corps Air Station Kaneohe Bay. "The HASAC (Hawaii Armed Services Athletic Council) tournaments for these two sports are still scheduled for 1994. It just means athletes competing in tennis and racquetball will not have any regional- or national-level tournaments."

— Women attending All-Marine trial camps in basketball, softball and volleyball will be selected by resume, rather than through regional competition.

"Women participating in these sports will have to submit a resume to the athletic department here," Magnus said. "Once we select who we think will best represent K-Bay Marines, we then send the resumes to Headquarters Marine Corps. There, they will make the final selections on who will be able to participate in the tryouts. We will publish the dates that athletes will need to submit resumes in the Hawaii Marine. Camp Smith and Marine Barracks Marines should submit their resumes to John Collier, the Camp Smith athletic director.

— The Senior Men's Golf Division has been canceled, and the number of men proceeding to the All-Marine Championships from each region will increase to six. Seniors with a desire to compete will do so in the Open

Division. "All this says is there are no age divisions," Magnus said. "There will be just one big group of golfers now."

— Men's regional, All-Marine and Armed Forces Basketball competition will use NCAA rules instead of FIBA rules. "I think this should have been done before. Why have 200 athletes who play FIBA

From the cheap seats: A sports commentary

By John Magnus
KMCAS Athletic Director

I received several positive comments regarding a recent article that dealt with pro sports "Ironmen" and how many of today's professional athletes are spoiled brats. Well, a few people commented that this was typical of changes they have seen in society as a whole.

How many of you can remember going down to the park with a few friends and creating your own baseball game? Sooner or later more neighborhood kids would show up and a full-fledged game would be on. Nowadays it seems that kids don't do that. Apparently the only way they'll go to the park and play baseball when their parents sign them up for a program and mommy and daddy drive them to practice. The child has to make no effort to get involved, consequently the child makes no effort once he or she starts playing.

I have noticed this phenomenon while working on base. It seems that many younger Marines do not have any commitment to any of the sports teams they get involved with. It appears that playing ball, even on the intramural level, is not fun; it is work.

In contrast, I know many Marines who happen to be a little older, say, over 30, who, if their bodies weren't so banged up from all of the sports they have played in their lives, would love to still be playing sports. A great example of this is the 30 and over intramural basketball league. Six years ago this league had four teams. This past season there were eight teams. Eight is not many, but it does show that participation has doubled. Meanwhile, six years ago the intramural league had 28 teams and the league that is about to begin has 16 teams. This shows me a greater effort from the over 30 crowd and less commitment from the younger guys.

Another example is the men's varsity basketball team. Six years ago more than 40 guys were at the tryouts. This year there was not more than 20 trying out. Maybe there aren't any basketball players on the base, but I know differently. There are Marines who play basketball all the time, yet they don't get involved with a team. Why? Obviously these people love the sport, they play every day; yet they don't have the desire or pride to play for their Marine base team. I guarantee you that most of the old timers would play if their rickety, old bodies would let them. The youngsters just don't seem to have the commitment.

I think this lack of energy has a lot to do with our lifestyle in general. Technology has made things so easy for us that perhaps we forget what being dedicated to something means. Society's mentality has changed, things are much more disposable, and people can walk away more easily.

I can remember when I was a kid and wanted to quit playing football. My parents would not let me. It was something that they paid for, but also it was commitment by me to play in an organized competition and I shouldn't let my teammates down.

I have seen countless times when people, young Marines, just didn't show up for games or practices. There was no phone call to the coach or even informing a teammate. What's up with that? I can understand an emergency situation where there isn't an opportunity to notify anyone, but what about blowing off practice to go to the mall? This has happened.

Not only have these people not showed up for practice, but then they have the nerve to show up for the game and expect to start. And then when the coach doesn't play them, they get upset. Do these people think they are so good that they don't need to practice?

What if the coach put in a new play in the last practice? They weren't there to learn it because they were home watching Laverne and Shirley reruns. So, when it's game time, the coach can't put them in because they don't know the new play. Then they get upset because they don't play, yeah, right!

Wake up people, everything in life doesn't just come to you on a platter. A coach is not going to let you play if you don't practice. You earn your playing time in practice. That's right, you earn it through hard work at practice. I have seen too many times in recent years that people just don't want to work hard enough, even though they have the ability to be really good. It seems that striving to be the best at whatever you do is no longer a high priority.

I'm not saying that all of this country's younger people are becoming lazy and noncommittal. There are always individuals who will be there for the team because the pride they feel in working hard for a common cause is a great feeling. Even if you don't win, you will feel great knowing that you worked hard and tried your best. You know the old saying, "Getting there is half the fun." That's the way to go.

Let's see kids organizing their own games. Let's have a sense of responsibility to your team, co-workers, and family. Let's have fun putting in the effort to do a good job at the things we like to do. Mainly, let's just put in the effort. Success doesn't grow on trees, but it can be there to pick off of the trees if you make the effort.

MWR Recreation no exception to budget cuts

By Julie Mall
MWR

Recreation is a key word for the Morale, Welfare and Recreation department. Most Marine families take advantage of the many recreational opportunities offered here by MWR; however many remember when MWR Recreations Operations (then called Special Services), programs were offered for free. The cuts in the defense budget have affected every part of the military, and MWR is no exception.

The loss of appropriated funds, or tax dollars allocated from the Department of Defense, has caused many changes in the MWR Recreations Program. Recreation fees have increased slightly over the years due to this decreased funding. Programs and activities once offered free of charge, or giveaways such as basketballs, tennis shoes, t-shirts and the like, are no longer a possibility.

In 1989, Recreation Operations received 20 percent of their operating expenses from appropriated funding. In 1992, the amount of funding fell to six percent, a 63 percent decrease in appropriated funding. The other 94 percent of the operating budget must be raised through patron fees and revenue generated through services like the Marine Corps Exchange.

The revenue raised through the Marine Corps Exchange is used to support low cost or free activities for Marines and their families. In 1992 the amount used to offset these activities was $925,466 or 24 percent of the Recreation Operations yearly budget. These non-revenue-generating activities include services such as the Main Gym, fitness centers, intramural sports, the library and youth activities. Such programs would not be available were it not for the nominal charges assessed for some activities.

Revenue-generating services such as the golf course, bowling lanes, sailing slips, dry docks, multi-craft shop, auto hobby shop and the theater become extremely important when trying to offset the cuts in the defense budget. The money generated from these activities is returned to the recreation budget to help alleviate the decreasing funding.

However, not all news is bad news. Kaneohe Bay boasts some of the least expensive fees for selected activities in Hawaii. The Kaneohe Klipper Golf Course is one of the best deals for golf on this island for Marines. An E1-E5 can golf 18 holes for only $6. The Klipper is the only military course with monthly advance green fees. The base Bowling Center offers low cost bowling at a rate of $1 per game. Comparable civilian facilities charge between $2.50 and $3.50 per game.

The athletic facilities (fitness centers and gymsnasiums) offer most services free of charge, whereas Air Force and Navy charge per use or per month. Comparable civilian facilities on the island charge between $20 and $45 per month plus initiation fees, which can range from $250-$600.

Golf and bowling are prime examples of revenue generating activities supplementing the non-revenue-generating activities. Therefore, nominal charges for these activities are required. It is estimated that every patron who walks through an activity door costs MWR $3.42. This amount is derived from fixed costs, including material, staffing and facility maintenance. The recreation department has been streamlining the services offered here on base. These changes were made based upon patron surveys and maximum usage surveys. Programs with little or no usage have been slowly eliminated in order to expand programs with heavy usage.

"We are trying to offer quality programs at the best price," said Bill Rogers, recreation operations director. MWR recreation programs need continuous support from their patrons. Money spent to use MWR facilities is recycled for upgrading facilities, creating new leisure opportunities and supporting operating expenses. Declining demand will mean closures and realignment of existing facilities in today's tough economic climate.

Recreation activities have changed out of financial necessity, but with change has come improvement. MWR recreation programs are run by professionals ensuring that consistency and continuity are standard at all installations.

Recreational opportunities offered here on base are diverse and there is truly something for everyone. With continued patron support of all MWR activities, such as retail stores, clubs, video center and food services, MWR will be able to continue offering the best in recreation and leisure services in your own back yard.

Changes

from B-1

(the international governing body for basketball) when maybe one or two athletes ever make it that far," Magnus said.

Armed Forces teams in men's basketball, soccer and volleyball will no longer proceed to national championships, but will instead compete in Conseil International du Sport Militaire (CISM) championships. Women's teams in volleyball and basketball will compete in national championships if there is no CISM competition. Men's and women's teams in softball will compete in the national championship because there is no CISM competition in this sport.

Participation in the previous year's All-Marine team will no longer guarantee a spot at the All-Marine trial camps. All Marines will have to earn their spot on each respective team through the regional selection process each year they wish to participate.

"This is a very good rule," Magnus said. "It makes the athletes earn their spot on what they have accomplished that year as a player, not just because of their name and what they have done in the past."

This means every athlete has a chance to make the All-Marine squad each year, depending on their abilities they show in base intramural sports.

"We'll still have varsity teams on this base. But, our schedule is driven by the Armed Forces in Quantico, Va. These cuts have to be made," Magnus said. "I'm sure they looked at the sport with the lowest participation first. Those with a lack of participation and the lack of funds were hit first."

The game was a defensive struggle, complicated by the many flags thrown, which kept the score at 2-0 until the last 58 seconds. Camp Smith quarterback Michael Tillis rolled left and hit Hodges in the left flat for the first, and only touchdown of the game. Going for the two-point conversion, Tillis ran the same play against the fatigued defensive backs of

'174 for two points. With 30 seconds remaining, '174 went into their passing game. On their first possession, '174 started on their own 35 yard-line. Camp Smith defensive end Damon Williams sacked Masraff for a ten-yard loss. Then, an illegal procedure against '174 put them out of the ball game. Williams' timely sack clinched the defensive player of the tournament in coach Ford's eyes. "I would have to pick Williams to be our outstanding defensive player. He did an excellent job the entire tournament," Ford said.

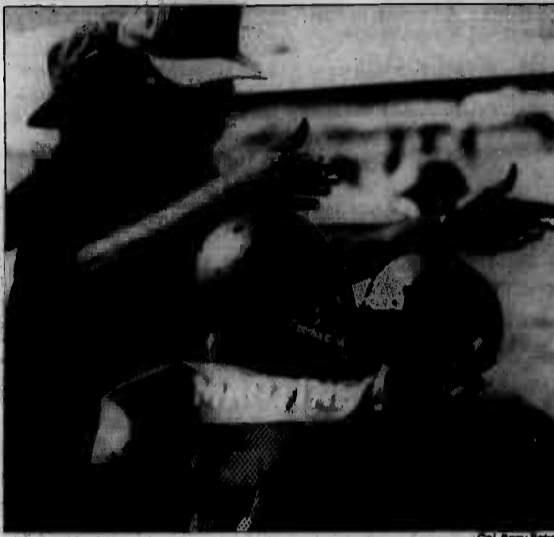

According to Ford, safety Michael Blackston also played an exceptional defensive game for the champion Camp Smith team. He had three interceptions in the title game, including a tipped pass from '174 quarterback Masraff in the end zone, stopping a scoring opportunity for '174. Ford will draft a couple players from each team to make up the Marine Corps flag football team that he will coach in the Hawaii Armed Services Athletic Council (HASAC) tournament to be held at Hickam Air Force Base Nov. 29 to Dec. 5.

Equal opportunity

SSgt. Eileen Osterhout
OSA

When you become involved in a conflict it is helpful to ask yourself a set of standard questions. The answers to these questions should lead you to classify the behavior as Red (unacceptable), Yellow (may be considered inappropriate) or Green (acceptable), and help you decide the course of action you can follow.

Ask yourself: What exactly happened? What was the impact of the behavior? Did it disrupt the work environment? Would it have offended a reasonable person of a similar background? Was the behavior Red, Yellow or Green? What are my responsibilities and options.

The Informal Resolution System enables you to resolve conflict in the work place at the lowest possible level. The first is the direct approach, in person or in writing. Give yourself time to collect your thoughts. Stay focused on your behavior and its impact.

The second approach is an informal third party. Ask another person to talk to the individual involved, accompany you or to intervene on your behalf to help resolve the conflict. This could be a co-worker or a friend. Remember, you have a chain of command. The chain of command is there for you, to assist you in resolving problems.

Spice of life!

By Maggie Milham

Editor's Note: Spice of Life is a column for military spice (plural of spouse). You are invited to write Maggie with any questions you have concerning military life. Please address your letter to: Joint Public Affairs Office, (Hawaii Marine, Spice of Life), Box 63003, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, HI 96863-3003.

Dear Maggie,

I have just finished reading the letter from "Sick of It," who complained about rude MWR employees. I think your response was way off the mark. You turned her complaints around to make it seem as if she was to blame, perhaps in a bad mood, or had an attitude about MWR employees.

I have also had problems with employees at the Exchange. For example: I went to the electronics counter and asked to look at something that was in the display case. The clerk handed it to me without saying a single word, then walked away. When I returned it, I had to call her over, and she took it back, again without saying a single word to me. I then proceeded to make a purchase, and she never said a word to me, instead letting me know how much I owed by the display on the register. Not one single word was uttered from her the entire time I was there. Someone to whom I told this story suggested that perhaps she was mute, but I know that's not true, as I heard her speaking to a fellow employee during the time she walked away after she handed the display item.

I know that this is a very long letter, but I think that it shows "Sick of It" isn't the only person who has encountered poor service from MWR employees. I also agree that there are some very good clerks, who are friendly and helpful. But I do think that your response dismissed "Sick of It" complaints. Making excuses, and then criticizing the Pearl Harbor and Hickam exchanges was not an appropriate response. I have felt exactly like "Sick of It" on many occasions. I hope that the management at MWR will take the time to train their employees to be more customer friendly. After all, if there aren't any customers, there won't be any need for employees, will there?

Sincerely L.S.

Dear L.S.,

Your letter is quite correct. I did dismiss "Sick of It" a bit too quickly. In fact, if I had written the column a day later, it would have been much more critical of the Exchange. I think you and I met up with the same clerk at the electronics counter! Although your letter was rather long, (I had to cut several other examples out of it) it makes a rather telling indictment of the MCX employees.

I wondered what would happen with a real name and address to work with, so I took your letter to Tim Hudson, the Deputy Director of MWR. This is his response:

"Walt (Skierowski) and I have had long conversations about rudeness. The only thing we can conclude is that perhaps more training is necessary. But will training change an attitude? MWR has a fairly extensive indoctrination course for new employees. In addition to the obvious subjects dealing with job performance, extensive time and attention is dedicated to politeness-good customer service and attentiveness to customer needs.

"I, too, have seen employees treat other customers with what I term less than courteous behavior. Most of our sales staff are dependents. Which lead me to the question - why are dependents rude to each other and to the Marines? We (MWR) do not teach rudeness or disrespect! I wonder if poor customer service is a manifestation of the way they are treated at home. What is interpreted as rudeness might really be lack of respect for each other. Brigadier General Vercauteren commented recently in a Hawaii Marine article about the lack of professional courtesy. I believe his perception of professional behavior overflows into the Marine's personal lives.

"All said, we acknowledge that at times customer service is less than what we feel it should be. I do not have a simple answer. Our experience is that training alone is not the answer. The best way to deal with this matter is to call it to the attention of the Duty Manager or identify the clerk on a "Take Time to Comment Form."

Mr. Hudson seemed very concerned when I spoke to him. I've given him your letter and, hopefully, you will have already been contacted by the time this is published. Maybe if enough people take the time to fill out those forms, the rudest employees will be given "shape up or ship out" orders. I hope that answers your letter. Let me know how things turn out!

Maggie

Remember How Much Fun It Was To Drive Your Car When It Was New?

This intake valve is free of deposits after Induction System Clean-up Service

Without your realizing it, the response and performance that made driving your new car so much fun have slowly drained away. Deposits that build up in the fuel and air-induction systems of your engine have robbed your car of its agility and excitement. The correct balance of fuel and air entering the combustion chamber is vital to engine performance. The air throttle body assembly controls the air flow into the intake ports where the air mixes with atomized fuel and swirls into the combustion chamber. Heavy deposits build up on the back side of the throttle plate, around and behind the plate, and in the idle air control.

Deposits in the air-induction system cause rough engine idle, excessive exhaust emissions, and loss of performance. Correct fuel/air ratio can be maintained only when the fuel and air-induction systems are clean and free of deposits. Come in to our Service Dept. today to get your Toyota or Suzuki Running like new!

Induction system cleanup service only... $95.00 plus tax
