Secretary of Defense William Cohen talks with Marines at MCB Hawaii during a brief visit Friday.

SecDef visits K-Bay

Lance Cpl. David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

The Secretary of Defense, William S. Cohen, visited MCB Hawaii Friday to address servicemembers and discuss concerns.

Cohen discussed his plans for the coming year's defense budget with officers and staff noncommissioned officers and thanked Marines and Sailors here for their service.

"I came here today to thank you for putting your lives on the line and to say I'm proud to get the opportunity to work representing you," Cohen said. "We have the best fighting force in the world and it's not just because we have the best weapons or equipment — it's because we have the best people fighting for us."

When Cohen visited Marines from HMH-362, he discussed quality of life and work atmosphere issues with them.

After meeting with the squadron leather-necks, Cohen spoke with MCB Hawaii officers inside Hangar 101.

Lieutenant Col. Bill Tourek, Base Realignment and Closure coordinator, asked about how budget constraints affect the Corps' lack of supplies and equipment.

Cohen said he understands the concern of the Marines regarding supplies and equipment and its effect on operational efficiency. He said it is one of the issues he is looking into.

Cohen also answered the questions of junior Marines from A Company, 1st Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, who executed a live-fire raid demonstration for the visit at the rifle range.

Lance Cpl. Gerard Sardina, a rifleman with 2nd Platoon, A Co., 1/3, asked, "When are we getting new gear?"

"We have the money and the gear is on its way," Cohen replied.

This was good news for 1/3 Marines.

"It's great because our gear is old and we need new stuff," said Sardina. "It's good to hear it from his mouth because now I know."

"We want to make sure that you have the best, latest equipment in your hands," said Cohen, "so we can ensure we remain totally superior to anybody we face."

Cohen also covered retention concerns, in light of cuts in retirement pay and other benefits.

"How do we keep you in the armed services?" Cohen asked. "We look at concerns with pay, retirement plans, operational tempo, health and housing. We are now working on those issues."

Chow hall vies for top spot

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

A member of the International Food Service Executive Association was among a group of select individuals visiting Anderson Hall here Oct. 29 as part of a program to pick the best messhall in the Marine Corps.

The General W.P.T. Hill Memorial Award is given annually to the best chow hall in the Marine Corps as part of a program sponsored by the Department of the Navy and the IFSEA. Anderson Hall is one of only 11 Marine Corps messhalls selected to participate in the competition.

"The competition is stiff, but I think we're in outstanding shape this year," said Chief Warrant Officer Doug Brush, the base food service officer.

The competition's inspectors looked for fundamentals, including sanitation and safe food handling practices, whether the cooks follow recipes, and customer satisfaction, according to Lt. Col. Bill Hague, head of the Corps' food service subsistence program and a judge for the competition.

"Looking at the criteria, I'd say this is an excellent facility," said IFSEA representative Stavroula Mavrikas, who owns three hotel restaurants. "I'm very impressed with how close this messhall is to civilian standards."

Hague agreed with Mavrikas' assessment, saying Anderson Hall is "super clean." The ability to produce a top rate messhall hinges on the amount of support and interest the command gives the facility, according to Hague.

"Everyone competes for money for basic repair and improvements, so if a commander is that interested in a messhall the Marines and Sailors are better taken care of," Hague said. "It shows that there is a lot of command interest here."

"I think we have a really great chance to win this year. Though we always try to look our best, we really look better this time than previous years," said Gunnery Sgt. Danilo Manzano, assistant mess manager.

"I think our chowhall is the greatest in the Marine Corps," said Lance Cpl. Mohammed Eyiowuawi, a food service specialist here. "We all pray we win the award."

The quality level of the first seven messhalls has been high, with four still to be judged, Hague said. He said the quality level has greatly improved since 1992, the first year he was involved with the competition.

Results of the inspections, as well as the naming of the winner and runners-up, will be announced in January, Hague said.

Patrons of Anderson Messhall go through the line for their lunch Oct. 29. Anderson Hall is one of 11 messes in the Marine Corps to compete for the best messhall in the Marine Corps.

Third annual food drive helps shelters

Cpl. Barry Melton
Combat Correspondent

The Third Annual Shelter Food drive, benefitting the Military and Windward Spouse Abuse Shelters, concluded here Saturday, netting 400 pounds of food.

The drive, coordinated by Family Services Center here, was held at the base commissary throughout October as part of Domestic Abuse Awareness and Prevention Month, said Gail Kiefer, a Family Advocacy Program prevention specialist.

"This was a way for everyone to do a little to help," said Kiefer.

The directors of the shelters said everyone's "little" help, means a lot.

"This means women and children in our shelters will have plenty of food," said Rita Martin, the director of Windward Spouse Abuse Shelter. "It cuts our food budget and allows us to put the money toward other things."

Food is a valuable commodity for the shelters according to Martin. Not only do families need food during their time in the shelters, but families are also given a "food basket" when they leave the shelters.

The directors were also presented a check for $175, which was raised by the Armed Services YMCA "Food For Families" Program bake sale held here Oct. 24, said Kiefer.

"All this was very helpful in terms of providing food and services for abused men, women and children of all military branches," said Tammy Weidnicht, the director of the Military Spouse

Food for Families chairperson, Lisa Inama, presents Rita Martin, the Windward Spouse Abuse Shelter director, with a $175 donation raised by the Armed Services YMCA "Food for Families" program. Along with the donation, 400 pounds of food were also donated by the MCB Hawaii community.

Abuse Shelter. Marines and Sailors from K-Bay who are part of the Family Advocacy Program, also pitched in at Windward Spouse Abuse Shelters Oct. 27, said

Martin, laying down sod and cleaning up yards around the shelters.

"It's a great community service to us," said Martin. "It's like the Marines have adopted us."

Native Americans had great impact on history

Cpl. Barry Melton
Combat Correspondent

Native Americans were the first true settlers of North America and their history is deep and rich. It's filled with outstanding peoples who have fought and died, not just for the freedom of their people and loved ones, but for the United States, as well.

With November designated as National Native American History Month, the Hawaii Marine newspaper will recognize Native American Marines who have given their all for the country and the Corps.

Retired reserve Col. Gregory "Pappy" Boyington, a fighter pilot who flew in World War II and ranking "ace" of the era with 28 dogfight victories to his credit, will be featured next week.

His heroic service as commanding officer of Marine Fixed-wing Fighter Squadron 214, the "Black Sheep," earned him the Medal of Honor.

Private first class Ira Hayes, who served primarily as a paratrooper during the island hopping campaign during World War II will also be recognized.

Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal later immortalized Hayes and others when he photographed them while they raised the American flag on Iwo Jima's Mount Suribachi.

Finally, a review of the Navajo code talkers, who were important to the Marine Corps' war in the Pacific, will be published. The Navajo code was "double-encrypted," first by encoding English terms, then translating them to Navajo.

The code was never broken by the Japanese.

CMC birthday message

Two hundred and twenty-three years ago, the Second Continental Congress created a Corps of Marines to defend the American colonies and to fight for the rich blessings of liberty and democracy. Since that day, Marines have protected the cherished ideals of our Founding Fathers and defended our Nation's interests around the globe. In their blood, they have authored our Corps' glorious history and punctuated it with legendary tales of honor, courage, and commitment — with our Touchstones of Valor.

Today, as we reflect upon these Touchstones, we stand in awe of the invincible will and selflessness of the men and women who defined the very character of our Corps. We are steeled by the courageous Marines who attacked across the wheat fields and into the cauldron of Belleau Wood. We are emboldened by the brave Marines of Iwo Jima — where "Uncommon Valor Was A Common Virtue." We are strengthened by the fierce determination of the Marines who fought through seven enemy divisions and the misery of frostbite, placing the Chosin Reservoir among the most honored of American battles. We are inspired by the tenacious Marines who endured weeks of savage street fighting to reclaim Hue City. We are humbled by the Marines who have served anonymously throughout our history ... their fortitude and sacrifice known only to their closest comrades and their God. These valiant Marines have defined the Corps' enduring ethos, and, on this hallowed day, we renew our commitment to the standard they so dearly set.

Through the long march of history, few military organizations have been held in such high esteem as the United States Marine Corps. Marines epitomize America's greatest demands for her warriors and loftiest aspirations for her citizens. As we reflect upon our past and fortify ourselves for the future, we also commemorate the character of today's Marines ... the men and women who keep faith with our Corps' timeless spirit through their dedicated service. This is ultimately your day Marines — celebrate with pride! Happy Birthday, may God bless you, and Semper Fidelis,

General C.C. KRULAK
U.S. Marine Corps,
Commandant of the Marine Corps

Sergeant Major's Corner

Pass along knowledge every day

Sgt. Maj. Robert W. Holub

MarinePac Sergeant Major

On November 10th, Marines around the globe will pause for a few minutes to read the 13th Commandant's message and cut a piece of cake. One piece will be given to the oldest Marine present signifying the honor and respect we hold for our experienced Marines — those older, more experienced Marines who the younger Marines look to for guidance and to set the example of how a Marine is to behave and do his duty — those older Marines who have in many cases already answered the call to battle and have grown gray in the service of our nation and our Corps.

Holub

That Marine will in turn pass the cake to the youngest Marine present. This passing of the cake is significant because it represents something that occurs not only on the birthday of our beloved Corps, but everyday throughout the world wherever a Marine passes on some tid bit of information, a custom or courtesy; wherever a Marine shows another one where the armory is or how to press out their cammies better. This simple but important part of the birthday ceremony defines who we are as United States Marines. It is the passing of the knowledge, the know how, the "soul of our Corps," if you will, from one generation of Marines to the next, that makes the Marine Corps the special lash up that it is.

All of us have a responsibility as the leaders of our Corps to make sure we are passing along to the next generation the very best "Cake" we possibly can. What we pass on to the next generation of Marines is our personal conduct, our professional skill and our love of our country and Corps. They will define our Corps' character into the next century. This passing of the cake is what makes the Marine Corps truly unique in the service of our country. It is why we are envied for our "esprit de corps" by the other services, and feared by our enemies.

We Marines are a special breed and the families and loved ones who stand by us are also.

So to all the Marines in Marine Forces Pacific, and to those who support us, I would like to wish you a very Happy 223rd Marine Birthday. I ask all of you to rededicate yourself to be the best Marine you can possibly be in the next year, and I ask all of us in leadership positions to make sure we pass along to our younger Marines the very best "Cake" we can. God bless the United States and Success to the Marines.

Happy Birthday Marines! Semper Fi.

Veterans Day set aside to honor all vets

Lance Cpl. David Salazar

Combat Correspondent

For more than 223 years, Americans have fought in battles, giving all they had to ensure the freedom of the nation was not lost.

A legal holiday day set aside to honor all of these warriors, however, has only been observed for the past 44 years.

In 1928, Congress chose Nov. 11 as the day to honor servicemembers, but it wasn't until May 13, 1938 that an act made it a legal holiday, called "Armistice Day".

However, to those who felt strongly about the day, there was still unrest. To answer these cries, in 1954, with the urging of veteran service organizations, Congress changed the name of the holiday to "Veterans Day," because the previous holiday was intended to honor only World War I veterans.

When the legislation was approved June 1, 1954, "Veterans Day" became a day to honor American veterans of all wars. Today, the significance of the holiday still carries.

"It's especially important to remember those who are no longer with us," said retired Master Gunnery Sgt. Bob Talmadge, president of the Aloha chapter of The Chosin Few, an organization comprised of veterans of the battle of the Chosin Reservoir. "They gave everything they had to see that this country stayed free.

"If it wasn't for veterans from World Wars I and II, Korea and Vietnam, we'd be living under another flag," said Talmadge, who retired from the Marine Corps in 1974, after almost 27 years of service.

"It's important to keep the accomplishments of these heroes before the public," Talmadge said, "so that they are not forgotten."

KERANG TEKAK, Indonesia
— Members of the 9th Engineer Support Battalion, 3rd Force Service Support Group, participated in a humanitarian engineer exercise here with members of the Indonesian Marine Corps to improve the quality of life for many Indonesians.

For five weeks, the FSSG servicemembers built school houses, repaired broken culverts, improved the service of nearly impassable roads and constructed town halls for the citizens of this area.

"We came here on a humanitarian effort, to link arms with our peers in the Indonesian Marine Corps, to train those Marines, and to improve our skills in a challenging environment," said detachment commander, 2nd Lt. April K. Whitescarver.

The exercise included 51 Marines and three Sailors, who were all tasked with completing seven construction projects in the jungles of tropic Indonesia.

The servicemembers left Okinawa in early September. Immediately after arriving in Indonesia, they began work on their projects.

"We had a tight timeline to follow, so we started busting ground pretty quick," said Gunnery Sgt. Dean M. Steindl, construction chief, 9th ESB.

Situated on the southern coastline of Indonesia, the villages where the Marines worked were about 150 miles outside of Surabaya, the second largest city in Indonesia.

Construction began on town halls in Sumberwaru and Sumeranyar. Ground was broken for a new schoolhouse in the village of Blanquan and the Marines began the prep work for four projects on Banongan Beach.

"We knew the beach projects were going to take a lot of our man hours," said Steindl. "We had to make the road out to the beach strong enough for five tons to pass safely. To do this we had to repair two causeways, widen some sharp turns in the road and repair collapsed culverts. All of these projects involved major concrete pours."

Completing the mission required extreme effort from all. "I had mornings where I was up at 3 a.m. and didn't finish work until 8 p.m.," said Lance Cpl. Gregory A. Crockett, combat engineer, 9th ESB.

In the end, the struggles were all worth it. The Marines completed their seven projects on time, and all considered the projects a success. For their efforts, six Marines on the project were awarded Navy/Marine Corps Achievement Medals.

"You are contributing not money, but physically with blood, sweat and tears. That's about as much as anyone can ask of you and when you contribute that way you feel pretty good about it," said Lance Cpl. Zellard F. Lemon, a combat engineer with 9th ESB.

Prevention equals cure for costly care

Douglas J. Gillert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — If you saw your child playing on a busy street, you probably would tell him it isn't safe to play there. Then, you'd take him by the hand and lead him to safety.

"As I look at some of our life styles, the net effect is the same," said Dr. (Lt. Gen.) Charles Roadman, Air Force Surgeon General. "We know people are virtually playing in the traffic by the things they elect to do." What's needed, he said, is a health-conscious community that adopts healthy life styles geared toward preventing disease and illness.

Roadman recently accepted the challenge to change the life styles and practices of military health care beneficiaries. As the DoD executive agent for preventive health, he leads a DoD-wide effort that focuses on three areas: smoking cessation and the reductions of alcohol abuse and accidental injuries. Lowering these health risks will save lives in the near term and money in the long term, he said.

In 1996, DoD spent $1.3 billion on direct and indirect costs for cigarette-related illnesses and

$1.6 billion on alcohol-related illnesses. "Out of that came about $1 billion in direct health care costs," Roadman said. "That's out of a $15 billion budget."

Roadman is keenly interested in human costs. He recalled his grandfather, who died of lung cancer in his early 60s. "If he had quit smoking, how long would he have lived, and would he have seen his grandchildren?" the general wonders.

"When you talk about prevention and wellness, that's not a current money saver," he said. "Down the road, it may be a budget issue, but right now it's a human cost issue. What DoD needs is a health standard that says we want everybody to have as long and high quality a life as possible."

Each of the service departments is championing a segment of the prevention plan.

The Air Force oversees tobacco issues, while the Navy works alcohol issues and the Army tackles preventable injuries. However, multiservice, multiagency teams guide each segment. "We're pulling this together as a tri-service approach," Roadman said. "No one service branch can accomplish this alone."

In June, interservice teams of specialists from medical, safety, personnel and other disciplines began scrubbing a draft plan that "vigorously and aggressively" tackles the three preventive health issues, said Lt. Col. Wayne Talcott, chief of substance abuse prevention for the Air Force. The plan targets the total DoD population — active duty, Guard and Reserve, civilian employees and all health care beneficiaries.

The smoking cessation segment reflects how each portion of the plan will work. Talcott said. This part calls for reducing smoking rates 5 percent per year and cutting smokeless tobacco usage in half to 15 percent by 2001. The plan calls for education and prevention programs; targeted interventions; decreased accessibility and availability of tobacco products on military installations; and research.

"The focus of the new DoD effort is to achieve and maintain a constantly fit and ready force and [to establish] health communities here and overseas," Roadman said. "Successful preventive health requires everyone's involvement — from commanders, to physicians to patients. It is a community issue. We need to understand what it is we need to do to take care of each other."

For 36 years the Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation has helped the children of Marines and former Marines to achieve their dreams of higher education. We have authorized over $14 million in scholarships to financially needy applicants, as well as more than $3.5 million to all surviving children of US servicemen killed in the 1991 Gulf War and the Beirut Barracks attack.

We are an "all volunteer" foundation that you can support with pride! Our focus is youth, education, and the values that make our Corps & country strong. This year, we awarded 914 scholarships worth almost $1.3 million; over 12,000 scholarships since 1962! We ask for your support; we promise our continued commitment. It is your generosity that makes it all possible. Thank you!

Marines keep field water potable

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

Providing a good, clean, drinkable water for Marines in the field can be a logistical nightmare at times.

The situation can get very sticky when the Marines are in areas contaminated by nuclear, chemical or biological hazards.

Hope is not lost, however, because the Reverse Osmosis Water Purification Unit, and the Marines who run it, can be called in to handle the needs of thirsty Leathernecks.

"As Marines we can survive without some things, but without good water we can't survive very long at all," said Sgt. Keith Buckheit, the hygiene section noncommissioned officer in charge with Landing Support Company, Combat Service Support Group, the unit which runs the ROWPU.

The ROWPU can pump out 600 gallons of purified water per hour from sources contaminated with radiation, poisonous gas or simply salt water. Its bladders can hold up to 3,000 gallons of water in reserve to use as drinking water or for laundering and showering.

Three Marines are needed to set up the ROWPU, according to Pfc. Carl Losey, a water purification specialist. The ROWPU Marines transport the purification system on a five-ton truck to the field for training at least once a month.

The system's salt water pushes contaminated water through a three-stage filtration process that lifts and flushes the impurities out of the water. The only contaminants the ROWPU cannot process are petroleum and chlorine products because of damage to the unit's filters.

Buckheit said the main "real world" uses for the ROWPU are humanitarian missions, from as far away as Somalia to someplace closer to home: California.

"I was called on to help provide clean water for a good portion of (Marine Corps Base) Camp Pendleton one year," Buckheit said. "A colleague told me that in Somalia they had to use the ROWPU to purify water that was contaminated by malaria from dead bodies."

The Marines who run the ROWPU say they feel satisfied knowing their job plays such an important part in the welfare of fellow devil dogs in the field.

"It is very rewarding to know that the Marines will survive even in contaminated areas, especially when hot weather is involved," Losey said.

"It definitely takes away any fear you may have of going into a dangerous situation, knowing that we're needed," Buckheit said. "I love this job. It's really worth it when Marines come up to us when we're in the field to thank us."

Marines learn to beat stress

Cpl. M.V. Trindade
Combar Correspondent

A monthly stress management class given by the Family Advocacy Program teaches people how to cope with everyday pressures that can often seem overwhelming.

The three-hour class is held on the last Wednesday of each month from 1:00 - 4:00 p.m. and can accommodate 25 participants.

"People come in frequently with failed relationship problems or perhaps stresses like the transition from military to civilian life and feel like they are at rock bottom," said Gail Kiefer, prevention specialist with the Family Advocacy Program. "We're here to teach people self management skills to deal with everyday kinds of stresses so they don't reach that level of emotional exhaustion. We can help them cope earlier."

Classes average about 12-15 participants and teach people effects of stress on the body, stress management techniques such as visualization and breathing, and practical application of those techniques, according to Kiefer.

"I thought the information was pretty good," said Lance Cpl. Floyd Standifer, who has attended the class. "It taught me how to turn negative stress into positive stress, which is especially important in my field, Crash, Fire and Rescue."

In addition to the monthly class, the Family Advocacy

Program conducts unit training.

"We've gone to units and taught them some (stress management) techniques," Kiefer said, "simple, concrete, techniques like muscle tension and relaxation. It's not embarrassing to ball a fist and relax it, and anyone can do it."

"What we teach is so simple, but it really does work," Kiefer added.

For more information, call Gail Kiefer at the Family Advocacy Program at 257-3655.

KAILUA — Marines from Marine Helicopter Training Squadron 301 helped install a local area computer network at Kailua Elementary School here Saturday.

The Marines dug trenches and installed conduit wires to connect the school's LAN from the library to the cafeteria, according to Mike Hirona, the principal at Kailua Elementary.

"We couldn't have done it without the Marines," said Hirona. "They were a tremendous help and we are very thankful."

"This is what the Windwalker team is all about," said Sgt Maj. Collin Cotterell, the squadron's sergeant major, who was on hand Saturday with a handful of volunteer Marines from 301. "When we come out here, it builds teamwork and camaraderie."

"And, we're giving back to the community and benefitting the kids," the sergeant major added. "It's always a pleasure."

By finishing the project, KES-staff and faculty will be able to communicate by electronic mail, automating a system that once required a "runner" to go from one room to the next. Hirona said.

The Marines also helped the school install an electronic sign in front of the school, Hirona added. The sign will serve as a tool to pass information to student and parents.

"It's good to help the kids out," said Pvt. Timothy Klecker, an HMT-301 volunteer. "It's good to do anything that can make a difference."

Members of HMT-301 worked with Kailua Elementary as part of their "Adopt-a-School pact." This arrangement helps the school complete projects, and it provides support for events periodically with volunteer Marines.

Enlisted Marine uses degree to enhance leadership ability

Lance Cpl. David Salazar
 Combat Correspondent

When Cpl. Robert McCarthy joined the Marine Corps two years ago, shortly after graduating college, he had no idea where the Corps would take him.

Now a squad leader for A Company, 1st Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, McCarthy said his decision to join the Corps was an easy one.

"I graduated college in 1995 and started working as a manager for a construction company," said the 27-year-old St. Louis native. "But, I always wanted the military experience."

McCarthy, who was 25 years old when he enlisted, said that he wanted to serve his country before the chance passed him by.

"I didn't want to be 40 years old and say 'I wish I would've done it,'" said the tall, slender Marine.

McCarthy's degree in business management gives him an advantage which aids his leadership abilities as a Marine and infantryman, said 1st Sgt. Thomas Murphy, Headquarters Co. first sergeant at 1/3.

"Cpl. McCarthy is an outstanding leader. He's not afraid to go against the popular decision and make the right one," Murphy said. "He does whatever he needs to do to get things done."

Although McCarthy's actions may not make him the most popular Marine, he positively influences his peers and junior Marines.

"He's awesome to work with and he's an excellent leader," said Cpl. Tommy Goodson, 1st squad leader with A Co., 1/3. "He makes less motivated Marines strive to do better by setting a good example for them."

"I try to be a role model for Marines," said the motivated McCarthy. "Not only those in my squad or platoon, but all those around me."

On Oct. 5, McCarthy was rewarded for his outstanding leadership when Lt. Gen. Frank Libutti, 3rd Marine Expeditionary Force commanding general, awarded him a Navy/Marine Corps Achievement Medal.

"I wasn't really expecting it," McCarthy said. "I don't think it was for one specific thing I did, but it was nice getting it."

McCarthy's future in the Marine Corps may have him sharing his leadership traits with a larger number of enlisted Marines — he recently submitted a package to enter the Enlisted Commissioning Program.

While the future may still be uncertain for McCarthy, there is one certainty — he will continue to do his best.

"When one of my superiors comes up to me and says, 'Cpl. McCarthy, do this', I see it as my reputation is going on the line," McCarthy said.

Dolphin Delights

Dream Cruises delivers day with dolphins

Cpl. Barry Melton
Combat Correspondent

WAIANAE — Dolphins are animals that ignite excitement and curiosity in everyone. Their playful and friendly nature, intelligence and beauty draw crowds to marine life feature parks worldwide. If man lived in the sea, a dolphin might be much like the dog — man's best friend.

Not many people, however, get to see these animals in their natural habitat. Dream Cruises Honolulu allows people that chance of a lifetime.

A Dream Cruises boat departs from Waianae Boat Harbor around 9 a.m. and sails up the Leeward coast to Yokohama Bay, a prime feeding ground for Hawaiian spinner dolphins.

"We usually see groups of about 15 or 20 every time we go out," said Mineko Davison, a cruise attendant. "But sometimes, we see more than 100 dolphins in a group."

If guests don't see dolphins, they receive a "Dolphin Pass" allowing them to sail again for free.

"Sometimes it's real active and sometimes it's not," said Rick Wiemken, a boat captain with Dream Cruises. "It can be really unpredictable, but we usually always see good groups of dolphins."

Dolphins aren't the only sea life guests encounter. Other animals seen on the tour include sea turtles, flying fish and the occasional group of Pacific Bottlenose dolphins.

Tickets for the cruise can be purchased at the ITT Office on MCB Hawaii for a special military rate. For directions to the harbor and reservations, call Dream Cruises at 592-5200.

Youths captain boats after school

Cpl. M.V. Trindade
Combat Correspondent

The after school Junior Sailing program held at the Marina here offers youth, ages 8-18, the opportunity to captain their own boats and build their confidence and self esteem.

Classes meet from 2:30 - 5:30 p.m., Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, for three weeks and teach kids the different parts of a boat and sailing basics, both in a classroom environment and hands on with a boat.

"We're on the boat the very first day," said Trea Carmichael, sailing instructor at the Marina. "I like a lot of hands on because some people learn easier that way."

The program has been around for years, Carmichael said, but it's been picking up lately because of newfound parental interest.

"Parents want to put their kids in a positive program," Carmichael explained. "We have parents who tell us their kids aren't involved in anything and, as a result, have very few friends. This is a way for the kids to build confidence and meet new people."

Once the children have a working knowledge of the boats, they are put out to sail, with an instructor beside them in a safety boat. Having the children take command of the boats by themselves helps raise their self-esteem, according to Carmichael.

"Some of the kids are really enthusiastic when they first get out there," said Stephan Kane, a junior sailor who's also an assistant instructor at the Marina. "Some others are nervous, but then they get used to it and enjoy it because they get to understand the boat."

A fear of capsizing seems to be very common among the new students, according to junior sailor 10-year-old Harry Sprague V, who's been sailing seven years. This fear usually subsides after students get classes on how to capsize and upright a boat, Carmichael said.

The classes cost $65 and are taught by a certified instructor. Prospective students must be able to swim 50 ft. and tread water for 1 minute. For more information contact the Marina at 254-7667.

Headhunters reign, 24-7

The Headquarters Battalion Headhunters mauled the Marine Aircraft Landing Support Element, Kaneohe Tsunamis, 24-7, in intramural football action at Pop Warner Field here Monday night.

The Headhunters went into playoff action Monday undefeated and looked to put another notch on their belt of victories, but the Tsunamis, who were 8-2 in the regular season, had other plans. Early in the game, receiver

Dustin Cook scored the first touchdown, but MALSEK quickly recovered, scoring a touchdown of their own via Tsunami receiver Doc Odum.

The teams were neck-and-neck until Headhunters' receiver Derek "Biggie" Small caught a touchdown pass late in the 1st half to give Headquarters Bn. the lead.

The Tsunamis' fate was further sealed in the second half when their offense was stopped at the 10-yard-line when Headhunter defensive lineman Nathan Nosek intercepted a Tsunami pass and ran it back 20 yards.

A couple plays later, quarterback Robert "X" Ixtlahuac slipped through the Tsunamis end zone to get the touchdown, giving Headquarters Bn. the 24-7 lead.

Despite their victory, the Headhunters said they were not satisfied with their performance.

"We played well, but not to our full potential," said Headhunters coach Lamarr Crouch. "Offensively, it was an outstanding game, though."

"We did alright, the offense came through for us," said Cook. "We weren't on top of our game. We've got to play smarter."

 Weldon Johnson, 25, from Washington, D.C., approaches the finish line to win this year's Marine Corps Marathon.

D.C. native wins '98 Marine Corps Marathon

Cpl. Matt Griffin
 Combat Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The 23rd Annual Marine Corps Marathon began at 8:30 a.m. in Washington, D.C., Oct. 25 with a shot from the starting pistol of the official starter, the Secretary of Defense, William S. Cohen.

A bright, sunny morning sky saw more than 16,000 runners take to the roads of our nation's capital for the fourth largest marathon in the United States.

The winner of the 1998 "People's Marathon" was Weldon Johnson of Washington, D.C., who crossed the finish line at 2 hours, 25 minutes, 30seconds.

"I've been running all my life," said the 25 year-old Johnson, who only decided to run this marathon at the end of August.

"I always thought the marathon would be my best race," commented Johnson. "Everyone was real supportive; there were lots of people out there."

Johnson began the race with his twin brother Robert, who ran the first several miles, and later switched to a bicycle to catch up with his brother and lend moral support.

Johnson, who led throughout most of the race, didn't think he had much of a lead, but by the end of the race he'd opened up more than a mile on the second place runner, Mark Croasdale, who finished with a time of 2:31:32.

"I looked back, but I didn't see anyone, so I slowed down a bit," said Johnson, who said although it was hot, the weather didn't discourage him. "I was hoping to win, and it turned out great."

The winner in the female category was Air Force Maj. Kimberly Markland of Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, who finished with a time of 2:49:07.

Markland said she was unfazed by the warm conditions on the course. "I just tried to focus on my pace and hang in there, and it paid off. I said to one of the guys next to me, 'I hope I can keep this up and win this, because this is a heck of a lot of fun.'"

However, the thought of being the first female to cross the finish line wasn't enough for Markland, because she was running for two.

"This was for Patrick. I kept saying to myself this race was for Patrick," said Markland after the race. "He was a Marine who was a patient of mine when I was at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. Four years ago I placed third in this marathon, and he was in the hospital at the time. He was suffering from leukemia, and he'd always wanted to run this marathon. He said, 'Boy I'll tell you, I'll get better, and next year we'll run it together.' I said, 'Give yourself two years.' But unfortunately he didn't make it. This is the first time I've run it since then, and the whole time I kept saying 'I'm going to win this for Patrick.'"

Give credit where it's due to NFL players, teams

Staff Sgt. Luis P. Valdespino Jr.
Press Chief

The NFL is at the half-way point in the season, and it's time to give credit where it's due.

From the stand-out players in the league, to the stand-out teams, those who have consistently dominated rate some recognition.

If you look at what is arguably the one division that is most up for grabs, the American Football Conference East, you must recognize the Magic Man — Doug Flutie.

After starting the season on the bench and watching his Buffalo Bills start 0-3, Flutie has led his team to a tie for the division lead with a 5-3 record. And the former Canadian Football League quarterback is rated as the top passer in the AFC, with a 102.7 quarterback rating.

Credit must also be given to the Miami Dolphins defense. They have given up a league-low 109 points — 30 of those were in one game (last week against Flutie's Bills).

In the AFC Central, Jacksonville has only hit road bumps against Buffalo and Denver, which are both respectable teams. The 6-2 Jaguars appear to be on their way to competing for the AFC championship.

The Denver Broncos, as the predictable defending Super Bowl champions, are the only undefeated team in the NFL. It hasn't hurt them that their leading rusher — the NFL's leading rusher, Terrell Davis, is averaging 5.7 yards per carry.

With 1,150 rushing yards to date, Davis is on pace to finish the season with 2,300 yards.

In what is arguably the toughest division in pro football, the National Football Conference East, the Dallas Cowboys are once again on top. Ignore the fact that the combined record of the division is 14-26. Ignore the fact that two NFC East teams are 1-7, and ignore that only the Cowboys have a winning record in the division.

The NFC East is still the only division in pro football that has produced five Super Bowl Champions during the 1990s (N.Y. Giants '91, Washington Redskins '92, Dallas Cowboys '93, '94 and '96). And just the aura of championships is enough to make the division tough and deserving of maybe a little extra credit.

However you look at the NFC East, you will notice that the Cowboys are continuing to improve through the season, and will likely be a team to look for in the post-season. Quarterback Troy Aikman is back; cornerback Deion Sanders is playing up to his "Prime Time" moniker, excelling as punt returner, cornerback and wide receiver; running back Emmitt Smith is averaging 4.3 yard per carry; and wide receiver Michael Irvin is averaging 14.9 yards per catch on 41 receptions. And don't forget about the Dallas defense — it has given up only 115 points, second fewest in the league, and 30 less than any other NFC team.

As for the NFC Central, the Minnesota Vikings still lead the division and the Green Bay Packers by a game, even after the upset loss to Tampa Bay last weekend.

Like the Bills, the Vikings are dominating with back-up quarterback Randall Cunningham at the helm. Cunningham, by the way, leads the league with a quarterback rating of 114.3.

The Vikings appear ready to vie for their first Super Bowl win ever.

As amazing as it seems, the Atlanta Falcons share the NFC West division lead with the San Francisco 49ers. Credit quarterback Chris Chandler for playing efficient football, and credit coach Dan Reeves for making a team of average players look like they can be competitive.

As for the San Francisco 49ers, their offense, led by quarterback Steve Young, is the top passing offense in the league, averaging 310 passing yards per game. Look for the 49ers to continue to be a tough team to beat this season. But with Steve Young already having been sacked 28 times this season (second-most behind St. Louis Ram Tony Banks (29)), don't be surprised if the 49ers finish the season with a back-up quarterback starting.

Finally, give credit to Charles Garcia, who picked 10 of the 14 games correctly last week to join the ranks of the two-time Hawaii Marine Football Pool winners.

Let's move on to the second half of the season.

Game of the week:

Tennessee at Tampa Bay
Atlanta at NEW ENGLAND — Look for the defense attorneys Ty Law and Lawyer Maloney to rack up more interceptions for the Patriots. New England Patriots are looking for more consistency on their offense — they have a shot to show some here.

Buffalo at N.Y. Jets — The Jets are playing good ball, but they don't have the Magic Man. Doug Flutie leads the Buffalo Bills to their 6th consecutive victory.

Carolina at San Francisco — This is not the same Carolina team that beat San Francisco as an expansion team, but Steve Beuerlein will keep the Panthers competitive in this loss to the 49ers.

Cincinnati at Jacksonville — The Jaguars will get a battle from the Bengals, but Neil O'donnell and his crew will remind Cincinnati fans what it was like to have Dave Shula as a head coach — they will keep a "2" on their win column.

Detroit at Philadelphia — Detroit running back Barry Sanders, who has an NFC leading 872 rushing yards, may catch up to Terrell Davis in this game. The "Iggles" will continue to hope for an early end to the season.

Indianapolis at MIAMI — Dan Marino will keep the Dolphins in a tie for the AFC East lead with a win.

Kansas City at SEATTLE — The Chiefs no longer appear to enjoy playing — much less winning. Seattle Seahawks will be happy to oblige by handing Kansas City another loss.

New Orleans at MINNESOTA — The Vikings will rebound with another great passing performance by Randall Cunningham and his receiving crew. Look for newly-elected governor — former pro wrestler Jesse "the Body" Ventura to watch the game from a luxury box in the Metrodome.

N.Y. Giants at DALLAS — Prime Time will happily give the Giants a private showing of the talents he displayed for Philly Monday Night. The Cowboys will stay undefeated against NFC East opponents.

OAKLAND at Baltimore — Oakland has only scored one point more than they've given up this season, but their 6-2 record will improve after this visit to Baltimore.

St. Louis at CHICAGO — Both teams have played tough, even in their losses, but the home team will win this game.

San Diego at DENVER — The Broncos will show Denver fans their appreciation for the new stadium Denver voted for this week.

Washington at ARIZONA — Arizona will remind Washington that one win does not a good football team make.

TENNESSEE at Tampa Bay — This Sunday night thriller will showcase the young talents of the Oilers, and make Tennessee fans appreciate the team they took from Houston.

GREEN BAY at Pittsburgh — the Pittsburgh Steelers miss Offensive Coordinator Chan Gailey. They also miss all the defensive players they have given up in the last couple years. And the Steelers will miss quarterback Terry Bradshaw in this huge home loss. 52 points.

GOBLIN GALLOP

Joseph Jolley, 2, has all eight legs in high gear as he shuffles to claim his third place prize in the zero to five-year-old category of the Goblin Gallop costume contest.

Haylie Rendon, 15 months, sits with mother Sarah before the costume contest.

A costumed crowd of parents and children gathered at Youth Activities here Oct. 31 to participate in the Goblin Gallop, an MWR event for families to celebrate Halloween. Activities offered to the disguised youngsters were a costume contest, magic show and 2.2 mile fun run/walk, the Goblin Gallop.

The fifth annual installment of the event has become popular enough to "run itself," according to Marlana Kelly, youth activities coordinator. McDonald's restaurants helped sponsor the event by supplying prizes for the costume contest and at predetermined points along the race route, Kelly said.

Little goblins, ghouls and ghosts competed in a costume contest, which awarded pint-sized trick-or-treaters prizes in three categories and three age groups.

Jacob Neubert, 6, won second place, most original costume, for his impersonation of a beehive.

Craft Fair

More than 40 island artisans will line the courtyard in front of Mokapu Mall at the K-Bay Fall Craft Fair Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. It's one-stop shopping for unique gifts, colorful collectibles, Hawaiian memorabilia, creative novelties, unusual crafts, house plants and many more types of keepsakes. Pony rides and game booths will keep the keiki entertained while the adults browse through the booths. All shoppers will have a chance to win great door prizes, including a $25 gift certificate to Assaggio Restaurant, dinner and lunch for two at Cisco's Cantina, dinner for two at Yum Yum Tree, a $25 gift certificate for Picket Fence Florist and a $25 gift certificate for Cinnamon's restaurant. For more information, call Youth Activities at 254-7610.

Think Thanksgiving

Now that Halloween is behind us, let's move on to Thanksgiving. Fairway's Thanksgiving turkey dinner take-out proved so popular last year that they are offering it again. For $39.95, a complete dinner can be served hot at your table, for up to eight people on Thanksgiving day. The meal includes a 12- to 14-pound turkey, stuffing, gravy, masked potatoes, hot vegetable, dinner rolls, cranberry sauce and a mouth-watering pumpkin pie. Get your order in while supplies last. Reserve your dinner before Friday and received a free six-pack of soda. To place your order, call Fairways at 254-5592.

Horsing Around

Nov. 15 is Camp Smith Stables' Year-end Schooling Show. Starting at 9:30 a.m., students from classes in English and Western disciplines will perform and compete in the different techniques in horse handling. After the show, students will put on a display of mounted games. The Schooling Show is an enjoyable Sunday pastime for the entire family. For more information, call the stables at 484-9417.

Kick Boxing Class

If regular aerobics aren't enough of a challenge, you should try this special free Cardio Kick Boxing Class. Held Nov. 14 from 8:30-9:30 a.m. at the Semper Fit Center's state of the art aerobics room, this non-contact class demands lots of high energy arm and leg movements and powerful steps. This trial class is offered to determine interest and may be added to the aerobics program. All eligible users of the Semper Fit Center are invited to try out this new workout routine. The aerobics room can comfortably accommodate 50 people. For more information, call the Semper Fit Center at 254-7597.

Youth Basketball League Opens

The K-Bay youth basketball team is open for registration now through Nov. 20 at Youth Activities. Registration fee is $35. Late entrants will be charged an additional $5. The K-Bay team will compete in the state's Hawaii Youth Sports League, and the season runs Jan. 9 through Feb. 27. Aspiring basketball players will be trained and coached on base. Practice begins Dec. 7. There are nine divisions available for youth ages 6 to 18. This event is sponsored by Windward Community Federal Credit Union. For more information, call Youth Activities at 254-7612.
