Coming together to train for the worst

When 9-1-1 isn't enough, rescuers call on New Jersey Task Force One.

With the help of the New Jersey Army National Guard aviation team, more than 210 members of Task Force One (NJ-TF1) tested their range of expertise on April 15 to 17 at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst.

"It's about coming together in people's worst times and coming together to save lives," said Laura A Connolly, the public information officer for NJOEM. "It's that calling to be part of something remarkable. You have to have the dedication."

The mission of Task Force One is to insure the development and delivery of emergency management programs which will serve New Jersey's community members before, during and after a disaster, she said.

The 150th Assault Helicopter Battalion used a pair of UH-60 Black Hawk helicopters to airlift 40 members of the urban search and rescue unit from their headquarters on Lakehurst to the range area of Fort Dix. Along for the ride were several live-find canines joining the task force volunteers.

During the exercise, the aviators sling loaded a box of search and rescue equipment for the New Jersey State Troopers assigned to the Office of Emergency Management. A UH-72 Lakota helicopter from the 1-224th Security and Support Battalion flew overhead to provide aerial reconnaissance for the search and rescue exercise.

The sheer volume of preparing for anything, anywhere, anytime is a tremendous obstacle, and it's made more complicated by the fact that the volunteers have to make time for training around their regular occupations.

"We focus on the greatest challenges to the state of NJ," Connolly said. "If we prepare for all hazards and if we can increase preparedness for 'noticed' and 'non-noticed' events then it will put the public in a better position.

New Jersey State Police Lt. Douglas Lemanowicz said that whether it's a hurricane that is coming five days away, a tornado that no one saw coming or an attack that leaves the nation reeling, Task Force One is always getting ready.

"We try to be diligent as well as honest with our capabilities," he said. "We try to prove that we are who we say we are. We are never satisfied, because the next

The weekend event is the first for Operation Derecho as several training exercises are planned for the year.

HOMES RECOGNIZE VOLUNTEERS

Photos by Kryn Westhoven, New Jersey Department of Military and Veterans Affairs Public Affairs

April is volunteer month and all three veteran memorial homes held events to honor the volunteers that set these homes apart from other long-term care facilities. The Menlo Park luncheon, left, started and finished with the John Basilone Marine Corps League honor guard. In Paramus, Frank Calandrillo, Chairman of the home's Advisory Board, lower left, presented two checks, from the Ladies Auxiliary of American Legion Post 221 in Richfield for $200 and $2,000 donations from past Department of New Jersey American Legion commander Mike Wilson. Allyson Bailey, Vineland CEO, below, presented the Volunteer of the Year award to Catherine Sullivan, center, with help from state Senator Jeff Van Drew. In total, volunteers volunteered nearly 70,000 hours, worth more than $1.5 million in saved wages while civic and veteran organizations donated $249,781 in goods or services.

The Center for Entrepreneurial Studies

RIDER UNIVERSITY VETERAN ENTREPRENEURSHIP PROGRAM

The Center for Entrepreneurial Studies at Rider University is offering a free Veteran Entrepreneurship Training Program beginning in the summer of 2016 that will guide veterans who want to start or expand a business.

Participants will develop a business plan to explore a venture idea or expand an existing business.

The program consists of nine weeks of classroom training taught by professors from Rider's entrepreneurship department, conducted in two phases. Phase one develops the business concept and is a pre-requisite for continuing with phase two, the rest of the program. Each participant will also receive one year of mentoring as they pursue their venture dreams.

Class size is limited to 20 students to allow for instructor feedback and individualized attention.

This program is made possible by a generous grant from Grand Bank, N.A., who shares our vision of helping foster veterans' personal and professional growth through entrepreneurial training. Other support provided by the NJ Bankers Education Foundation, Inc., Saul Ewing LLP law firm, and Wilkin & Guttenplan, PC accounting firm.

Applications must be submitted online at
