U.S. Navy photo by MC3 Arnesia McIntyre

Naval Air Station Key West will see more activity as the 314th Fighter Squadron from Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico, has arrived for training with F-16 Falcons. The squadron will join F/A-18 Super Hornets, EA-2C Hawkeyes, EA-18G Growlers, ATAC Hawker Hunters and Fighter Squadron Composite (VFC) 111 F5-N Tigers already on Boca Chica Field. Also arriving in the upcoming week for training are F-15 Eagles and F-22 Raptors.

Aviators perish in training crash off Boca Chica Field

BY JOLENE SCHOLL
Southernmost Flyer

Naval authorities have released the names of the two aviators who perished when the F/A-18F they were flying crashed on approach to Boca Chica Field Wednesday.

Lt. Cmdr. James Johnson and Lt. Caleb King were less than a mile east of the installation and attempting to land when the Super Hornet crashed about 4:30 p.m. The pair was assigned to Strike Fighter Squadron (VFA) 213 from Naval Air Station Oceana, Virginia. NAS Key West Search and

Medical Center where they were pronounced deceased. "Our thoughts and prayers are with their shipmates, families and friends," said NAS Key West Commanding Officer Capt. Bobby Baker. "When we pin on our Wings of Gold we know the mission - in combat and in training - can be dangerous, yet we are wholly committed to serving this great nation. In doing so, we sometimes lose our best."

On Thursday, the squadron took time to remember their shipmates while the remaining squadrons attached to Carrier Air Wing (CVW) Eight returned to the skies. The air wing's five squadrons, consisting of F/A-18 Super Hornets, E-2C Hawkeyes and EA-18G Growlers, will complete the mission sustainment exercises next week.

As training continues, military officials have begun investigating the cause of the crash.

Overcoming obstacles

Coast Guard Sector Key West is currently hosting "Financial Peace Military," a nine-week stewardship training course that empowers service members to take responsibility, strategically remove debt and build wealth.

The program, developed by Dave Ramsey, uses the example of Belgian Draft horses and what they can accomplish when they work as a unified team.

One Belgian can pull 8,000 pounds; two that are strangers to each can pull 20,000 - 24,000 pounds as a team. This example represents the power of synergy. Conversely, two horses that are raised and trained together, thus unified, can pull 30,000 - 32,000 pounds - almost four times as much as a single horse.

I have heard this before but the reminder made me think of one of the biggest problems I see as a chaplain. The lack of unity among the community of man is a stumbling block, an obstacle that Satan puts on those of faith.

I see it daily as I talk with people who are struggling with horrible experiences, PTSD, depression, anger and other taboos in our society.

The culprit is secrecy.

Many people are struggling with these issues in secret and cannot tell anyone what they are going through. In turn, they continue to struggle, feel alone and not have anyone in whom they can confide.

There is a cure, a remedy, a way to overcome the loneliness. I think if we could all be comfortable enough to share our deepest secrets we could use the synergy that comes from being stronger as a team to make the world a better place.

Most 12-step addiction recovery programs use this or a similar method. They have an accountability partner, a sponsor or someone you can talk to anytime need.

Why? Because humans were designed to be with other humans; we are 'pack' animals, created with a need for social interaction. We are made to have people surrounding us and supporting each other.

In the book of Proverbs verse 27:17 says, "As iron sharpens iron, so one person sharpens another."

I want to encourage you to find a close friend in whom you can confide. If that is not currently feasible, and you need to talk, please reach out to one of your chaplains.

Chaplains can be a sounding board, counselor, friend; the best part is we come with complete confidentiality. There is nothing that you tell a chaplain in confidence that will be reported.

If you are in need of chaplain care, your chaplains are available by calling 305-293-2318, Naval Air Station Key West, or 305-292-8788, Coast Guard Sector Key West.

NAS welcomes new command ombudsmen

BY MC3 ARNESIA MCINTYRE
Southernmost Flyer

Elizabeth Bruhl, wife of AMC Michael Bruhl, and Ashlhea Demianovich, wife of AC2 Max Demianovich, have been selected to serve as the communication link between the commanding officer and family members, and as information and referral specialists.

We call them “ombudsmen.”

“As one of the command’s ombudsmen, I get to be involved with the community my husband works for and serves,” said Demianovich, who will maintain the ombudsman Facebook page. “I’m excited to do the social media side.”

A command ombudsman is a volunteer position appointed by the base commanding officer, usually filled by the spouse of an enlisted service member.

One of their roles is to act as a liaison; the ombudsman is a full member of the commanding officer’s team. Ombudsmen attend a 40-hour training session to teach them the basic skills needed for the job.

Ombudsmen are not paid for their services; although they are reimbursed for any authorized expenses, such as mileage, childcare and office supplies.

It may not sound like much, but the real payback is in the satisfaction of helping other command family members.

They also gain skills and experience that will ben-the water where it crashed and will stay there until a Mishap Investigation Board (MIB) conducts its investigation,” according to Cmdr. Dave Hecht, Naval Air Force Atlantic public affairs officer.

“The MIB consists of highly qualified Naval officers with extensive experience in all aspects of aviation,” Hecht noted. “The MIB will thoroughly examine previous aircraft maintenance, number of hours flown on the aircraft, physical condition of the aircrew and their activities previous to the accident.”

On Thursday Baker issued a notice that the area surrounding the crash was off-limits to all civilians, boaters or other personal water craft, and air craft.

“We’re asking the public not to boat near the area as the crash is under investigation and the site needs to be preserved and protected,” said Baker.

“Additionally, combat air training has resumed so it’s imperative civilian aircraft remain clear of military airspace,” he added.

Security forces have been assigned to the crash scene to enforce the current restrictions and ensure a safe environment for the ongoing investigation and for the aircraft’s recovery. That recovery will include consideration of the environment, as Boca Chica Field is located with the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary.

Naval Facilities Engineering Command Southeast has a Navy on-scene coordinator to oversee emergency environmental impacts and make decisions on the best way to remediate or mitigate environmental hazards, said NAVFAC Southeast Public Affairs Officer Sue Brink.

“These hazards may be caused by circumstances such as aircraft mishaps or hurricanes. The goal is to restore the impact to the pre-existing condition and to coordinate the overall Navy response.

“This includes close coordination with other Navy entities, state, local and federal stakeholders and possibly outside agency contractors,” Brink said.

AIRLANT, NAVFAC Southeast, Commander Navy Region Southeast and NAS Key West are working together to keep the public informed, maintain the integrity of the environment and ensure the safety of aircrew and Sailors training at Boca Chica Field.
