His visit was brief but historic. President of the United States Donald J. Trump's arrival at Naval Air Station Key West's Boca Chica Field Thursday came more than five decades after the last visit of a sitting president.

Photo archives show arrivals by President Harry Truman, President Dwight D. Eisenhower and President John F. Kennedy, who was the last to visit in November 1962.

After landing, he shook hands with service members and DOD civilians before being whisked by motorcade to Truman Annex for a briefing from Joint Interagency Task Force South, U.S. Northern Command and U.S. Southern Command.

The whirlwind visit ended with Air Force One off the ground and in the air by 2:30 p.m.

recognition of SAAPM.

The campaign was originally triggered by a ruling made by the Italian Supreme Court. Justices overturned a rape conviction because they believed the victim, who was wearing tight jeans, assisted her rapist by removing her jeans and thereby implied consent. The following day, the women
