Dahlgren Employees Share Their Careers and Advice at King George Middle School Career Day

By BARBARA WAGNER
South Potomac Pilot

With professionals representing everything from florists to FBI agents, the King George Middle School Career Day demonstrated the vast array of employment opportunities to which the students could aspire. Within that plethora of representatives were employees from across Naval Support Facility (NSF) Dahlgren, including volunteers from the Naval Surface Warfare Center Dahlgren Division (NSWCDD), Naval Support Activity South Potomac (NSASP) and the Air Force 18th Space Control Squadron Detachment One (18th SPCS Det 1).

Lynne Keenan, NSASP Community Planning and Liaison Officer (CPLO), was on hand providing students with the scope of what her job entails and reminding them that there are so many other fields available outside of the ones they are familiar with in their own lives.

"Growing up, I always thought about the typical female career path, and there is nothing wrong with that, but I didn't even know this was a job opportunity until I went to college," Keenan said. "I believe if the children can get an early start and know what's out there, there are so many more jobs and so much more potential that they've never even heard of."

The 18th SPCS Det 1 was represented by Tech. Sgt. Brittany Spikowski and Airman Chanel Robbs, who displayed two early satellites and explained the function and mission of the unit: functioning as Distributive Space Command and Control-Dahlgren (DSC2-D) and serving as a Space Situational Awareness Command for the Air Force.

"I have a lot of pride in what I do and in my job," said Spikowski. "I think it's good to get out and share with the students what kind of careers are available in the military."

NSWCDD had two representatives on hand to present students with just a small sample of the many careers available through the organization.

In a conversation with Kristine Hill, supervisor of curriculum and instruction for the King George school district, Bryan Albin, program manager and network engineer at NSWCDD's Weapons Control and Integration Department, shared how his life was impacted by a volunteer who spoke at his high school during a career event.

CSCS announces its Headquarters 2017 Civilian of the Year

By KIMBERLY M. LANSDALE,
Center for Surface Combat Systems

The Center for Surface Combat Systems (CSCS) recently announced its Headquarters (HQ) Civilian of the Year (COY) for 2017.

Senior logistics management specialist, Mr. Zachary Loesche, was honored to be selected for the award.

"It is a great feeling to know that I work for an organization that recognizes its staff and their accomplishments," Loesche said. "I appreciate CSCS selecting me and it is an honor to represent our civilian workforce."

Loesche, who was selected as Civilian of the Quarter (COQ) for the first quarter of 2017, has been part of the CSCS community for 15 years.

"I have been a government civilian since April 2016 and prior to this position, I have supported both CSCS and one of its learning sites, AEGIS Training and Readiness Center (ATRC), since 2003 in military and industry roles," he explained.

As CSCS' senior logistics management specialist, Loesche manages the personal property management program as the CSCS domain accountable property officer and supports the management of the government commercial purchase card program.

"Additionally, I assist the CSCS infrastructure director with long range facility planning as well as furniture planning and procurement," Loesche explained. "I also interface with our parent command, Naval Education and Training Command (NETC), and other learning centers regarding our requirements for the development of the NETC training resource utilization system."

Loesche's supervisor, Mr. Mark Wright, CSCS infrastructure director, nominated him the award.

"Zack is a true professional, great teammate and vital to CSCS and the Navy," Wright said. "As the senior logistics management specialist, he has numerous responsibilities and takes great pride in his work. This award illustrates his many contributions to our mission and how he goes above and beyond the call of duty."

Ms. Robin Zapert, CSCS executive director (ED), says Loesche's quality of work is exceptional.

"I assumed the ED position in December of 2017 but even though I have only known Zack for a short period of time, his professionalism and work ethic are astounding and he is truly deserving of this award," she said.

DOSC 2018 Charitable Donation Deadline Approach

By BARBARA WAGNER
South Potomac Pilot

The Dahlgren Officers Spouses Club (DOSC) is accepting requests from non-profit organizations for funding, as well as applications for the Rosemarie Blades Honorary Scholarship from college-bound students. For the last 17 years, the club has offered assistance to students and organizations benefiting the military and civilian community.

"DOSC recognizes that there are many individuals and neighbors who benefit from the good work that non-profit organizations do for them," Debra Weeks, DOSC charities chair said. "A large part of our mission is to lift up our communities and provide a service that will help enable these critical resources to add much more value."

The organization also recognizes the importance of education and has assisted more than 48 students from all walks of life — children and spouses, homeschooled, public and private school, and around the globe including Japan and Portugal. The one thing they all have in common, however, is that at one time in their lives they were stationed at Naval Support Activity (NSF) Dahlgren. Having been stationed aboard Dahlgren is a criterion for students to apply for the scholarship and proof will need to be provided.

"The Dahlgren Officers Spouses Club started the Scholarship program for college-bound students back in 2000 and as of 2016, the group has awarded $99,000 to students that were selected by the DOSC committee," Rosemarie Blades said.

The awarded money is generated from sales made at the Second Tour Thrift Store located aboard Naval Support Facility (NSF) Dahlgren. Donations of gently-used goods are received from the community and sold at the store. The Second Tour Thrift Store is run strictly by DOSC volunteers. Currently, the thrift store is open on Thursday's, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"Even though the store is open for such a short period of time, DOSC members volunteer countless hours throughout the week sorting, hanging and displaying the items received. The volunteers work hard to both provide quality items for resale as well as raise as much as possible to give deserving students and non-profit organizations support in their endeavors. It's a win for all involved," Blades said.

Non-profit organizations may apply by sending a description of how your organization serves the community and/or local military and how the organization(s) will benefit.

Scholarship applications may be downloaded at <http://dahlgrenosc.webs.com/scholarshipsandcharities.htm>.

Mail entries to DOSC, Attn. Charities Committee, 722 Sampson Rd., Dahlgren, VA 22448. Entries for both scholarship applications and non-profit requests must be postmarked by March 26, 2018. For more information, call 757-576-7514.

Career Day

school I didn't know what I wanted to do for a career," Albin said. "I went to a career day event and met an electrical engineer who had graduated from Drexel University. As a result of that event, I ended up graduating as an electrical engineer from Drexel. I appreciated his time and guidance and helping me to understand what an electrical engineer is."

"We have a lot of students who don't know what they want to be and they are about to graduate," Hill agreed. "They are trying to figure out what that next step is and events like this are great stepping stones."

"I encourage the students to go to college and pursue a path that interests them," Albin said. "You may start off pursuing an engineering degree only to find out that you are interested in another career field. Be flexible. You want to enjoy your career that you will pursue for the next 40 years."

Hill agreed, noting, "You have to love what you're doing and how you're contributing. There's a lot of pressure [on the youngsters] to decide what they want to be."

"I was an electrical engineering undergraduate and I didn't have a detailed understanding of what kind of job or career I would have," Albin said. "For instance, I had no idea that I would ride ships in support of Navy testing or find my way to NSWC Dahlgren. It's been a great career path for me."

Steve Shannon, an engineer with NSWCDD's Warfare Systems Engineering and Integration Department, was also on hand with a number of projectiles, an unmanned aerial system (UAS) and other engaging objects that he and others at NSWCDD use daily in their careers on the base. Shannon, who also has a middle school-aged child, enjoys volunteering time to share with the students the various careers available on the base. He does have one other more personal reason he takes time out of his busy schedule to speak with the students.

"I do enjoy coming out to be a part of the career day," Shannon said. "I have a 14-year-old, and this is the one time of year she thinks I'm cool!"

Civilian

Capt. Frank X. Castellano, CSCS commanding officer, says Loesche was tasked with several essential projects in 2017.

"One of Zack's notable accomplishments this year was that he tracked all of our 14 learning sites and detachments' capital assets to ensure we were fiscally compliant," Castellano explained. "This was not an easy undertaking with over 750 capital assets. Because of his vigorous efforts, when one of our detachments was reviewed, we received a 100% in accuracy and completeness. Zack made a positive impact on our training mission and will continue to do so in years to come."

Loesche enjoys his job and says that the best part of his job is interfacing with various people throughout the Navy.

"I've had the pleasure of creating some exceptional relationships with personnel both inside and outside of the CSCS organization," he said. "It's also been extremely beneficial in helping me determine how to best integrate solutions for the projects I am working on for not only my department, but the domain as well."

CSCS' mission is to develop and deliver surface ship combat systems training to achieve surface warfare superiority. CSCS headquarters' staff oversees 14 learning sites and detachments, located throughout the continental United States, Hawaii, and Japan and manages and operates a Naval Education and Training Command (NETC) training division in Rota, Spain. CSCS provides over 538 courses, awards 114 different Navy Enlisted Classifications (NECs), and trains 37,400 Sailors a year. CSCS delivers specialized training for Officer and Enlisted Sailors required to tactically operate, maintain, and employ shipboard and shore-based weapons, sensors, and command and control systems utilized in today's Navy.

Secretary of the Navy Names Two Littoral Combat Ships

By SECNAV Public Affairs

On Feb. 13, Secretary of the Navy Richard V. Spencer announced the next Freedom and Independence variant Littoral Combat Ships will be named USS Nantucket (LCS 27) and USS Savannah (LCS 28).

The future USS Nantucket (LCS 27), a Freedom-variant Littoral

Combat Ship, will be the third commissioned U.S. Navy ship to honor the maritime history of Nantucket.

The future USS Savannah (LCS 28), an Independence-variant Littoral Combat Ship, is the sixth ship to bear the name of the oldest city in Georgia.

Nantucket will be built by Fincantieri Marinette Marine in Marinette, Wisconsin. Savannah will be built by Austal USA in Mobile, Alabama.

LCS is a modular, reconfigurable ship, designed to meet validated fleet requirements for surface warfare (SUW), anti-submarine warfare (ASW) and mine countermeasures (MCM) missions in the littoral region. An interchangeable mission package is embarked on each LCS and provides the primary mission systems in one of these warfare areas.

Department of the Navy Releases Fiscal Year 2019 Budget

From Navy Office of Information

The Department of the Navy released its proposed $194.1 billion (Base and Overseas Contingency Operations (OCO)) budget Feb. 12, for fiscal year (FY) 2019.

This budget is part of the $716 billion (Base and OCO) defense budget President Donald Trump submitted to Congress the same day.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Budget, Rear Adm. Brian Luther, briefed media during a Department of Defense press conference on the Navy and Marine Corps portion of the budget.

"Our ability to complete our mission rests on the entire Navy and Marine Corps team — Sailors and Marines, Active Duty and Reserve, our Civilian teammates and all our families," said Luther. "The Department is grateful for the increased funding and has worked diligently in this request to ensure the funding provided protection and sustains the readiness gains of FY18 and creates a balanced warfighting force with the capabilities needed for the fight and the capacity to win the fight."

This year's budget request is focused on restoring wholeness by growing the readiness, capability and capacity of the Navy and Marine Corps in an effort to build a more lethal, resilient and agile force to deter and defeat aggression by great power competitors and adversaries in all domains across the conflict spectrum. This force is necessary to fulfill the maritime responsibilities articulated in the National Defense Strategy.

Wholeness will be achieved by focusing on six specific dimensions: building a bigger, better, networked, talented, agile and ready fleet.

This budget includes a $63.4 billion (base and OCO) request for operation and maintenance, funding the maximum executable amounts for ship depot maintenance, aviation depot maintenance and the flight-hour program. The operation and maintenance request represents an emphasis on the importance of restoring wholeness to build capacity and improve lethality in the future.

The submission will build on current programs and invest in innovation to enable the Navy to compete in a fast-paced, complex global maritime environment — today and in the future. The submission includes a $58.5 billion (base and OCO) procurement budget that would buy 10 new ships and 54 ships across the Future Years Defense Plan (FYDP) and invest in high-tech systems including unmanned, cyber and directed energy weapons.

The 10 new ships the budget would purchase include three Arleigh Burke-class destroyers, two Virginia-class submarines, one littoral combat ship and one expeditionary staging base to prioritize stability in major combatant shipbuilding as the fleet continues to grow. Additionally, the budget funds the construction of 120 aircraft in FY19 and 655 aircraft across the FYDP.

By fully funding the Columbia-class SSBN program, the FY19 budget maintains the Navy's commitment to providing the nation with a credible and survivable sea-based strategic deterrent.

In order to meet dynamic changes in the security environment of today, this year's submission includes $18.6 billion for research and development, supporting the Navy-Marine Corps team of the future through technological advantages designed to counter adversaries in all environments and across all spectrums.

The budget supports our personnel by funding career-development initiatives and providing a 2.6 percent pay increase, while developing and procuring the most cutting-edge platforms and weapons available. It also continues to invest in Sailor 2025, to promote the transformation of internal business processes to improve service to Sailors, increase organizational agility and responsiveness and reduce cost.

Lastly and equally important, the Department of the Navy (DON) remains fully committed to the audit effort and transforming our business culture by adopting strong internal controls consistent with industry standards. Internal processes and programs were reviewed to achieve reform and funding savings over $5 billion across the FYDP. Our reform efforts continue to focus on improving organizational effectiveness; eliminating, restructuring or merging activities; and workforce management.

Highlights of the proposed DoD budget are outlined at <http://comptroller.defense.gov/BudgetMaterials.aspx>

The entire fiscal 2019 DON budget proposal may be viewed at www.finance.hq.navy.mil/fmb/PB/books.htm
