1BCT SHOWS PRES. TRUMP WE'RE MOUNTAIN TOUGH!

Our 1-87IN and 3-6FAR Soldiers showed President Donald Trump and Maj. Gen. Walter Piatt, 10th Mountain Division and Fort Drum Commander, what fast and lethal looks like with a Mountain Warrior air assault and gun raid demonstration during the POTUS visit, Aug. 13, 2018.

Now that Summer has ended here in the North County, let's take a look back at how 1BCT trained its Soldiers, honored local heroes and tested the mettle of its Officers. Photos from left are the 3-6 FAR Black Cat Ball Tournament, Bravo Battery, 3-6 FAR firing a 21-gun salute during President Trump's Fort Drum visit, and the Seneca Rocks Best Lieutenant Competition.

1BCT Runs Army Ten-Miler

FORT DRUM, N.Y. (Oct 8, 2018) -- Four 1st Brigade Combat Team, 10th Mountain Division Soldiers represented the “Mountain Warriors” in the Army Ten-Miler with their Fort Drum teammates in the Washington, D.C. classic, Sunday. The humid day fueled competitive grit in these infantry brigade Soldiers who are known for their “Find a Way or Make One” motto and “Ready Now” spirit. After the run, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Mark A. Milley, who is a former 10th MTN DIV and Fort Drum Commanding General, invited the Fort Drum team to his home and celebrated the occasion.

“I had a great time and I’m very happy I had the opportunity to run in Washington, D.C.,” said Capt. Le Mar Baliwag, Support Operations Officer, 10th Brigade Support Battalion, 1BCT. “General Milley gave us a grand tour and that was really awesome.”

Each of the runners drew their inspiration, motivation and drive from a different source.

“At 1st Brigade we are intensely busy,” said 1st Lt. John Brewer, Platoon Leader, 7th Engineer Battalion. We don’t just get it right the first time, we have to get it right every time. I equate it to long distance running. You have to have endurance.”

“I just love to compete,” said Baliwag. “Running with the team allows me to do that and better myself.”

Fort Drum provided solid proving grounds for 10th Mountain Division newcomers leading up to the Ten-Miler main event.

“I was surprised at the level of competition at Fort Drum,” said 1st Lt. Andrew Giller, Battery Executive Officer, 3rd Battalion, 6th Field Artillery Regiment. “I considered myself a fast runner and I barely made the team this year. The time trials proved to have a lot of tough competition and I found myself trying to chase people down one by one.”

“The Fort Drum competition was stiff,” echoed Baliwag. “There are several ex-collegiate athletes on the team and a lot of gifted runners. I like being surrounded by these guys because it helps me push harder.”

The Soldiers noted that Fort Drum’s long, brutal “North Country” winters present additional challenges for competitive athletes.

“During the winters, the treadmill or the cold need to become your best friends,” said Giller.

“This will be my first Fort Drum winter,” said Baliwag, who formerly ran for the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii. “I heard cross country skiing and snow shoeing is a good workout. I plan on getting a trainer to help increase my cardio when it gets too frigid.”

Brewer expressed that his desire to run was rooted in something stronger than the challenges of extreme weather.

“I feel it’s primal,” said Brewer. “We are hunters and we are meant to run. It’s what I was meant to do. If you have your cardio right you can’t go wrong.”

1BCT Runs Army Ten-Miler

As light infantrymen, 1BCT Soldiers fight on their feet when defeating foes on the battle field in any environment on the planet, and that elite level performance helps to consistently produce some of the best competitors in the Army Ten-Miler.

The biggest impression made on the runners was their new-found camaraderie hundreds of miles away from their upstate New York community, and the strong support from thousands of spectators in the nation's capital.

"It is incredible to see so many people from across the Army and nation come together to race or to cheer on racers," said Giller. "The energy during the race was awesome and there was always someone out there motivating you to keep going."

1BCT Rocks the Best Lieutenant Competition

FORT DRUM, N.Y. (Sep. 6, 2018) -- The 1st Brigade Combat Team, 10th Mountain Division (LI), launched its first OPERATION SENECA ROCKS Best Lieutenant Competition at Fort Drum, Aug. 29. The competition's name pays homage to the Seneca Rocks, West Virginia, training area where, from 1943 through 1944, 10th Mountain Soldiers validated their mountain warfare training to earn the Division's "Mountain" tab insignia. The Soldiers validated at Seneca Rocks went on to seize German artillery positions on Riva Ridge in the Apennine Mountains of Italy during World War II.

Twelve teams from across the BCT's seven battalions participated in the event, which focused on training fundamentals through testing eight warrior tasks: Land Navigation; Call for Fire; Recognition of Combat Vehicles (ROC-V); Chemical, Biological, Radiological, and Nuclear (CBRN); Weapons Assembly; Vehicle Maintenance; Radio Communication, and Combat Casualty Care. After completing the hands-on testing, each leader took an individual written test to complete the competition. During the exam the BCT Commander greeted and spoke to all participants, and provided insight to their future operations while fielding their questions.

“Competitions bring out the best in our Soldiers,” said Col. Shane Morgan, Commander of 1BCT, 10th MTN DIV. “Although these tasks are fundamental skills, we don’t perform them every day and we need to practice. No different than high school, college, or a professional sports team, you must practice the basics, and we must have multiple repetitions before executing under pressure. The best lieutenant competition serves as a way to train our leaders on the basic tasks that every Soldier must know, and those critical tasks that every Soldier must feel confident executing while under pressure.”

Soldiers raced against the clock to eight warrior task stations throughout Fort Drum, where they were graded on demonstrated skill level. Teams were also tasked with physical exercises between stations to increase the challenge.

“We were pushed to our physical limits and I enjoyed it,” said 1LT Bradley Davidson, troop executive officer, 3rd Squadron, 71st Cavalry Regiment. “We had to treat multiple mock casualties, which is something we rarely get to do.”

“I thought it was great to get back to the basics,” said 1st Lt. Lyle Regalado, platoon leader, 3rd Battalion, 71st Cavalry Regiment. “Sometimes platoon leaders and company executive officers can be so far removed that we may not practice things such as MOPP (mission orientated protective posture) gear for the chemical lane”.

First Lieutenants Jonathan McElroy and Nathan Dow, both of 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, credited their team’s victory to practice and competition.

“This event was very competitive, and great for anyone who has a competitive nature,” said McElroy.

“Competition forces you to prove your greatness, and prepares us for the fight ahead,” said Dow. “We should always work towards being more lethal on the battle field. War is high stakes and we’re ready now.”

The event was also a strong measure of the ability to lead Soldiers by example.

1BCT Rocks the Best Lieutenant Competition

"The Seneca Rocks competition provided the opportunity for lieutenants to show they are as technically and tactically proficient as the Soldiers they lead," said Command Sgt. Maj. Wendell Franklin, 1BCT, 10th MTN DIV. "There is no greater inspiration than leaders who routinely share in their team's hardships. The hardship and training they put themselves through in this event not only inspired their own Soldiers, it also inspired everyone in this Brigade Combat Team."

Completing the competition also gave Soldiers a chance to reflect on the opportunity to lead and the importance of consistent improvement.

"I believe it is our privilege to lead Soldiers," said 2nd Lt. Melissa Lara, 1st Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment. "This event was great because it helped me improve as a leader and my Soldiers will be better for it."

"This was a reminder to always challenge ourselves," said 1st Lt. Jeffrey Davenport, 10th Brigade Support Battalion, 1BCT. "Gaining better self-awareness is a big part of being a leader, and I think it's going to help me and my Soldiers driving forward."

How Will You Finish?

"March Madness!", the Little League World Series, Major League Baseball Playoffs, and the Super Bowl- These are incredible sporting events. Personally, I think that anyone would be hard pressed to match the excitement of college football with anything else. Every week, fans debate the College Football polls as they anxiously anticipate the playoffs.

Every season people talk about who's hot and who's not in the world of college football. All angles of analysis are done, offensive and defensive statistics dissected, and winning and losing streaks evaluated. Every element of the game is scrutinized week in and week out, in the hope of finding the elusive stat that may reveal who will be in the championship game and finish #1.

Throughout the weeks and days leading up to the big game, fans, commentators and analysts talk incessantly about how one team can "make a run" and how another team just doesn't have what it takes to make a serious go for the prize.

The Christian scriptures says a great deal about living our lives with endurance and perseverance and finishing strong. In Hebrews, chapter 12 we read "let us also lay aside every encumbrance...which so easily entangles us, and let us run with endurance the race that is set before us."

I want to challenge you to examine your life to see how you match up. Do it with the same effort and attention that is given to the most minuscule things throughout the college football season. I'm not talking about matching or comparing your strengths and weaknesses with someone else. Rather, how do you match up against yourself and who you want to be and who you think you are...more so, who God has created you to be?

In the spirit of competition, I challenge you to "press on" and "run the good race." Evaluate and compete only with yourself in order to win the prize that God has for you! If we run the race that God has set before us, we will be winners!
