"Having knowledgeable and educated military and civilians across all branches of the Department of Defense is important," Redmond said.

'By completing a degree, it shows that a member not only balanced their work and personal life to find the time to complete it, but it also allows our leaders to trust and empower us to accomplish the mission in a more effective and efficient manner," he added.

"These individuals that completed their degrees while serving are also setting a great example for their subordinates, peers, children and many others."

Redmond also encouraged anyone who intends on earning a degree in 2019 to watch for next year's event and sign up.

NAVSUP FLC Pearl Harbor Office of Corporate Communications

Naval Supply Systems Command (NAVSUP) Fleet Logistics Center (FLC) Pearl Harbor's Executive Director Scott Hedrick spoke at a National Disability Employment Awareness Month event at the State Capitol in Honolulu, Oct. 30.

More than 120 people filled the State Capitol auditorium. Hedrick shared NAVSUP FLC Pearl Harbor's key skills for disability employment successes, insights and advice. Then, he challenged all employers in the room.

"I challenge each and every employer to give these people with abilities a chance," Hedrick said. "These people want to work. They are going to work hard for you. Give them a chance."

Following the remarks, a reverse job fair was held where job candidates were given the opportunity to show employers a presentation board highlighting their potential.

In 2008, NAVSUP FLC Pearl Harbor established a partnership with the Hawaii Division of Vocational Rehabilitation to hire people with disabilities.

"Over the past 10 years, we have hired and retained 38 qualified vocational rehabilitation participants," Hedrick said.

"Each one of these employees have done extremely well and are high-performing workers," he added.

The Department of Defense (DoD) has been a leader in recognizing the strengths and values individuals with disabilities bring to the workforce.

The DoD remains diligent in providing every person opportunities for a meaningful career in a culture that embraces diversity and inclusivity.

JVEF celebrates education partnership with Hawaii's military

The Joint Venture Education Forum (JVEF), a cooperative partnership between Hawaii's military community, the Hawaii Department of Education (HIDOE) and other community organizations, highlighted success stories of Hawaii's military students and their families at its 17th annual meeting at the Salvation Army Kroc Center Hawaii, Oct. 25.

JVEF's mission is to facilitate the educational concerns and unique needs of military children and their families, such as transitioning to the islands, and to support Hawaii's public school students.

This year's theme is "Exemplifying Educational Excellence in the 21st Century.'

"JVEF symbolizes the strong partnership between the military community and the greater community as a whole, that includes the Depart- nership between the ment of Education, the business community and other supporters of all children of Hawaii," said David Tom, U.S. Indo-Pacific Command quality of life and education analyst and chair of the JVEF planning committee.

"It really is an honor and a privilege for the military to be a part of this partnership to serve all students in Hawaii."

The JVEF partnership between the Department of Education and Hawaii's military leadership continues to transform our schools in positive ways on behalf of our military-impacted students," said HI-DOE Superintendent Dr. Christina Kishimoto.

Hawaii has the highest number of military-dependent children per capita in the nation, representing approximately 15,000 students or eight-percent of the total student enrollment. The majority of these students attend 45 schools located on or near military installations in Oahu's Central, Leeward and Windward School Districts.

'Quality public schools is a very significant issue for our military families, and the Joint Venture Education Forum part-military community in Hawaii and the Hawaii Department of Education has truly strengthened our collective efforts to provide quality education opportunities for all Hawaii's public school students," said U.S. Navy Capt. Lyn Hammer, HI-DOE military liaison.

Awards were presented recognizing JVEF's outstanding civilian and military contributors whose efforts have had a significant impact on Hawaii's military and public school students.

"While many military volunteers take the opportunity to engage in community relations and volunteer projects during deployments around the world, many also enjoy a great sense of satisfaction that they are able to directly support their local communities here at home," said Melissa Johnson, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam school liaison officer.

Sailors and Airmen were among the 43 service members recognized for their dedicated volunteer work at Hawaii schools, who served as mentors for military-impacted students of all ages.

"I was a good athlete, but I really got into the NFL because I had great leadership," Hipple said.

"It is a big part of being a great team and taking the individual parts and figuring out how they work together to complete the mission. That's really where I think the key is, at the individual level. Hopefully I can give you some tools today to get there," he added.

Hipple mentioned how one of his high school ducted on a two-year coaches taught him that every choice he made had a consequence and he had to decide if he was going to weigh out the pros and cons of a situation. This helped him make those tough calls on field. During the summit, PACFLT Master Chief James Honea addressed Sailors about the importance of the summit and how lessons learned at the individual level contribute to overall mission success. When you're talking about your at-risk Sailors or those that need more attention, those are the opportunities to make sure that we're doing the right thing as leaders,² Honea said. "We need to do right by them and get them the help they need. That's what these workshops are designed to do — to help us build on those tools.

Facts, not fear drive Red Hill improvements

(Editor's Note: October was Energy Action Month. The Navy's Red Hill fuel facility provides strategically important energy in the Pacific. A version of this commentary about Red Hill was published recently in Honolulu Star-Advertiser.)

Water is the essence of life. Protecting our shared drinking water is a duty we take seriously.

I say this not only as a purveyor and provider of clean and healthy drinking water for the thousands of military family members who reside in military housing on Oahu. I also say this as a consumer of that very same water, along with my wife, children and pets.

In January 2014, Tank 5 at the Red Hill fuel facility experienced a release of 27,000 gallons of fuel due to a contractor's error and an ineffective response and oversight.

Since then, under an administrative order on consent (AOC) with regulators — Environmental Protection suspected of having back-surface Agency (EPA) and Hawaii Department corrosion as evidenced by wall of Health (HDOH) — we have spent thinning from the NDE.

$45.3 million to improve the facility and protect the environment. Since 2006, the DoD has invested $260 million to upgrade and improve Red Hill. At the same time, we are fiscally responsible, recognizing that spending taxpayer money on the most expensive option is not the best solution.

Among our initiatives, we invest in a rigorous, ongoing, clean, inspect and repair maintenance program.

In June, the Navy began work to validate the effectiveness of the non-destructive examination (NDE) processes for identifying areas within a tank in need of repair.

This work began with the Navy, along with EPA and HDOH, reviewing the data from a tank in the middle of its maintenance program - Tank 14 to identify and collect samples, called "coupons," from the tank's steel liner.

Among the samples deliberately selected were some from several different areas within the tank

Contrary to some media accounts, the findings were not inconsistent with what was expected. Upon removal of the coupons, some of the locations predictably had corrosion and suspected thinning. However, the study is not yet complete.

Drawing conclusions in the middle of a study from preliminary samples removed from the empty tank misinforms public understanding and compromises the integrity of the process.

Extrapolating incomplete information and applying a worse-case-scenario for all tanks at Red Hill unnecessarily creates fear. It also undercuts the important ongoing work to safeguard our ater and our security in Hawaii.

It is worth noting that the Navy employs strict safety factors for its repair standards. For example, Navy doubles the American Petroleum Institute-approved industry standard for tank wall thickness at Red Hill. We double the standard because we are committed to keeping our water safe.

In the case of Tank 14, only about two percent of the tank's surface requires repairs. The same - or fewer repairs is true for other tanks inspected.

The Navy is committed to completing scientific and engineering-based studies and performing thorough, informed analysis.

We are committed to taking a science-based approach to properly consider upgrade alternatives and other options for Red Hill as we continue investing in modernization and upgrades of the facility and infrastructure.

We take our environmental stewardship seriously and are committed to these precious islands we all live, work and play in.

We are committed to continuing to work with the regulators under the AOC to ensure we do everything possible to prevent another lapse at Red Hill.

Most important: We are committed to protecting the drinking water we all share. We are all in this together.

For more about the history, technology and advancements at Red Hill, visit www.cnic.navy.mil/redhill.

It started as any other day. I woke up, went to work, came home, and logged into Facebook. But little did I know what I was going to witness once I was there.

It was something that always happens to other people, not to me or the people I love. But it was there.

My best friend posted it, family of five found dead in murder-suicide. That evening my friend lost her childhood bestie.

I called her as soon as I saw it, and she burst into tears as she told me the story. She's a para- As far as any of us knew, he that evening she received a notice of a shooting in her friend's neighborhood. She was the first on scene. Even the immediate family hadn't been notified.

Her friend was going through a divorce. But on the surface, everything seemed amicable, between the two. Her husband had moved out, but the two shared custody of their three children. They even made it a point to continue having family dinners every so often. It was after one of those dinners that her husband shot her, their children, and then himself. What do you say to some-

How do we stop it when according to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence in the U.S., one in four women and one in nine men have experienced severe intimate partner physical violence?

It would be naïve to think we could stop domestic violence completely, but we can start by talking about it.

October is National Domestic Violence Prevention Month. According to Military OneSource, the goal of Domestic Violence Prevention Month is to educate communities, individuals, couples and families about Family Advocacy Program services and other community resources.

These resources can help prevent, raise awareness of community responsibility and resources for addressing domestic abuse.

Domestic violence can happen to anyone, regardless of gender, age or rank. To report domestic abuse, people should contact their family advocacy office during normal duty hours. After duty hours, people should call 911 or the local security forces squadron.

JBPHH hosts safe, fun RUNK OR TREAT

Story and photos by Anna General

Managing Editor, Hoʻokele

The Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam (JBPHH) Command Religious Program hosted a Trunk-or-Treat Fall Festival Oct. 24 at the Pearl Harbor Memorial Chapel.

Military and civilian volunteers participated in decorating the back of their cars as an alternative to door-Base community.

"The Fall Festival was an outreach event that provided an opportunity to interact with families to let them know about the chapel programs and partner with other command agencies to provide a family morale-building event," said Cmdr. Joseph Primeaux, JBPHH senior installation chaplain.

As families and children lined up in the parking lot near the chapel fully dressed in their creative Halloween costumes, children held out their bags or pumpkins for treats.

Trunk-or-Treat provided a safe and fun trick-or-treating experience where children go car to car for treats.

In addition to Trunk-or-Treat; bounce houses, food, games and other family-friendly activities took place.

"We were a little surprised by the turnto-door trick-or-treating for the Joint out this year, we anticipated five to 600 attendees. I would estimate we had over 1,000 in attendance," Primeaux said.

"We are thankful for the support received from the first lieutenant, JBPHH security, chapel staff, Federal Fire Department, Harbor Security, Seabees and 40-plus volunteers. Their participation made this a memorable event for the children who attended," he added.

Compiled by Hookele Staff

A U.S. Air Force Airman and a U.S. Navy Sailor were among six service members recognized by USO Hawaii during the 2018 Salute to Service Gala at the Four Seasons Resort Oahu at Ko Olina in Honolulu, Oct. 20.

This black-tie event featured entertainment, dinner, award presentations and dancing.

The military honorees included Airman First Class Jasmine Blunt, Spc. Conor Mc-Duffie, Hospital Corpsman 2nd Class Michael Uzleber, Cpl. Kevin Valentia, U.S. Coast Guard Aviation Maintenance Technician 2nd Class Nicholas Fuist and Hawaii National Guard Sgt. Kieu Vo. "We appreciate those who are helping us present the Salute to Service Gala and the work we do in Hawaii to support military members and their families," said Alesha Burkeen, area operations manager of USO Hawaii.

Blunt is a client systems technician with Cyber Support, 56th Air Communications Squadron, 613th Air Operations Center, Pacific Air Forces Command, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam.

The Winnsboro, Louisiana native enlisted in the Air Force in 2017. According to her bio, she is "part of a nine-person team charged with maintaining the 613th Air Operations Center's $37 million weapon system that provides air superiority to 52 percent of the world."

"It is an honor to receive this award," Blunt said. "I'm thankful to have great mentors, leadership and a strong family to support me throughout my career. God has equipped us to do good work. I will continue to work hard and strive to be the best Airman I can be. I am proud to serve in the world's greatest Air Force."

Uzleber is a surgery technician at 21st Dental Company, at Marine Corps Base Hawaii.

As he reaches his sixth year in the Navy, Uzleber said he has learned a great deal and was able to travel to 12 countries. But for Uzleber, Hawaii is paradise and it was a dream to be stationed here. "I am still in awe every day I drive through the Pali tunnel," he said.

Uzleber was descibed in his bio as "an asset to his company through his innovative efforts to streamline patient care scheduling and striving for excellence by completing two national certification courses."

As a child playing sports, Uzleber recalled his coaches were service members, and he was inspired to volunteer. He also recalled having a good experience at the Philadelphia USO before he headed for boot camp.

"So when a friend invited me to start volunteering here I jumped at the opportunity and it's been great ever since."

He has volunteered 136 hours this year through USO Hawaii and the USO Honolulu Airport Center.

Uzleber said being recognized by USO was humbling.

"I had many people tell me 'this is your night' and I am not one to seek that attention," he said. "My parents raised me to be a hard worker and that's the mentality I try to have every day. So I was completely in shock and honored when (Juliet Bucayu-Domingo, USO Hawaii area director) emailed me. I am even more grateful for friends and shipmates I was able to have this experience with. I am a firm believer (that) it's not always about the experience but who you are with and I am thankful they were able to take part in this night."

Sailors assigned to the Arleigh Burke-class guided missile destroyer USS Chafee (DDG 90) and Afloat Training Group Middle Pacific (ATG MIDPAC) spent their Saturday morning helping the community by picking up trash along the Pearl Harbor Bike Path, Oct. 27.

The bike path cleanup was organized by the City and County of Honolulu in observance of Make a Difference Day 2018.

The 5.2-mile-long bike path begins just beyond the Arizona Memorial parking lot and ends at Waipi'o Point Access Road. Over time, various factors have resulted in trash and debris piling up making the path less appealing to pedestrians.

"Every time I come out here, people thank us, and are generally excited about the work we are doing," said Master-at-Arms 1st Class William Elliott, a Sailor assigned to ATG MIDPAC. "Aside from a few troubled areas, the bike path looks better and better every time we come out."

The Sailors accounted for two of the eight groups that volunteered to participate in the cleanup. One of those groups was the Chafee's First Class Petty Officer Association.

"First classes are in a position of leadership," said Gas Turbine System Technician (Electrical) 1st Class Hyun Lee, "We try to lead our junior guys to do great things and we have to lead by example." Elliott emphasized that the Navy cares about the communities they serve in and how important it is for Sailors to come out and prove it.

"It's not enough for our modern military to be committed to their job, branch or unit," Elliott said. "We have to also show that we are committed to the community that we serve to protect."

Make a Difference Day is one of the single largest days of service nationwide. On this day, millions of people united the Pearl Harbor Bike Path near Kamehameha highway, Oct. 27. The bike path cleanup was organized by the City and County of Honolulu in observance of Make a Difference Day 2018.

under the common goal; to improve the lives of others.

The City and County of Honolulu celebrates this nationally recognized day to make a difference in their own communities and provide opportunities for service work.
