SAFETY CORNER

Dove Hunting Safety tips By Mike Jett

Because of the unique way to hunt doves and because of the bird itself, here are some specific safety techniques that all mourning dove hunters should employ:

- CHECK AMMUNITION: Carefully check your shells before you enter the field. Use only those designed for dove hunting. Make sure your gun is plugged to hold no more than three shells.
- SHOTGUN SAFETY: Keep your gun unloaded until you are in the field. Do not load your gun until you've reached your hunting location on the field. Unload your gun before you leave. Always shoot skyward. Do not shoot at low-flying birds. Never shoot a roosting or perching bird. Mourning doves often roost or perch on electrical, telephone, fiber optic or other energy or communication transmission lines. You could be criminally charged for damaging a line in this manner and held responsible for its repair, often costing tens of thousands of dollars.
- AWARENESS: Know the location of other hunters - if any - on the field and make sure they are aware of your location. Identify your safe zone of fire and never shoot outside this zone. Your safe zone of fire is the area where you can safely shoot while taking into consideration the location of other hunters, roads and field boundaries. When retrieving downed birds, visually mark the location before you leave your shooting location. Be sure other hunters in the area are aware that you are entering the field. Do not attempt to shoot at doves while retrieving a downed bird or when you are away from your shooting location.
- PPE: Wear safety glasses or goggles and a cap with a bill to help protect your eyes from falling shot.
- RESPECT HUNTING FIELD BOUNDARIES: Do not hunt doves outside of the boundaries of the dove field.

Please visit <https://tpwd.texas.gov/regulations/outdoor-annual/regs/animals/dove> for specifics on 2019-2020 dove season & regulations.
