Senior Leaders The Army's balancing efforts

"We're continuing to train mission essential personnel. But really, what we're trying to do is we're trying to balance protecting the force so we can protect the nation."

Gen. James McConville
Chief of Staff, U.S. Army
March 26, 2020, Washington

On Point April is Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month

National Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month is observed each year during the month of April to raise awareness and educate communities on the prevention of sexual assault. The Army's 2020 theme is "Building Cohesive Teams through Character, Trust and Resilience. Protecting Our People Protects Our Mission." The Sexual Harassment/Assault Response and Prevention program's primary mission is to enhance Army readiness through the prevention of sexual assault, sexual harassment, and associated retaliatory behaviors while providing comprehensive response capabilities.

Modernization

I Corps begins new weapon standards

America's I Corps is integrating the Army's new weapons qualification, a marksmanship test that will enable Soldiers to be more prepared for combat than they were with the old marksmanship qualification.

FORSCOM provides medical units to support COVID-19 efforts

WASHINGTON – As more people are exposed to COVID-19, the U.S. Army is preparing to provide medical support and hospital capacity to help states and other national agencies to contain the virus and protect the nation.

Moving on the orders of Secretary of the Army Ryan McCarthy, the Army recently issued deployment orders to the 531st Hospital from Fort Campbell, Kentucky, the 627th Hospital from Fort Carson, Colorado, and the 9th Hospital from Fort Hood, Texas, to deploy to New York and Washington state.

"Army health care professionals are adequately equipped with first-rate training, equipment and technology in order to deal with emergent health issues," said McCarthy, Secretary of the Army. "Protecting the health of the force and the American people are our top priorities."

Army hospitals are expeditionary facilities with full hospital capability. Each hospital has intensive-care-unit beds and intermediate-care beds. In addition, Army hospitals have operating rooms, an emergency department, X-ray facilities and a pharmacy. Although they are designed to serve as trauma hospitals, they have the capability to function as full-service hospitals for all patient types.

Army hospital staffs can provide routine and emergency medical support to community medical staffs, allowing them to focus their resources and efforts on detecting and treating patients believed to have been exposed to COVID-19.

This response is part of the whole-of-nation approach to fighting COVID-19. The Army is working with interagency partners to support and protect our military force and the American people.
