Fort Stewart Garrison Commander Col. Bryan Logan takes a crack at demolishing a home in Isenhower Village June 10 on Fort Stewart. The 1983-built legacy homes were demolished due to age and other concerns. The area will become green space.

Legacy homes demolished on Fort Stewart, green space opened

With a deft swing of an excavator's boom and bucket, an empty housing unit in Fort Stewart's Isenhower Village was demolished June 10, the start of a complete tear down of the legacy housing area.

By December, the 30 buildings of the 1983-built housing area will be gone.

Fort Stewart garrison command team Col. Bryan Logan and Command Sgt. Maj. Rebecca Myers were on hand to watch the beginning of the demolition. Each also took a turn behind the excavator's controls to tear down portions of the legacy housing.

The old homes needed to come down for many reasons, including not being up to code, Logan said.

"The big point is our Families deserve safe and healthy houses," Logan said. "Isenhower has lived its time."

Fort Stewart Directorate of Public Works Housing Manager Doug Delzeith said the demolition was a long awaited milestone for the installation, reducing the inventory of least desirable homes.

"The process to demolishing existing legacy housing is long and arduous," Delzeith said. "But, our persistence paid off and on June 10 we finally saw the fruits of our labor as the first of the 136 two-bedroom apartments in this housing area was demolished."

The area where the demolished homes stood will become green space and remain so for the time being.

"We currently have no new housing planned so this area will remain green space awaiting future housing construction projects," Delzeith said.

Support Soldiers train on MATVs for upcoming deployment

Soldiers with 226th Composite Supply Company and Soldiers with 396th Composite Truck Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade, conducted training on the Mine-Resistant All Terrain Vehicle June 8 – 11 on Fort Stewart.

The intent for the training was to prepare 226th CSC Soldiers for their upcoming missions so they will be very familiarized with the MATV, said Staff Sgt. Antonio Ham, a motor transport operator truck master with 396th CTC, STB, 3rdInf. Div. Sust. Bde.

“The 226th CSC do not have these vehicles, so we as licensed instructors and subject matter experts want to make sure that we give them all the knowledge that we know about the MATVs so that they will be ready and comfortable while operating these vehicles in the near future,” Ham said.

The MATV drivers training is conducted annually as well as the refresher course for licensed Soldiers. The 226th CSC requested the training and assistance of 396th CTC in certifying drivers prior to the CSC's upcoming deployment.

“I hope the Soldiers get a clear understanding of a basic knowledge of this vehicle for when they go down range so that they can be able to operate it safely, have little to no mishaps, no harms to themselves, and no damages to the vehicles,” said Staff Sgt. Jeffery Laird, a motor transport operator with 396th CTC, STB, 3IDSB.

The training and instructors provided basic knowledge of the MATVs for Soldiers to be able to operate the equipment for their upcoming deployment.

as part of the last day of the course.

“The MATV course is important to our mission because with us being down range, we must learn how to drive these vehicles because we don't have them so we have to learn their operations and ensure that us Soldiers are mission ready,” said Spc.

Jeremey Law, a petroleum supply specialists with 226th CSC.

Army's new Civilian Implementation Plan emphasizes talent management

Devon Suits
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army is improving the way it acquires, develops, employs and retains its civilian workforce under the new Civilian Implementation Plan.

Tied to the Army's People Strategy, "the plan will ensure that Army civilians are the most ready, professional, diverse, and integrated federal workforce," said Todd Fore, the deputy assistant secretary of the Army for civilian personnel.

The CIP outlines a wide range of efforts to utilize each individual's knowledge, skills, behaviors and preferences, to achieve organizational outcomes and sustain force readiness, Fore said.

Third-largest employer

According to the plan, the Army is the third-largest federal employer with close to 300,000 civilians operating throughout the entire force.

The Army Materiel Command, Army Medical Command, and Army Corps of Engineers continue to lead the force in employment numbers, with the majority of these organizations comprised of Department of the Army civilians, the plan reads.

"Our ongoing efforts will include additional tasks to encourage and increase diversity, equity and inclusion," Fore said.

The CIP looks to update many of the Army's human resources and management processes.

"We realized that there are many individual, decentralized efforts currently used to manage the civilian workforce," Fore said.

"It was clear we needed one integrated plan for all civilians," he said.

The CIP provides "strategic guidance to help grow mission-critical occupations at critical-fill locations, along with defining career requirements to execute career opportunities and training."

Part of the CIP will include changes to the Army's Career Program Proponency in support of the Army's mission, Fore said. Currently, the Army has 32 career programs that vary significantly in staffing levels.

According to the regulation, the CPP provides structured plans, processes, and activities that direct and support the organizational, occupational, and individual growth of Army Civilians in serving in designated career programs throughout the force. Leaders intended the program to be adaptive and flexible by integrating policies and procedures to deliver the right person, to the right place, at the right time.

"All developmental efforts will be more effectively integrated to achieve synthesis across the various career programs," Fore said. "We are in the process of consolidating [into 11] career programs, and moving this operational function to the Civilian Human Resource Agency to achieve integrated enterprise-wide career management and provide consistent direction to all career fields."

Four priorities

Making changes to the Army's civilian force will take time. Some employees will see an immediate change, while it may take years for others to notice a difference, Fore said. To aid in the process, leaders have identified four critical priorities to serve as a foundation for the civilian enterprise.

Under the first priority - transform workforce planning and management - the Army targets the proper employment of its civilian workforce to reduce capability gaps. Leaders are working to incorporate the Defense Civilian Human Resources Management System across the force to accomplish this task.

According to the system's website, the DCHRMS is a cloud-based HR system designed to standardize and streamline personnel processes.

Through the system, the Army will have access to a single employee database to execute core HR and performance management functions.

Currently, the Army leverages multiple systems to maintain its civilian workforce, Fore said. And while most of these processes are completed online, the Army cannot aggregate employee information, performance reviews, and individual development plans under one system.

The Army is improving the way it acquires, develops, employs and retains its civilian workforce under the new Civilian Implementation Plan.

The rollout of the new DCHRMS is slated for fiscal year 2022, Fore added.

The plan's second priority - modernize civilian talent acquisition - looks to improve how the Army acquires new employees through upgraded marketing processes. Under that line of effort, program leaders will make improvements to marketing and recruiting programs to improve the Army's access to highly-qualified employment candidates.

The Army is also looking to streamline its hiring and onboarding processes to quickly hire new talent, which will help the force remain competitive in a highly-contested job market, according to the plan.

Priorities three and four - evolve career programs to be integral to the people enterprise, and to build world-class supervisors - will look to grow, manage and sustain talent throughout the civilian workforce, Fore said.

Career progression

Many civilians have identified a clear line of career progression, similar to the Army Career Tracker program used by Soldiers. The ACT is a leadership development tool that integrates training and education, and allows Soldiers to monitor their career development.

The Army looks "to build a series of on- and off-ramps throughout a civilian's career, so they can decide when they need to be on or off [the road] to find a balance between work and family life," he said.

By providing a clear line of progression, individuals will be able to transition throughout their career on a road that suits their professional development goals and continues to support the Army's overall mission, Fore said.

Additionally, many Army civilians have identified a need for increased educational and leadership training opportunities through the recent Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey, Fore added.

A vast majority of the civilian workforce looks to move up in their respected careers and desire the necessary experiences and education to remain competitive. Proposed changes within the CIP should create more opportunities for growth.

"We're being aggressive, and making changes that are necessary from a policy and organizational perspective to move [the civilian enterprise] forward," Fore said.

Exchange shoppers generate $1.2M for Marne community

Sylvia Carpenter
AAFES

Soldiers, retirees, Veterans and military Families know it pays to shop their Exchange. In 2019, authorized Fort Stewart Consolidated Exchange shoppers generated $1,272,029.69 of critical support for military Quality-of-Life programs in the form of earnings-based dividends.

Army installations

The dividends help fund Quality-of-Life programs at Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield such as Child, Youth and School Services; Armed Forces Recreation Centers and other programs that support the military.

One-hundred percent of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's worldwide earnings are invested in the military community, with 59% going to dividends supporting Quality-of-Life programs and the remaining 41% used to improve the experience in stores and at ShopMyExchange.com.

"The Exchange is Family Serving Family," said Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Exchange General Manager Hollie Morales. "Exchange earnings improve the lives of Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield heroes and their Families."

The Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Exchange dividend is a part of the $217 million the Army and Air Force Exchange Service generated worldwide in 2019. In the last 10 years, the Exchange has contributed $2.2 billion to morale, welfare, and recreation programs integral to Army recruiting, readiness and resiliency.

Part of the Exchange's dividend was generated by Veterans. On Jan. 1, 4.1 million veterans with service-connected disabilities and certain caregivers were welcomed home with in-store shopping privileges.

Since 2017, all honorably discharged Veterans have been authorized to shop the Exchange online. Veterans can find out more about their earned benefits on the Exchange's community Hub page at bit.ly/Vets4Life.

Despite the upheaval caused by the COVID-19 pandemic and the ever-changing retail landscape, the Exchange remains dedicated to supporting troops and their Families, wherever the military mission takes them.

Since 1895, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service has gone where Soldiers, Airmen and their Families go to improve the quality of their lives by providing valued goods and services at exclusive military pricing.

The Exchange is the 62nd-largest retailer in the United States. Its earnings provided $2.3 billion in dividends to support military morale, welfare and recreation programs over the last 10 years. The Exchange is a non-appropriated fund entity of the Department of Defense and is directed by a Board of Directors.

The Exchange is a 50th Anniversary Vietnam War Commemorative Partner, planning and conducting events and activities that recognize the service, valor and sacrifice of Vietnam Veterans and their Families in conjunction with the United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration. Medical services to resume at Winn ACH

Pat Young
Winn ACH Public Affairs

On June 10, 3rd Infantry Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Tony Aguto announced the resumption of services and programs at Winn Army Community Hospital as part of the bi-weekly COVID-19 Update town hall to the Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield community.

Aguto, with 3rd ID Senior Enlisted leader Command Sgt. Maj. Michael Coffey, Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield Garrison Commander Col. Bryan Logan, and Winn ACH Commander Col. Michelle Munroe, led the town hall in a live Facebook broadcast attended by about 1,000 active viewers.

The installation leaders relayed many services and programs will resume across the installation due to their observations of reduced risk in the community from the coronavirus – and the positive control measures executed by community members.

Aguto said positive cases of coronavirus in the 11 counties surrounding Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield have significantly dropped, though he did note there was a long way to go.

“We have to remain vigilant and realize there is still a risk to our community,” Aguto said.

He said they continue to monitor the situation, calling for continued emphasis on social distancing, the use of facemasks and hand washing.

The changes to medical services included opening elective surgeries, dental exams, and regular appointments – although customers may experience delays as services are restored.

Munroe said in addition to services opening up, Winn ACH was also preparing for the upcoming school year.

“We are going to do some school screenings,” Munroe said, adding that local schools require the Georgia Registrar of Immunizations, Transactions and Services form, referred to as GRITS, as part of the school registration process.

She said Families who need the GRITS form should call the Winn ACH immunization clinic at 435-6878. She explained the clinic would pull customers’ records and verify immunizations are up to date.

“If you don’t need anything, you won’t need an appointment,” Munroe said. She said the form would be filled out, signed and ready for pick up. Likewise, the form would be filled out and ready once the required immunizations are administered.

She said Winn ACH has also planned schools physicals July 11, 18, and 25 featuring specialty providers to include audiology, nutrition care, dental and optometry. A similar one is planned at Tuttle Army Health Clinic, June 24.

During the town hall, Munroe also mentioned the drive-up pharmacy services would continue. She said the value of service was proven, so they would examine resources to determine how best to continue that program.

Community members are encouraged to review all the changes covered in the June 10 town hall, posted on the 3rd ID, Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield and Winn Army Community Hospital Facebook sites. Questions regarding medical services can be messaged to facebook.com/winncares.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Boldness serves purpose through history, today

Lt. Col. John Hubbs
Plans and Operations Chaplain

Last week marked the 33rd anniversary of a historic moment which some say inspired the collapse of a monument to hostility. It was on June 12, 1987 that President Ronald Reagan, speaking in front of the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin, issued a challenge to his Soviet counterpart:

“There is one sign the Soviets can make that would be unmistakable, that would advance dramatically the cause of freedom and peace. Gen. Secretary Gorbachev, if you seek peace, if you seek prosperity for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, if you seek liberalization, come here to this gate. Mr. Gorbachev, open this gate. Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall.”

The last sentence, delivered emphatically, was quite controversial at the time. In fact, some of President Reagan’s top aides argued quite insistently against him including it in the speech. They felt it might provoke resentment and unnecessarily damage the good relationship that had already been developed with the Soviet leader. Driven by his personal convictions, however, and perhaps realizing that peace-making and peace-keeping are almost never synonymous, President Reagan left the line in the speech. Today, especially in the city of Berlin, it is heralded as a bold and decisive moment in the final phase of the Cold War.

In On War, Clausewitz writes an entire chapter on “boldness.” What President Reagan reminds us of is boldness is not just crucial in committing to a movement on the battlefield. It is even more important sometimes in the realm of defending values. The early apostles realized this as well. They had learned a truth for which they sensed a divine compulsion to share.

File graphic

Threats, imprisonments and beatings at the hands of authorities could not silence the voice of God calling them to continue the mission of proclaiming that truth. Acts 4:29 records their prayer, “And now, Lord, look at their threats, and grant to your servants to speak your word with all boldness.”

There are times when we see things that need to be radically changed because they are unjust, immoral, or unethical. A temptation always exists to either not get involved at all, or to perhaps suggest small adjustments which carry little personal risk. Clausewitz writes of boldness, “From the transport-driver and the drummer up to the General, it is the noblest of virtues.” This is especially the case when we apply it to the need to speak truth. One might be, like the apostles, someone of low rank speaking truth to those in power. Or, one might be President Reagan, the most powerful man in the world speaking to the second most powerful. In either case, to assume the role of diplomat when the situation requires a prophet is to act cowardly.

Clausewitz warns that “boldness should be accompanied by a reflective mind.” That reminds me of the writer of Ecclesiastes who suggests, “There is a time to be silent and a time to speak.” Boldness is not simply a thoughtless expression of one’s opinions. Boldness is, when conscience perceives that the time to speak has come, the inner voice that says to the barrier of fear, “tear down this wall,” so that others might hear the truth.

Be part of something bigger than yourself.

Soldiers from the 287th Field Feeding Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade, conducted a field feeding academy June 1-5 on Fort Stewart.

The course provided the culinary specialists from 287th FFC a refresher on commonly used field feeding equipment including the Assault Kitchen, Mobile Kitchen Trailer, Containerized Kitchen and the Matrix.

“We want our warriors to be able to have fuel to fight, whether it is in the garrison environment or if we are deployed,” said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Bernadette Smith, food advisor with 287th FFC. “We want to know that our 92G [culinary specialists] are able to fuel the force, part of that is cooking, ensuring nutrition and preparing quality meals for Soldiers.”

To help ensure that Soldiers are well trained and to boost morale throughout the company, 287th FFC held a hamburger cook-off using their MKT. It was an opportunity to have fun and to also conduct a check on learning to end the week of their field feeding academy.

“Three teams are competing by showing off the best prepared hamburger, fries, dessert and a signature drink,” said Sgt. 1st Class Laron Smith a platoon sergeant with 287th FFC. “Hopefully today’s competition goes well and the Soldiers enjoy it.”

Unique for the competition was the inclusion of non-cook team members from the headquarters platoon as part of the competing teams.

“I am a 42A [human resources specialist], so it was very challenging competing in today’s competition against other 92Gs,” said Spc. Mercedes Kirkwood a human resource specialist with 287th FFC. “I learned a lot, such as how to maintain cleanliness, watching the temperatures on the MKT and also how to prepare food.”

The judges added a challenge to the competition with the inclusion of a special ingredient, pineapple, which needed to be incorporated into the meal.

“I learned that preparation was key in today’s competition, as well as working together during this mission” said Pfc. Lawrence Fredireck. “Overall I think that the competition went very well, we were the runner ups.”

Judging for the competition was done by the company leadership. After sampling each team’s meal, only one could stand above the rest with the all MOS team, from the headquarters platoon winning the title and trophy. Despite one team winning, all the competitors put in the best efforts and represented their passion for food preparation.

“I think that the competition went amazing, last year they did wings. I was amazed by the creativity that each team brought to the table” said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Smith. “I am proud of every Soldier that competed today, I can’t wait to see what our Soldiers come up with next to Feed the Rock!”

OLESZNO, Poland — U.S. Soldiers with 2nd Armored Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, performed river crossing training June 11 at Drawsko Pomorskie Training Area, Poland, with their Polish allies.

"I think what's going on behind me is pretty unique," said U.S. Army Col. Patrick O'Neal, commander of the brigade. "You don't see our brigade combat team perform a wet gap crossing too often."

O'Neal said the wet gap-river crossing is an instance where a linear obstacle prevents normal ground maneuvers. Special planning is required and a number of factors have to be weighed. These include surveying, coordination and observation of weather conditions.

The operation was also performed in tandem with elements of Polish Armed Forces. While American armored units crossed a pontoon bridge set up Wednesday, soldiers with the Polish 12th Mechanized Division prepared to traverse the training site in amphibious vehicles.

"This is important because it shows the mobility of two nations working together in an optimal way to accomplish a common task," O'Neal said.

"It's really cool to be working with an Allied army," said the "Spartan Brigade's" U.S. Army 1st Lt. Spyro Boursinos. "We've gotten to look at each other's vehicles and we swapped patches too."

"The Polish people are brilliant partners," O'Neal said. "Everything they've done with us has only made us better."

"We're learning to fight together - how they are, how we are - and developing great interoperability," Boursinos said. "It furthers our bonds as Allied countries and when we understand each other we're better together."

Exercise Allied Spirit, a DEFENDER-Europe 20 linked exercise, originally scheduled for May, takes place at Drawsko Pomorskie Training Area, Poland, June 15-19.
