All Marne personnel to wear masks in workplace

Staff report

The 3rd Infantry Division Commanding General Maj. Gen. Tony Aguto has directed that all personnel on Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield will wear face coverings or masks when inside on-post, public and facilities.

The wear of face masks are not required inside individual work spaces if 6 feet of social distancing can be maintained.

Brigade-level commanders may grant exceptions for the buildings and facilities under their control when wearing face coverings or masks is impractical - when eating; provides no discernible medical benefit - a person working alone in their office or behind closed doors; or when it is contrary to mission requirements.

Civilian employees may request an exemption to this requirement through their immediate supervisor, which will then be reviewed by Garrison Commander Col. Bryan Logan.

This includes all government facilities that are not private residences, such as housing or barracks rooms.

Bingo halls, Marne Bowling Center reopen to guests

Sgt. Reva Catholic
50th PAD

Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield's Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation efforts were energized during the month of June as the installations reopened bingo halls along with the Marne Bowling Center.

"We reopened June 11," said Carolyn Lewis, assistant manager of the Fort Stewart bingo hall. "The [Fort Stewart Garrison commander, Col. Bryan Logan] came by to look at it and was very pleased. We also had the Center of Disease Control come over to make sure our spacing was correct, and they gave us the approval to open."

The Marne Bowling Center opened on June 24 to DOD card holders with COVID-19 risk mitigation measures of reduced capacity and hours of operation.

Both bingo halls and the Marne Bowling Center have implemented CDC and Prevention COVID-19 guidelines to ensure patrons have a safe experience.

Yvette Shepard, assistant manager with Hunter Bingo said before the bingo hall opened, it had to be prepped in accordance with the command safety requirements, to include placing Plexiglas in front of the registers to maintain social distancing.

"The [DFMWR] went above and beyond in their efforts to make the customer's bowling experience safe," said Andrea Gulley, operations assistant for the Marne Bowling Center.

People can expect safety precautions to be taken at each establishment.

"Masks are highly encouraged," Gulley said. "Sanitizing stations are placed at the entrance. There's proper distance between the lanes, and we clean the areas where the customers are before and after they come in."

With social distancing in effect, Hunter Bingo took an expansive approach to utilizing their extra space.

"We took our smoking room and turned it into an overflow room, so there is no smoking in the building anymore," Shepard said. "Currently, we can seat 65 people and with the overflow room, we can add an additional 25."

Employees at each establishment expressed what reopening means to them.

Lewis said she is happy things are opening back up, and customers are glad to get out of the house, and she is glad to be back at work.

"I have mixed feelings about reopening because of my age and health risk," Gulley said. "I believe we should all follow the safety requirements, although masks are optional, everybody should remain conscious of what's going on and be considerate of other people."

Considering the pandemic, people have participated in the activities and the employees encourage more people to join.

Shepard said the bingo hall has great programs and chances for people to win money. The proceeds go back into the DFMWR fund to pay for operations and programs for Soldiers and their Families.

"We've seen a lot of kids that were excited to bowl," Gulley said. "With our 'Kids Bowl Free' program, the children get to have an outlet, which is something they've been looking forward to."

For information on these DFMWR services, call Stewart Bingo at 767-4200 or Hunter Bingo at 767-4606, and the Marne Bowling Center at 767-4866.

Georgia DOT restricts construction-related lane closures statewide during Fourth of July holiday

ATLANTA – To alleviate Fourth of July weekend traffic congestion, the Georgia Department of Transportation is suspending construction-related lane closures on interstate highways and limiting lane closures on state routes that directly serve major tourist and recreation centers. The closures will be from noon July 2 through 10 p.m. July 5.

“As people head to holiday festivities or vacation destinations on this long weekend, we expect heavier than normal traffic,” said Georgia DOT State Construction Engineer John Hancock “By restricting lane closures, we hope drivers will encounter fewer delays and less stress.”

Safety is always a primary concern. The department reminds motorists that crews may still work in close proximity to highways; and safety concerns may require some long-term lane closures to remain in place. Also, incident management or emergency maintenance-related lane closures could become necessary at any time on any route. Whenever you approach a work zone: slow down; allow extra distance between vehicles; read signs; obey road crew flaggers; and expect the unexpected. Work zone safety is in your hands.

Although Georgia welcome centers are not currently open, rest area and welcome center restrooms are open and regularly deep cleaned. However, from time to time a rest area facility may be closed temporarily for service. When stopping in public spaces, be cognizant of social distancing and public health guidelines, as well as act courteously to fellow travelers.

Georgia DOT urges drivers to Drive Alert Arrive Alive - to always buckle up, stay off the phone and focus on driving.

in imminent danger. If possible, pull off the road, turn on your hazard lights and stay seat-belted in the vehicle with the doors locked.

For HERO assistance in metro Atlanta or CHAMP service on highways in other regions of Georgia call 511, a free phone service sponsored by State Farm that provides real-time statewide information on Georgia's interstates and state routes, such as traffic conditions, incidents, lane closure, and delays due to inclement weather. Once callers are connected to 511, pressing 9 will transfer them to an operator to request assistance or report incidents 24 hours a day, seven days a week. When placing these calls, it is important to provide current location, nearest exit number and the interstate the motorist is traveling. In addition, provide the make and model of the vehicle. # Fort Stewart, Hunter Army Airfield strengthen community bonds with agreement

Molly Cooke
Fort Stewart Public Affairs

FORT STEWART, Ga. — The grass is about to get much shorter on Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield, thanks to a new agreement between Fort Stewart and the City of Hinesville.

Leadership from Fort Stewart and the City of Hinesville celebrated as they formally entered into an Intergovernmental Support Agreement June 25 at Club Stewart. The partnership allows the City of Hinesville to offer ground maintenance for Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield to include all areas across the installation's 288,000 acres such as the main cantonment area, training areas and 54 cemeteries.

Fort Stewart will join the ranks of 64 other agreements between local entities and garrisons throughout the Army and is the second IGSA agreement for Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield.

The first partnership was held between Hunter Army Airfield and Chatham County for animal control.

The new partnership, a 10-year agreement between Fort Stewart and the City of Hinesville, will reinforce the bond between both communities.

"Intergovernmental Support Agreements allow the U.S. Army to enter into a partnership with local and state governments to provide services on the installation as opposed to entering into a subcontract with a separate entity," said Col. Bryan Logan, Fort Stewart garrison commander. "The agreement between Fort Stewart and the City of Hinesville will incur a 30% cost decrease for Fort Stewart which is a significant savings. It's a better and more efficient product and more importantly the money will stay here within the local community which ties the City of Hinesville closer to Fort Stewart."

Amid COVID-19 restrictions, the socially distanced signing ceremony was attended by both Fort Stewart and City of Hinesville leadership along with team members from both entities who have worked throughout the last 18 months to plan the partnership. Travis Mobley, chief of Plans, Analysis and Integration on Fort Stewart assisted in spearheading the endeavor and was also in attendance.

"The more partnerships we can have with our brethren outside the gates helps strengthen our relationship for any other community endeavors," Mobley said. "We have a cost advantage and we're also getting an increased delivery of service as well through this agreement. On the city side of the house they receive increased revenue. This agreement is at no cost to the taxpayer, so it's a win-win for both sides."

In addition to the grounds maintenance agreement, Mobley stated that they are looking forward to future IGSA agreements with the City of

The agreement will allow the City of Hinesville to provide grounds maintenance to Fort Stewart's main cantonment area, training areas and 54 cemeteries.

Hinesville to include water storage tank maintenance and a recycling agreement. The installation is also open to forming similar agreements with various counties surrounding both Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield in an effort to streamline services and strengthen the bond between Fort Stewart-Hunter Army Airfield and surrounding communities.

The current ground maintenance contract is set to end in early August with the IGSA agreement beginning Aug. 1.

The Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield communities should expect to see a seamless transition within the current ground maintenance cycle as regular and more frequent maintenance schedules are established.

MICC unit prepares mission partners for hurricane season

Ryan Mattox
MICC Public Affairs

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas — Soldiers from the Mission and Installation Contracting Command's 904th Contracting Battalion on Fort Stewart met recently with mission partners in New Orleans to prepare for potential threats posed by this year's hurricane season.

Acquisition Soldiers from the 904th CBN discussed requirements needed to support the mission during the hurricane season with leadership from the 377th Theater Sustainment Command, headquartered at Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base New Orleans.

During the hurricane planning meeting, participants examined the future alignment of resources for potential support, posturing and planning for a response to a potential hurricane.

"We continue to work with all of our mission partners to prepare for the 2020 hurricane season," said Lt. Col. Torrienne Rechè, the 904th CBN commander. "As past hurricane seasons have shown us, it only takes one major hurricane to impact a community or state and cause widespread damage. Take time to prepare yourself and your family, and plan for what you'll do if a hurricane is forecasted in your area."

To manage requirements during the hurricane season, the 904th CBN and its mission partners are dividing support into contracting support categories.

"The support we provide to the 377th TSC basically aligns into the three operational contract support categories, or buckets," said Maj. Jerry Andes II, an operations officer who serves as the executive officer for the battalion and MICC-Fort Stewart contracting office. "The 377th TSC is responsible for buckets one and two - contract support integration and contractor management. We are responsible for bucket two, which is contracting support. We advise the 377th TSC on how to best execute their responsibilities."

Additionally, the 904th CBN continues to focus on the COVID-19 pandemic, which may potentially influence hurricane evacuation and sheltering plans.

While still supporting the 377th TSC COVID-19 pandemic response mission in the area, the unit is also using those resources when needed for support during the season.

"We are providing contract administration to two lodging blanket purchase agreement calls, or 'orders,' for personnel until the last person redeploy to home station in mid-June 2020," Andes said. "We have five master BPAs for lodging and food services in the area that will remain active until Sept. 30 in case they are needed for follow-on missions. After Sept. 30, we would need to re-establish some new contract vehicles, likely more BPAs, based on identified mission requirements."

Besides providing basic life support services and contractual business advice, contingency operations planners are using lessons learned from their COVID-19 pandemic response support to improve their support during the hurricane season.

"We are specifically focusing on following initiatives to not only strengthen our partnership, but also provide world-class contract support if and when we are called upon to support future missions under the 377th TSC's purview," Andes said. "We continue to work with Army North to capture and consolidate lessons learned from the COVID response to establish a playbook and standard operating procedures to institutionalize our best practices."

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration states that, on average, 12 tropical storms, six of which become hurricanes, form over the Atlantic Ocean, Caribbean Sea or Gulf of Mexico during the hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30 each year. While weather tracking technology provides increasing warning of impending storms, emergency preparedness officials and other DOD organizations each year stress the importance of long-range planning for individuals and families.

Winn ACH Soldier deploys to COVID-19 frontline

Pat Young

Winn ACH Public Affairs

Maj. Michael Smithers, a Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist at Winn Army Hospital, in April was called to support the frontline fight against the coronavirus in New York City.

Assigned to the 531st Hospital Center on Fort Campbell, Kentucky, and a native of upstate New York, Smithers said he deployed to support the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center in New York City, to help convert the facility to a hospital and assist victims of the coronavirus there.

"I got the call and was at Fort Campbell within 48 hours," Smithers said. "Twelve hours later I was in New Jersey. The next day, I was in New York."

He noted in his youth in New York if you stepped into the street, odds were you would be hit by traffic.

"When I got off the bus. The streets were empty," Smithers said. "You could walk off six blocks and not even look both ways, and that was an eerie feeling."

They were soon busy at work, surrounded by co-workers charged with setting up a hospital at the Javits Center.

Col. Jamie Green, New York Army National Guard medical liaison at the Javits Convention Center, was brought in to help bring the military together and organize the hospital.

Green said the tasking was different from his other deployments, noting the team was charged with establishing a 3500-bed hospital in four weeks from scratch.

Most of the Green's other deployments have been combat-related.

"So, it's a little different this time," Green said.

The incident commander, Col. Dennis Charles Deeley, the J2 of the New York Army National Guard, said the Javits medical station had about 2,293 people working together, representing about 20 various agencies.

Deeley said their mission was to relieve pressure from the New York City Hospital system and give them room to operate.

Smithers described how their roles evolved as they spent time on the ground. He said the medical director of the center, Dr. Sean Shirley, helped sort out the medical piece and determined the CRNAs assist with ventilator management.

"I took care of patients in the (Intensive Care Unit) --primarily ventilated patients," Smithers said. "I managed their ventilators, ventilator settings, sedation and provided the care they needed."

He said as the mission evolved, they also managed code response and rapid response on the non ICU side, helping nurses and physicians where needed.

After seeing more than 1000 patients during his deployment with Javits, Smithers returned to Fort Stewart with an abundance of experience to share with his co-workers at Winn ACH.

"If the need arises, I feel comfortable knowing we can take care of our patients," Smithers said.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

A lesson from our founding fathers

Lt. Col. John Hubbs
Plans, Operations chaplain

“They had such a sharp disagreement that they parted company.” (Acts 15:39)

Sometimes good people can find themselves in complete disagreement on even the most important issues. As evidenced in the verse above, early Christian missionaries Paul and Barnabas became so divided over whether to offer a second chance to Mark, who had deserted them on a previous mission, that they “parted company.” Another example can be found in American history with two of our most important founding fathers.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, our second and third presidents, became friends while serving in the Continental Congress. The two were part of the committee assigned to write a declaration of independence from Great Britain. Their early respect for each other is highlighted in Adams’ recollection of their conversation regarding who should write the first draft:

Jefferson proposed to me to make the draft. I said, ‘I will not,’ ‘You should do it.’ ‘Oh! No.’ ‘Why will you not?’ ‘You ought to do it.’ ‘I will not.’ ‘Why?’ ‘Reasons enough.’ ‘What can be your reasons?’ ‘Reason first, you are a Virginian, and a Virginian ought to appear at the head of this business. Reason second, I am obnoxious, suspected, and unpopular. You are very much otherwise. Reason third, you can write 10 times better than I can.’ ‘Well,’ said Jefferson, ‘if you are decided, I will do as well as I can.’ (eye-witness to history.com/jefferson)

After the new nation was established, however, their contrasting philosophies regarding what the government should look like became an unresolvable point of contention. Adams believed a strong centralized government was essential for the young country’s survival. Jefferson thought this violated the very ideals upon which the U.S. was founded. In the presidential election of 1800 the mudslinging became so bitter that, after Jefferson defeated Adams, the latter refused to attend his successor’s inauguration. For a dozen years the two never spoke to each other.

The reality probably is that some kind of balance between Jefferson’s and Adams’ points of view is as important now as it was when our country was being formed. However, we seem even more prone to division along political lines today than ever before. I stopped sharing any political opinions on Facebook after a friend of a friend wished me dead. Ironically, that individual viewed herself as much more tolerant than me.

I value the people in my life who think differently than I do. A great blessing in my role as chaplain is to work with and learn from clergy of different theological traditions. I may differ on specific doctrines with Catholics, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Pentecostals. However, I know people from each of those traditions whom I consider a better Christian than I am because I see in their lives a greater conformity to the example of Jesus than I have yet achieved. They remind me of how much I have yet to grow.

Jefferson and Adams eventually renewed their friendship despite the profound differences of opinion. Exchanging hundreds of letters, they grew in their understanding of and appreciation for each other. Reportedly, Adams’ last words before he died were, “Jefferson lives.” As it turns out, though, he was incorrect. His fellow founding father had died earlier in the day. Both men, coincidentally, died on the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. As we celebrate Independence Day, let’s consider how their renewed friendship epitomizes America at its best.

CLEAN FUEL KEEPS THE ARMY ROLLING

Spc. Marquis Hopkins
3IDSB

Soldiers from the 135th Quartermaster Company, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division Sustainment Brigade, recently recertified their B-1 status, giving the fuel lab technicians the authorization to conduct the basic checks of petroleum, oils and lubricants.

Fuel lab technicians provide a necessary service to Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield by distributing the bulk fuel that keeps the Army's premier armored division rolling and aircraft flying.

They are also preparing to reach the highest level of the Army Certification for petroleum in, B-2, which will give them the authorization to conduct full systems checks and their capabilities.

The Petroleum laboratory specialists of the 135th QM Co. play a key part in the fuel distribution system ensuring that the fuel is to the highest standard. They are responsible for conducting laboratory fuel sampling tests on petroleum, oils and lubricants to ensure that the POL distributed by the company meets the quality, durability and purity required to ensure the safe operation of Army equipment.

"[The fuel lab] is a division asset supporting all of 3rd ID with clean POL to ensure that the Army keeps rolling along as well as flying high," said Warrant Officer 1 Nathan Huston, petroleum systems technician with 135th QM Co. "Being the only fuel lab on Fort Stewart, we also get tasked with supporting groups such as the Task Force 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry and 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment."

The fuel lab tests fuel out of the commonly used POL equipment including Heavy Expanded Mobility Tactical Trucks, 5k Tankers, Tank Rack Modules and Tank and Pump Unit. These tests are conducted daily so that military occupation specialty 92L Soldiers - petroleum laboratory specialists - will know the specifications of the fuel.

"There are two tests that we perform on a daily basis, a visual test and a particulate contamination test," said Pfc. Lorissa Cornwell, a petroleum laboratory specialist with 135th QM Co. "It gets challenging at times being the only 92L in the company, but I am thankful for the Soldiers that come to help out with as much as they possibly can without being a 92L."

Petroleum supply specialists with 135th QM Co. get the opportunity to assist the 92L's with their daily responsibility of ensuring that Soldiers are issuing the cleanest fuel possible, not only throughout the 3IDSB, but throughout Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield.

"Just like any new experience it was challenging and unfamiliar, but I was ready to step up to complete the mission," said Sgt. Raawban Broussard, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the POL lab with 135th QM Co. "Over time, the 92L taught me the most by showing me the rules and regulations of the POL lab operations. I learn more and more daily which helps to complete the mission."

The fuel lab conducts more than 100 tests of POL each month. The lab is certified by the Army Petroleum Center, which gives the authority and rights to perform their testing capabilities. The 135th's Hazardous Material team plays a huge role along with the fuel lab. HAZMAT provides the lab with the proper storing and disposal of the POL.

"The POL and chemicals that we use are very buoyant and have to be stored and disposed of in a certain way for environmental considerations," Broussard said.

The key to the unit's success in supporting the division is cooperation between the various fuel handling specialties and the customers to ensure that the highest quality product is being delivered and the units being supported are capable of conducting their missions.

"It takes a lot of attention to detail while operations and testing are going on," Broussard said. "Maintaining our discipline and teamwork, we are confident to continue keeping everything rolling"

The 224th Military Intelligence Battalion hosted their first Rattler Ride, a mentorship event for motorcycle riders within their command, on June 26 from Savannah to Jekyll Island to ensure new riders are aware of the best practices while on their bikes.

"Safety is foremost why we're out here," said Capt. Levi Vanpelt, event organizer with 224th MI Bn. "Any loss of life is awful but for a Soldier to be stateside and perish is extremely unfortunate."

This event was created to give riders experience and mentorship to lesson risks and ultimately save lives, Vanpelt said.

The more experienced riders were paired up with junior riders in a staggered formation so they could watch and evaluate their riding. Once they arrived to Jekyll Island for lunch, the junior riders were given feedback on their riding and how they can improve in terms of safety.

While this event was a first, the Army has several longstanding requirements for Soldiers wanting to ride motorcycles.

In addition to licensing requirements, Soldiers are required to take an Army-sponsored motorcycle safety course and to use full personal protective equipment to include long-sleeved shirt or jacket, long trousers, full-fingered gloves and a helmet regardless of state laws.
