Handwritten customs forms end Aug. 13

IMCOM-Europe Public Affairs Office

WIESBADEN, Germany — Originally scheduled to have taken place earlier this year, a significant change to how overseas military postal customers mail packages is about to take effect. Beginning Aug. 13, the United States Postal Service will no longer accept handwritten customs declaration forms, 2976, 2976-A or 2976-B.

Military postal officials recommend customers begin preparing computerized customs forms ahead of the change.

“There will still be an option to fill out a customs information worksheet, which will then be typed into the retail system software by the postal clerk,” said Bill Hilsher, chief of postal plans and policy at U.S. Army Europe.

However, this option of bringing handwritten forms to the retail window is likely to cause longer wait times at the retail windows, Hilsher said.

In the meantime and to familiarize themselves with the new requirement, customers can go online to fill out and print the correct form at home or fill it out at computer-equipped kiosks that will be available at the military post offices.

To access the correct form visit cfo.usps.com/cfo-web/labelInformation.

According to USPS, packages found with handwritten customs declaration forms after Aug. 13, will be returned to the sender.

The 385th Military Police Battalion welcomed Lt. Col. Craig A. Giancaterino during the unit's change of command ceremony July 10 on Fort Stewart.

The ceremony was held at Marne Garden with Giancaterino's wife Meghan and their two sons, Donald James and Trenton, in attendance, as well as representatives from the battalion's seven companies.

Lt. Col. Martin D. Schmidt, outgoing commander of the 385th, served the battalion for a little more than two years.

"Like any outgoing battalion commander, I have mixed emotions," Schmidt said. "It's exciting to be moving on to the next adventure, but it's also a little sad to be leaving the organization."

Soldiers with the battalion expressed how bittersweet it is to be bidding farewell to Schmidt, while welcoming their new commander.

"Colonel Schmidt is going to be a hard act to follow," said Sgt. 1st Class Brett Patterson, a rear detachment sergeant assigned to the 549th Military Police Company. "I've never seen a battalion commander care so much about Families and Soldiers."

Patterson said, although he will miss Lt. Col.

Schmidt, he is excited to welcome the new commander and is looking forward to implementing some of his good ideas.

Capt. Nicholas B. Huether, commander of the 139th Military Police Company, said, "He's been exceptional in leading us, teaching us, mentoring us and moving this battalion forward with a vast amount of mission sets over a very short time period."

Giancaterino expressed his enthusiasm for taking on the responsibility as the new commander of the 385th.

"I get to come back to a tactical battalion and support 3rd Infantry Division and the community as directorate of emergency services," Giancaterino said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Stephen Palazzo, the 385th's command sergeant major, who is also new to the battalion, expressed his excitement about Giancaterino taking command and the days ahead.

"I've had a chance to get to know him, and we've talked about his vision and my efforts in accomplishing that mission, so we have a pretty good working relationship stepping into this transition," said Palazzo. "We have a good team moving forward, and change is good."

Giancaterino said he is bringing the professionalism and attention to detail from his previous duty station and incorporating it into the 385th.

"Ready teams and prepared leaders is my vision," Giancaterino said. "I want to make sure we are doing excellence by habit and not by circumstance."

'Southern Shield' aims to save lives

Directorate of Emergency Services

Next week kicks off the fourth annual "Operation Southern Shield" Speed Awareness and Enforcement Campaign across Georgia and four other states in the southeastern United States, aimed at reducing crashes, deaths and injuries on the road.

"Operation Southern Shield" week runs from July 20-26, and motorists will see an increased enforcement of speed limits and efforts toward educating motorists on the increased risk they take when they are driving over the speed limit.

Preliminary data from the Georgia Department of Transportation shows Southern Shield has saved lives in Georgia in the last three years.

Last year when Southern Shield was held from July 15-21, the number of traffic deaths in Georgia was 29% lower in the final two weeks of the month compared to the first two. There were 70 people killed in traffic crashes from July 1-14 and 50 traffic deaths from July 15-29.

In Georgia, almost one out of every five speeding deaths in 2018 was due to speeding. There were 267 speed-related fatalities in 2018 which was a 25% increase over a five-year period.

Motorists traveling in Georgia during "Operation Southern Shield" week will see state troopers, sheriffs' deputies and police departments enforcing all traffic laws, the GOHS Law Enforcement Team said.

The goal is to prevent crashes by stopping those motorists who are endangering public safety on Georgia roads by speeding, driving distracted, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs and other committing other violations of the state's traffic laws.

Army searches for improved missions systems in future aircraft

By Devon Suits
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army is exploring improved mission systems configurations for both the Future Long-Range Assault Aircraft and Future Attack Reconnaissance Aircraft, as project officials engage with industry in a collaborative market research effort this week.

This year, project managers launched a Mission Systems Optimization Study to evaluate hardware and software solutions to better inform near-term decisions for both aircraft, said Col. Gregory Fortier, FARA lead with Program Executive Office-Aviation.

"We took a recent [request for information] with industry with over 300-plus technologies and combined that with previous RFIs from the FLRAA team," Fortier said Thursday during the virtual International Military Helicopter USA conference.

Through the RFIs, project managers sought to identify "commonalities" to improve both aircraft's sustainability and help mitigate overall costs, Fortier said. Officials will then use the compiled RFIs to discuss qualified mission system capabilities during an industry day event from Monday through Thursday.

Once the industry event is complete, FARA and FLRAA officials will work together to develop a series of recommendations in November, Fortier said. Project managers are working hard to avoid "stovepiping" each project as they continue through this analysis process.

The footprints of each aircraft are significantly different, Fortier explained. For example, the FARA has a requirement to reach a speed close to 210 mph, while FLRAA's engineering will allow it to reach potential speeds above 290 mph.

"There will be some components along the way that we will have to look at in terms of unique mission systems," Fortier said. "That dialogue has already started to happen ... and will be refined over time."

The Army is exploring improved mission systems configurations for both the Future Long-Range Assault Aircraft and Future Attack Reconnaissance Aircraft, as project officials engage with industry in a collaborative market research effort this week. Pictured is a prototype for the FLRAA.

The Army is scheduled to reach a final design decision for FARA by December, Fortier added. The force will then proceed to the competitive prototyping phase, as it looks to build a combat-ready system by fiscal year 2030.

"We understand that affordability is absolutely paramount to these programs," Fortier said. "We spend every single day ... [discussing] both the FLRAA and FARA timeline so that we can get both aircraft to the finish line."

Through the optimization study, project officials have targeted eight focus areas, or domains, necessary to improve each aircraft. These fields include: communications, navigation, sensors, effector or weapons, survivability, architecture or digital backbone, pilot interface, and data fusion.

In terms of mission system planning, "we have written the requirements ... to allow for flexibility," said Brig. Gen. Walter Rugen, the Future Vertical Lift Cross-Functional Team director. "If the next generation of capabilities is not ready, then we can use the current technology. Project managers are in charge of teeing up those decisions for the aviation enterprise."

Fortier said the eight domains are intended to discover "what is in the realm of the possible" and how new technology will fit into the Army's future aircraft. And while there currently is no rank order to the eight domains, both project managers have emphasized the need for a modular open systems approach, or MOSA.

SMA talks leadership, new normal during online chat

By Thomas Brading
Army News Service

WASHINGTON -- As the COVID-19 pandemic persists, the Army's top enlisted Soldier believes silver linings have been found during this new normal, as the service delves deeper into the digital space to complete missions.

"It's a busy, historic time for the military, but the Army is still doing great things," said Sgt. Maj. of the Army Michael A. Grinston during a Facebook Live event Thursday.

The 16th SMA was a guest on "Chief Chat," a web series hosted by Air Force Chief Master Sgt. Luis Reyes, the senior enlisted advisor for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

In spite of COVID-19, the Army's mission is ongoing even when it's from home, Grinston said. Take the Army's Basic Leader Course, or BLC, for instance. During a recent graduation ceremony, the SMA virtually addressed more than 1,000 graduates worldwide.

"I thought the server was going to crash," he said jokingly, due to the high number of viewers. The web-based event replaced traditional, in-person gatherings that typically range from 150 to 300 people.

The smaller graduations are more his speed. Not because of their size, but because Grinston prefers being able to "look in the eyes of the crowd," he said. However, as all non-essential travel grinded to a halt earlier this year, so did Grinston's face-to-face style of communicating.

Due to this, the Army has primarily gone virtual to make up for COVID-19 setbacks, whether it is Army leaders hosting town halls on social media, or recruiters opting to video chat with potential recruits.

On the flipside of this, "our [online] reach has been phenomenal," Grinston said, as far as the positives of web-based communication.

Targeting larger audiences online has not changed Grinston as a leader, he said. "We've just changed the way we look at each other. So even though we're looking at each other [on a screen] as opposed to being in person, I think my leadership style is the same. This is just what life has given us."

Last week, after pausing operations to ensure safety measures were in place at basic training locations, the Army hit the ground running with a three-day online hiring spree called the Army National Hiring Days, in hopes to sign up 10,000 new Soldiers to fill its ranks.

Whether its leadership, recruiting or retaining talent, one commonality seems to remain: the Army's No. 1 asset is its people, he said. The force's success relies on its people, at all levels.

That's where "This is my squad" -- or TIMS for short -- comes in, he said. The initiative, first announced by Grinston, was his focus for the AAFES webcast.

It is intended to look closer at the positive parts of being a Soldier, he said, in an effort to build stronger, more cohesive units across the Army. In doing so, TIMS can also help take on issues within the Army, such as sexual harassment and assault, suicide prevention, domestic issues, and unconscious bias.

TIMS is part of a larger cultural change for the Army that encourages Soldiers to get to know their people better. "We [should] focus on being a good person with a positive attitude, and get to know the people we work for and who work for us," Grinston said.

By doing this, TIMS can also promote Army readiness through an active lifestyle for Soldiers, centered on health and holistic fitness.

For some, the word "squad" may conjure images of infantrymen in battle. But for Grinston, being a squad member goes beyond the frontlines and spans across every part of the Army -- even at home, where the sergeant major considers his family "part of his squad."

"That's how we change our culture, and that's how we become a better Army," he added.

DOD releases military housing tenant bill of rights

Special to the Frontline

The Department of Defense continues to be fully committed to ensuring the Nation's military service-members and their Families have access to safe, quality and well-maintained homes and communities on DOD installations.

On Feb. 25 the Secretary of Defense and Service Secretaries issued the HHPI Tenant Bill of Rights that addressed 15 of the 18 rights set out in the National Defense Authorization act for Fiscal Year 2020. The Bill of Rights expressed the DOD's commitment to provide the full benefit of the initial 15 rights by May 1 and to continue efforts to provide the full benefits of the three remaining rights — access to maintenance history, process of dispute resolution, and withholding of rent until disputes are resolved — as soon as possible.

ble health and environmental standards.

- Right 6: You have the right to report inadequate housing standards or deficits in habitability of the housing unit to the Landlord, the chain of command, and housing management office without fear of reprisal or retaliation.
- Right 7: You have the right of access to a Military Tenant Advocate or a military legal assistance attorney, through the housing management office of the installation of the Department at which the housing unit is located to assist in the preparation of requests to initiate dispute resolution.
- Right 8: You have the right to receive property management services provided by a Landlord that meet or exceed industry standards and that are performed by professionally and appropriately trained, responsive and courteous customer service and maintenance staff.
- Right 9: You have the right to have multiple, convenient methods to communicate directly with the privatized Landlord maintenance staff, and to receive consistent, honest, accurate, straightforward and responsive communications.
- Right 10: You have the right to have access to an electronic work order system through which a tenant may request maintenance or repairs of a housing unit and track the progress of the work.
- Right 11: You have the right to the following: (A) prompt and professional maintenance and repair; (B) to be informed of the required time frame for maintenance and repairs when a maintenance request is submitted; and (C) in the case of maintenance or repairs necessary

DoDEA shifts school opening dates in the Southeast District

Jade Fulce
DoDEA Communications

Fort Stewart's Defense Education Activity schools have elected to delay the first day of school by two weeks.

The DoDEA Director, in close coordination with installation commanders, local senior military leadership, and DoDEA Southeast District and DoDEA Americas Regional leadership, has approved the shifting of school openings for the DoDEA Southeast District schools.

The new start date will be Aug. 17. DoDEA is preparing to open schools and to return to brick and mortar school operations using the revised schedule for the coming school year.

Restoring teaching and learning to the familiar classroom environment provides students with stability and continuity. Face-to-face instruction and the routines of the school add significantly to the success and growth of all students.

DoDEA plans, directs, coordinates, and manages Pre-Kindergarten through 12th grade education programs for school-aged children of Department of Defense personnel who would otherwise not have access to a high-quality public education.

DoDEA schools are located in Europe, the Pacific, Western Asia, the Middle East, Cuba, the United States, Guam, and Puerto Rico. DoDEA also provides support and resources to Local Educational Activities throughout the U.S. that serve children of military families.

In approving the shift, DoDEA Director Tom Brady said, "While it is imperative that we get students back to school, our highest priority is the health and safety of our students and employees."

DoDEA cited two reasons for shifting the school openings: The shifts in the SY 2020-21 school calendars enable the schools to better meet the demands of returning to brick and mortar school operations in a persistent COVID-19 pandemic; and the shifts better align the DoDEA school openings with similar adjusted opening decisions by the adjoining local school districts.

DoDEA also plans to offer a virtual option for Families and students beginning in the first semester of the school year 2020-21 for students and Families with health vulnerabilities and risk for COVID-19 as defined by the CDC or those who may be concerned about returning to school.

More information on how affected parents may enroll their child in a full-time virtual school option will be released.

The Americas Region Director for Student Excellence, Dr. Judith Minor, said the decision to delay the openings of select schools will not shorten the DoDEA school year for these students.

Minor also stressed that they were making changes out of an abundance of caution for students and staff.

"Working in coordination with our military leaders and local medical-health advisors, DoDEA Americas leadership has been carefully monitoring the ever-changing status of COVID-19 data in each Southeast Community," Minor said. "We are committed to supporting the vital missions of our military partners, yet are also aware of and sensitive to the safety, teaching and learning needs of our students and staff."

Furthermore, Minor said, "Opening in brick and mortar with the option for parents to elect a virtual school option for higher-risk students requires a great deal of planning. This involves procuring a virtual learning curriculum and staffing the virtual school, which will take some additional time for preparation. Shifting the start dates to later in August for our Southeast District schools, will enable us to be fully prepared for students."

WTB transitions to SRU, remains resolved to quality care

Pat Young

Winn ACH Public Affairs

The Fort Stewart Warrior Transition Battalion reflagged to the Soldier Recovery Unit during a ceremony July 8 at Marne Garden on Fort Stewart.

Hosted by Winn Army Community Hospital, the event was broadcast live at facebook.com/winncares, to support social distancing and mitigate the threat of the coronavirus.

Col. Michelle Munroe, the commander for U.S. Army Medical Department Activity – Fort Stewart was on-hand for the event and shared her appreciation for the WTB/SRU.

She noted the first Warrior Transition Battalion was created April 16, 2004, in Florida to provide command and medical management assistance to Soldiers, as they navigate the Army's medical treatment system, either reintegrating back into the force or transitioning out of the service.

She said the Fort Stewart WTB was established in June 2007, which evolved through the years. She noted in 2012, the WTB moved into the current facility here on Fort Stewart, which consisted of three buildings, one administrative building, and two barracks.

"At its peak, the WTB had more than 600 Soldiers in transition and 150 cadre who supported them," Munroe said. She said in 2018 the WTB had one of the highest Operation Inspection Program ratings at 96%, adding the Fort Stewart won best WTB in 2018 and 2019.

With their transition from WTB also came a name change and a reorganization. The SRU would transform three companies into one – commanded by Capt. Carl Whitley.

Munroe said though the unit changed its name and reorganized, she knew they were poised and ready to continue their efforts in helping Soldiers.

Lt. Col. Edward O. Ziembinski, the WTB commander said the unit was ready to assume the mantle of responsibility for the Soldiers in their care.

"The obligation to provide care to wounded, ill, and injured Soldiers, is not the product of modern warfare," Ziembinski said. "In the battlefields of Kadesh, over 3000 years ago, to the fields of Marjah in Afghanistan today. There existed a sacred covenant that Soldiers care for each other. When wounded, or afflicted, the bonds between us do not cease. Once the fighting concludes our wounded, ill, and injured soldiers cannot be cast adrift, nor can they be discarded. Today, the 233 members of this battalion fulfill this commitment."

He noted while the name has changed, their focus remains.

"This battalion's mission is to facilitate and expedite the recovery of our fellow Soldiers in order to return them to the force, or to become productive veterans," Ziembinski said. "It is our duty, our honor to care for our fellow Soldiers. We shall not temper our resolve."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER: TRUST THE PROCESS

Capt, Daniel Collins
3-69th Armor Chaplain

In my neighborhood there have been a lot of moving trucks at different houses. After all, it is peak moving season for Army personnel and their families. It's par for the course. I look forward to the next season myself - the one I will be part of. So, it goes without saying I am anxious to get that request for orders, so the process will begin for me.

I don't know if any of you have this problem, but I find that I have a very difficult time trusting the process. Of course this is a direct result of a simple issue we all have. One I find myself talking about on multiple occasions. We are human and in our humanity we think we always have the answer, We always want to direct how things go, to be masters of our own destiny. But nothing could be further from the truth. Yes, God gives us many abilities to be able to do some great and wondrous things.

But we often learn the hard way, we need to trust the process. Let me give you an example. I am currently painting my house. I started with the downstairs bathroom and made an order-of-merit list for the different rooms and areas, so painting wouldn't disrupt living in the house too much. When I was working on the downstairs bathroom a few months ago I was applying the second coat. My expectation was the paint would roll out smooth and the walls would, even while still wet, be a uniform color of paint -- it would look awesome. But as I finished each wall, I noticed the paint didn't appear to be even. It had visible roller-strokes and brush-strokes. I had to tell myself to trust the process. See, anyone who has ever done any painting knows that the paint will blend during the drying process and will show the desired result once dry. In my humanity and in that inborn need, I felt I must be in control. I wanted the finished result immediately. But I had to remind myself of the process.

Do you ever find yourself with the same issue? Maybe you are in the next PCS cycle and you are anxiously awaiting your RFO. Or maybe, it's one of the daily duties we all are immersed in and it is normal for us to want the desired result right then. Often we find there is a process. If we allow ourselves to trust the process, often we find it all works out the way it's supposed to.

If you find yourself wanting God to fix something in your life instantly or make something happen right now, think instead, of having to navigate through some process.

The Psalmist has the word for all of us that fall victim to that: "Commit your way to the Lord, trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass. He shall bring forth your righteousness as the light, and your justice as the noonday. Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him... (Psalm 37:5-7a).

The Psalmist is clear, the Lord will work it all out, so commit your way to Him. Do what He has given you the ability to do, be patient, and trust the process.
