New year to bring new updates to savings plan

Kemuel Brown
Army Community Service

The new year will bring new changes for federal employees who contribute to their Thrift Savings Plans.

The Internal Revenue Code will place limits on the amount of money that federal employees can contribute to their TSP for the 2021 calendar year. The new limit is $19,500. Employees who are age 50 years and older are now allowed to contribute an additional $6,500 as catch-up contributions.

The goal of catch-up contributions is to allow employees to capitalize on increased earnings as they approach retirement.

The annual additional limit for 2021 is $58,000, which is the total amount of all the contributions an employee can make in a calendar year. This limit includes money from the:

Employee contributions

- Agency/Service Automatic (1%) Contributions.
- Agency/Service Matching Contributions.
- Catch-up contributions are excluded.

For more information visit TSPgov or call the Army Community Service, Financial Readiness office at 767-5058.

Leadership can often be seen in the small things. The “Rock of the DOC,” created by Maj. Steven Orbon, 3rd Infantry Division, is an award given for support beyond the call of duty to the division operations center.

Gratitude in small packages: The Rock of the DOC

Sgt. 1st Class Justin A. Naylor
3rd Infantry Division

Sometimes a rock is more than just a rock. Sometimes it's a rock with a sticker on it.

For Soldiers working in the 3rd Infantry Division's operations center, a sticker-clad rock has a deeper meaning than its base components.

Known as the “Rock of the DOC,” it is an award given for support beyond the call of duty in what can feel like countless hours spent supporting the mission from a windowless area of the division's headquarters. Soldiers working in the DOC oversee thousands of 3rd ID Soldiers conducting operations across the globe.

The concept is pretty simple. It starts with a plain rock and a sticker designed by Maj. Steve Orbon, the former 3rd ID chief of operations. Orbon settled on a rock because it is a play on the Division's nickname “Rock of the Marne.”

The graphic Orbon designed is comprised of a skull wearing a WWI style M1917 helmet with a 3rd ID patch front and center. On the helmet rests a cockroach, representing the Soldiers who work in the DOC, who are known jokingly as DOC-roaches.

On the brim of the helmet are the words Dorian and COVID-19, in memory of the role that the DOC played in the division's response for both the hurricane and the pandemic.

Certificates that accompany the Rock of the Doc include more references to the division's history.

“The division's motto is ‘Nous Resterons La,’ which is French for ‘We Shall Remain There,’ given our history during WWI, said Orbon. “‘We shall Remain Here’ is paying homage to the reality that throughout hurricanes, pandemics, exercises and deployments, the DOC will always remain manned.”

“It sounds incredibly small to hand out a sticker on a rock or just the sticker itself, but there hasn't been a single person who wasn't incredibly thankful that their hard work was being acknowledged,” said Maj. Billy Folinusz, the 3rd ID chief of operations.

The DOC is the “brains” of 3rd ID, explained Folinusz. The DOC serves as the command and control node for the division and all reportable information filters through the Soldiers that work there.

“It is manned 24 hours a day,” explained Folinusz. The DOC receives, refines, collates, and send reports and information to the commanding general, command group, staff and subordinate units as necessary.

The last year has been an especially demanding time for the Soldiers working in the DOC. The division has taken part in a number of command post exercises designed to simulate real world conflicts, all while supporting two brigade deployments to Europe and South Korea.

“A CPX is a massive lift for the team,” said Folinusz. “Between setting up and tearing down the tents and infrastructure that accompanies them multiple times for every event, we have spent countless hours dedicated to CPX prep.”

Prior to the exercises starting, the DOC played a large role in coordinating the division's response for Hurricane Dorian. The DOC also plays an integral part in Fort Stewart's ongoing response to COVID-19.

Leaders help balance quality of life, readiness and the demands of a challenging environment to ensure their teams are prepared to respond and serve our nation. Successfully overseeing all these events took a high level of teamwork, and that helped catalyze Orbon's creation of the Rock of the DOC.

“I think building teams and branding them is one of the most important things we do as leaders,” said Orbon.

For Orbon, the rock also represents the fact that every team has “immovable objects, who everyone else can anchor themselves to during tough times.”

He said that small rewards, even if they are just rocks, create a lasting impression for a team.

“All teams need a symbol to rally behind,” Orbon said. “They need something that resonates with them and embodies what they are about.”

Leaders set the tone for cohesive teams, cultivating a culture of care, pride and ownership across the Army.

Orbon said that as a leader, his number one daily habit was to praise the success of his team members.

“The response has been incredibly positive,” Orbon said. “I think some people were kind of taken aback that anyone was paying attention to the hard work they were putting forth. It's the recognition that they really appreciate, not the rock.”

“Having those things sitting on their desk is a reminder that people value their efforts and they are part of a great team,” Orbon continued. “I also hope it acts as an extra boost during some of those long work days that come with the territory of working on a division staff.”

This small act of recognition went a long way for those Soldiers and civilians who received the award so far.

“As one of the early recipients of the Rock of the DOC, it was a surprise to receive the recognition because being in the DOC every day was normal to me,” said Sgt. Maj. Michelle Crittendon, the 3rd ID division engineer sergeant major.

Although the Rock of the DOC's creator has moved on to another assignment, his legacy endures as the new team continues to hand them out as a reward for a job well done.

“It means a tremendous amount to me that the team up at division has continued to embrace this simple way to recognize excellence and I hope it is something that endures long into the future,” Orbon said.

Black Hearts train under cover of night

Sgt. Andrew McNeil
3rd Combat Aviation Brigade

The sun started to hide behind the horizon as an orange glow blended into a darkening blue sky. A pilot and platoon leader, 1st Lt. Sai Kumar, circled up the Black Heart Soldiers of B Company, 4th Battalion, 3rd Aviation Regiment, next to one of their UH-60M Black Hawk helicopters and conducted the mission brief.

The company flew from Hunter Army Airfield to Lee Gilmore Memorial Airport in Gainesville, Georgia, Dec. 2, where they staged their helicopters and waited for night-fall. Once the sky was black, the 3rd Combat Aviation Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division Soldiers attached night vision optics to their helmets and began conducting pre-flight checks. Their mission was to complete air assault training into multiple mountain landing zones at Dahlonega, Georgia.

The sound of the six helicopter engines grew faint as they took off from the airport into the night sky. The inside of the helicopter was dark. The only light came from the instrument panel and a faint glow of green could be seen over the crew members' eyes created by the night vision optics.

The radio buzzed with chatter as senior pilots guided junior pilots through the challenges of flying at altitude across varying terrain.

In the mountains, the pilots had to deal with wind shifts, navigating through the dense forest, and maintaining situation awareness in a quickly changing landscape.

As the helicopter made its approach for landing, the crew chiefs informed the pilots about what was in their blind spots. The radio buzzed as every crew member communicated key information to land the Black Hawk safely.

"This was an opportunity to stress ourselves, our equipment and to stress our notions of how we lead," said Capt. Daniel Prior, a pilot and the company commander. "This is something we always aspire to do, especially in the Black Hearts, because this helps us build our skills as aviators and leaders."

On the ground, the helicopters would pause to simulate a group of ground troops entering or exiting the aircraft. Once given the okay, each person played a critical role in how the aircraft had to maneuver. The crews had to communicate to get the helicopters back in the sky safely.

In the days leading up to the training, the crews learned how to accomplish the mission in an academic setting. They received briefs on the challenges of flying at elevation, reviewed standard operating procedures, and created plans of execution.

It is important to learn about the mission and the challenges in a safe environment, Kumar said. Developing an understanding of the risks before taking flight creates a proactive crew rather than a reactive crew, he continued.

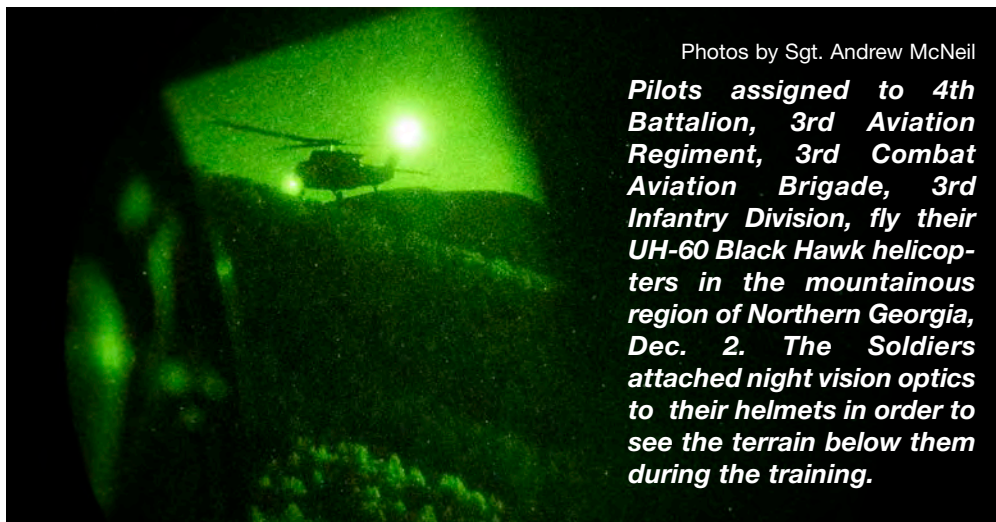

"But it is getting out there and doing it that makes us better," Kumar said.

Prior explained that aviators need to be proficient in all types of terrain, because Soldiers never know where or when the nation will deploy them. This type of training ensures the Soldiers of the 3rd CAB know how to operate in a diverse array of environments and maintain their skills as a key maneuver asset on a battlefield or during contingency operations.

"We own everything one inch off the ground and up," he said.

ACS: Serving military Families through each season

Evie Rodriguez

Army Community Service
Commentary

Serving as a military spouse is not an easy task. In recent years, the addition of technology has made our lifestyle easier, especially when it comes to community connections. Back when I first began my journey as an Army spouse, we relied on each other through our Family Readiness Group, which was always only a phone call away. Every month we supported each other by celebrating birthdays, holidays and embracing each other as Family because after all, we each chose a common path in life, to join the Army Family.

Today's Army spouse lives in a different environment. With the modern conveniences of having technology at their fingertips, practically anything that is needed is just a click away. Having the ability to connect to digital resources has proven to be a very important part of everyday life. Due to this, making in-person connections seems to be a dying art. While technology is convenient, it's important that we don't forget the importance of human interaction. Even during the trying times of a global pandemic, it's important to not forget that in-person communication, even while being safe and socially distanced, can go a long way for the mind and soul.

Part of my job with Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield Army Community Service is to connect our military spouses to our various support programs that are offered both in-person and digitally. While social media has become a fantastic tool, we are constantly improving the ways that we convey the importance and benefit of our trainings and activities to our military Families. We at ACS have a responsibility to promote programs that provide training and stability to our military Families and we strive to stay relevant to the times in relation to how those services are offered.

During deployments in particular, staying connected is the key to success. Part of the ACS mission is to train our military Families to understand the pressure that the military lifestyle can bring, especially during a deployment. Our staff is committed to take the Army values of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, and personal courage to the next level to ensure that the mission of our Soldiers and their Families can be successful.

We are committed to help our Soldiers and Families move forward to their next step of achievement both personally and professionally. Most importantly, remember that you are never alone, we are here for you during each season of your life. Bottom line, we've got your back!

Female trauma mannequin enhances readiness

Pfc. Aaliyah Craven

50th Public Affairs Detachment

The Medical Simulation Training Center hosted training on a female trauma mannequin at Fort Stewart Nov. 30 to Dec. 3.

Soldiers that participated in the training were combat life savers, combat medics and physician assistants. The goal of the exercise was to assess the capabilities of a female trauma mannequin against a wide range of Tactical Combat Casualty Care procedures and for Soldiers to provide feedback about their experience.

"We are assessing the prototype," said Lt. Col. Rickardo Christopher, the product manager of medical simulation for the Program Executive Office for Simulation, Training, and Instrumentation. "Our first thing is to find out exactly the good, the bad and what needs improvement. Once we do that, our plan is to go ahead and do research and analysis."

According to the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense, Personnel and Readiness Report, the rise in females enlisting in all services rose from 16 percent in 2009 to 18.3 percent in 2016. Taking in account the rise in enlisting females, the new mannequin offers possible training for Soldiers on multiple trauma wounds, interchanging and creating multiple trauma scenarios specific to the female anatomy.

Soldiers performed a needle chest decompression and a chest seal. In order to perform procedures, Soldiers removed clothing from the mannequin's torso and felt around the breast for the entry wound and applied a chest seal.

Female mannequins prepare Soldiers for real life battlefield scenarios and ensure readiness to react quickly when needed.

"Soldiers need to be aware that they could be dealing with a female Soldier on the battlefield," said Dr. Bill Pike PhD, a science and technology manager with the Simulation and training technology Center. "When that time comes, they need to be prepared for anatomical differences."

Having Soldiers test and provide accurate feedback is helping the improvements of the mannequin's functionality. Even though the female mannequin is still in its beginning stages, the Medical Simulation Training Center is hoping to have a viable product in the year 2022 or 2023.

"There are a lot of medical gaps that we're looking to close by incorporating upgrades and advancing development to the female mannequin," said Christopher. "This is a bridge between the current and the synthetic training environment"

GDOT suspends construction related lane closures during holiday

GDOT

To ease the stresses of the holiday season the Georgia Department of Transportation has announced the suspension of construction-related lane closures on heavily traveled interstate highways and state routes near major shopping areas and tourist locations from 5 a.m., Dec. 23 to 10 p.m. Dec. 27 for the Christmas holiday. Restrictions are also in place for the New Year's holiday from 5 a.m. Thursday, December 31 to 5 a.m. Saturday, January 2. The statewide lane restrictions allow reduced traffic congestion during the winter holidays.

"Although traffic volumes were down earlier this year due to COVID-19, unfortunately, fatalities on our roadways have been up," said Georgia DOT State Construction Engineer John D. Hancock. "I urge drivers traveling this season to watch your speed, put down your cell phones, be alert and make sure you and your passengers buckle-up. Let's make sure everyone has a happy holiday."

While lane closures will be suspended, the department encourages travelers to exercise caution as work zone crews may still be in close proximity to highways, and safety concerns may require some long-term lane closures to remain in place. In addition, incident management or emergency, maintenance-related lane closures could become necessary at any time on any route.

To help ensure this season of joy is not marred by tragedy, Georgia DOT advises holiday revelers to avoid drinking and driving. Please designate a sober driver in advance or utilize a ride-share or taxi service.

Motorists are also reminded to drive defensively, and exercise extra caution during the season. Slow down and "Drive Alert Arrive Alive." Always maintain a proper speed that is safe for current roadway conditions. Remember, as temperatures drop, any amount of precipitation can freeze and create a hazardous road condition. Should inclement weather occur during the season, Georgia DOT is ready to treat the roads with brine, gravel and salt.

For up-to-date information about travel conditions on Georgia's interstates and state routes, call 511 or visit 511ga.org before heading out. 511 is a free service that provides real-time statewide information on Georgia's interstates and state routes, including traffic conditions, incidents, lane closures, and delays due to inclement weather 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Callers can also transfer to operators to request HERO assistance in metro Atlanta or CHAMP service on highways in other regions of the state.

MEDDAC Soldiers compete for top awards

Pat Young

Winn ACH Public Affairs

Six Soldiers, each a winner of U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, Fort Stewart Soldier, and Noncommissioned Officers of the Quarter awards, participated in a two-day competition for U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, 2020 Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Year titles.

Striving for MEDDAC NCO of the Year were Sgt. Alexander Lozano, Sgt. Shaun Mohr, and Sgt. Barron Tinnelly. The challengers for MEDDAC Soldier of the Year included Spc. Stephanie Palacios-Haley, Spc. Liam Rutherford, and Spc. Chloe Sutton.

The two day competition included warm-up exercises, map orientation, the Marne Mile, ruck march, a combat casualty care lane, communications test, detainee operations and combatives, a 2020 physical fitness test, and an equipment layout for day 1. A military board to test each competitor on current events, the NCO and Soldiers Creed, on related relevant topics was held on day 2.

Each of the contestants had their own reasons for competing and their own ways to prepare.

Tinnelly said, he practiced climbing drills, working on upper body strength and running for stamina to prepare for the event. But he said the event was more than just a competition among peers.

"It is important because it boosts the unit morale overall," Tinnelly said "especially as an NCO. It shows Soldiers that even after you get to the rank of an NCO, you still come out here. You still compete."

He said, it was important to improve yourself and to inspire others.

Palacios-Haley said, she became involved with the Soldier of the Quarter competition because she found it exciting, and it pushed her out of her comfort zone.

"I've been studying almost every day and going to the gym to train up," Palacios-Haley said.

Sgt. 1st Class Daniel Saurwein, the NCOIC said, "The day started with their determination. Their capability, drive, and motivation was evident to anyone present." He noted from the time they donned their body armor until they provided their final salute at the board, the Soldiers demonstrated true professionalism.

These Soldiers are a testament to our organization's readiness, heart, and determination, Saurwein said. "They epitomize "One Team, One Purpose!"

The winner of the MEDDAC competition will be announced Jan. 6.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

The joy and peace in believing

Lt. Col. Christopher Wallace
3rd ID Division Chaplain

Chaplains love holidays. It is a “good” busy for us. Chapels fill with people acknowledging the hope of the season, making time for Family, and slowing down to meditate on some of the best gifts we have in life.

I know that I state the obvious: this year has been very tough for the entire globe, and we’ve felt it in our Army Family. Well, my favorite Christmas Eve service was a tough one as well. In December of 2005, my unit was three months into a twelve month deployment to Al-Taqaddum, Iraq. The first three months passed quickly, but time seemed to slow down to a painful crawl as the holidays hit us hard and the reality of a year from loved ones set in deeply. The service was field expedient. We were in a tent and used chem lights (the sticks you snap to light) instead of candles because the tent was flammable. But given the less than ideal conditions, out of all of the Christmas Eve services I’ve attended in military chapels or civilian churches, this is by far the most memorable. Even when I am at home with family during the holidays, I remember the 2005 service. It was so encouraging to be with a group of Soldiers who for an hour in rough conditioned gathered for unity, hope, and encouragement.

Every year I remember the comradery that is possible and the hope, value, and love that is possible in even the worst situations. The lights and celebrations we see during the holidays reminds us that we have hope for the future. I want to encourage you to make some “time and space” for the things that give you hope. Make time for personal reflection so that you can care of your soul. Be smart with your time off, and connect with your family and friends like you should.

There is always stress, busyness, and disappointment. But this time of year reminds us that there is a lot of goodness in our lives and world. There is sufficient hope and goodness to overcome the hard times. So, prioritize some of these good things. You’ll probably make time for a few runs over the holidays. Use that time for personal thought, meditation, or prayer. Think about the good gifts you have, and let your soul rest. You will probably wake up earlier than the rest of your house and have a few minutes of quiet time. Read, journal, or do something profitable with that time. It takes intention and consistency to do some spiritual fitness just like it does for physical fitness.

Prayer: May the God of hope fill each Soldier, civilian, and Family Member with all joy and peace in believing; that you may abound in hope!

The TCCC lane, part of HHC's Ghost Rider Challenge, consisted of an assessment, treatment and movement of a casualty to safety for medical evacuation.

Ghost Rider Challenge enhances readiness

Spc. Robert Wormley
50th Public Affairs Detachment

Across the Army, leader certification programs are an effort to enhance unit readiness by reinforcing communication and forging trust between the Soldiers and leaders. Normally these opportunities are reserved for officers and noncommissioned officers, but Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 83rd Chemical, Biological, Radiological, and Nuclear Battalion on Fort Stewart, afforded the opportunity to their junior leaders on Dec. 10.

The certification, coined as the Ghost Rider Challenge, was a miniature version of what all officers and non-commissioned officers assigned to the 83rd CBRN are required to experience.

"The challenge started with an Army Combat Fitness Test, then participants had to conduct map reading and plot the location of the stations," said Cpt. Danielle Deshaies, commander of HHC. "From there, each team went to various stations, rucking to get to each one. The stations for this challenge were flipping a large tire 10 times, changing the tire on a High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle, treating a casualty and moving them to the linkup point, and weapons familiarization."

Opportunities like the Ghost Rider Challenge help Soldiers stay sharp with their warrior tasks and drills.

"It's been awhile since we've been able to do things like this," said Cpl. Maria Trejo, an operations noncommissioned officer assigned to HHC. "It was nice to have a refresher of various military exercises as we moved from lane to lane."

The Soldiers honed their abilities to work as a team along the way by reacting to enemy contact under stressful circumstances.

"My favorite part was the random attacks and challenges that hindered the ruck," said Cpl. Kevin Thomas, a human resources specialist assigned to HHC. "It gave us a chance to see how we could operate as a team and how we grew each time."

The Ghost Rider challenge was roughly six hours and eight miles of rucking. The larger leader's certification for 83rd CBRN is usually double that.

"We wanted to provide the opportunity for junior Soldiers to put their skills to the test and work together as a team," said Deshaies. "Usually at the end of a leader's certification, participants feel accomplished and bond as a unit and we wanted the same experience for our Soldiers with their peers."

The 83rd CBRN's leader certifications are operated at the battalion level, but HHC conducted the ghost rider challenge on their own.

"I've never participated in an event like this," said Spc. Savante Herbet, a signal support systems specialist assigned to HHC. "Challenges like this may seem like a waste of time on paper, but once you get into it and let yourself become vulnerable to the exercise, you will learn a lot; you may even enjoy yourself."

274th MCT Soldiers make special holiday delivery

Sgt. Laurissa Hodges
3rd Sustainment Brigade

Soldiers assigned to 274th Movement Control Team, Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Division Sustainment Brigade, took time from their normal mission of coordinating the transportation of all classes of supply for a special holiday delivery. The MCT conducted a foot march to deliver more than 35-pounds of toys to the Fort Stewart Army Community Service Dec. 8.

"In garrison, our mission is to facilitate the movement of personnel, cargo and equipment through different modes of transportation," said Capt. Jebediah Toller, the commander of 274th MCT. "Today, we wanted to facilitate the movement of different kinds of gifts for the Soldiers and Families of the community and Fort Stewart since they support our troops so well."

Soldiers with 274th MCT and ACS both shared a common interest of helping families in need during the holidays and worked together to coordinate the toy donation.

"The goal for ACS overall is to help Families and Soldiers stay ready for combat, but more importantly our goal for the toy drive is to assist Soldiers who cannot afford a toy for their children," said Rodney Hargus, a program analyst and toy drive coordinator for Fort Stewart's ACS.

With the support of toy donations, ACS is able to support more applicants during the toy drive.

"When Soldiers reach out and say they want to help ACS that means a lot," said Hargus. "Right now, we have 102 applications for 359 gifts and we find those donors from the units, retirees that work on Fort Stewart and family members. Whenever units support, like 274th MCT, they supplement those bags and we are able to donate to the families."

For the Soldiers of the MCT, donating toys was a good way to give back to the community as well as share the holiday spirit.

"I know some Families are struggling and they may not have the resources available to them, especially because of the COVID situation, so it's just a good way to say 'hey, we support you,'" said Toller. "I have two kids of my own and I know during the holidays it can be tough when you struggle and there's added stress, so we're trying to take some of the stress away from the parents that might be struggling."
