

Survivors find easier Army post access

Installation Management Command

Certain Gold Star and next-of-kin survivors are expected to find it easier to visit Army installations since a new process went into effect in January.

The new survivor's access policy allows qualified survivors to get through gate security more easily and travel on post without an escort to attend events, view memorials, receive services and similar activities using their survivor's access card.

"The Army values people, especially our Gold Star spouses and family members," said Lt. Gen. Douglas Gabram, commanding general, U.S. Army Installation Management Command. "This change allows them to more easily receive the benefits and services to which they are entitled, and helps enable them to remain connected to the Army."

Eligible survivors are those who meet the criteria to receive the Gold Star lapel button or Gold Star next-of-kin lapel button, including widow or widower, parent, child, step-child, child through adoption, brother, half-brother, sister and half-sister.

Eligible survivors may apply for and receive a survivor's access card by using DA Form 1602 for survivor's access.

Among the services available to Gold Star spouses and next-of-kin family members is the Army Survivor Outreach Services program, which provides dedicated and comprehensive support through a

AER

"As a garrison commander, I've been able to see AER in action and impact people's lives," said Col. Noah Cloud, U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden commander, at the event.

"I've seen families who have children with disabilities who are struggling with care because they needed something — a piece of equipment, a bed that accommodated a special requirement — and they just couldn't afford it so they were just going without it. They ran across someone who suggested they go talk to AER, and it was really life-changing for the family."

AER is 100% focused on financial readiness, said Michael Vetter, USAG Wiesbaden AER officer.

"It's really about Soldiers helping Soldiers, giving each other a hand when they need it and knowing they're there for each other during good times and bad."

A 5k fun run is scheduled for 6:15 p.m. May 7 at the fitness center.

Wiesbaden celebrates Black History Month

Emily Jennings

USAG Wiesbaden Public Affairs

U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden celebrated Black History Month with an observance Feb. 26 in the Tony Bass Auditorium.

The theme for this year's event, hosted by the 66th Military Intelligence Brigade, was "Honoring the past, securing the future."

Lt. Col. Thomas Herman, deputy commander of the 66th MI Bde., told the story of the all-black 369th Infantry Regiment. Initially, they had been relegated to labor service, he said. Then, in 1918 they were assigned to the French, who were ecstatic to receive reinforcements and completely integrated the Soldiers into their front lines, he said.

"From April 1918 to Nov. 11, 1918, which was Armistice Day, the 369th fought valiantly alongside the French in both defensive and offensive actions along the front," Herman said. "France awarded the entire unit the Croix de Guerre along with presenting 171 individual awards for heroism."

It is important to hear these stories and to celebrate Black History Month, Herman said. Events like these help to educate people on the many forms of racism so Army Soldiers and leaders can identify and stop them.

"Personally, I see their example as one of the truest forms of selfless service out there; something I want to try and emulate. What about the other Army values? Loyalty, duty, respect, honor, integrity and personal courage. This unit — these Soldiers — and many others truly lived the Army values in some of the most extreme conditions possible. It is important to celebrate their achievement and attempt to emulate their example."

While acknowledging the successes the U.S. has made over the last 100 years, he cautioned the need to remain vigilant and strive to root out racism and discrimination.

"Diversity is one of our country's and our Army's greatest strengths, as it allows us to harness the best of all of us," he said. "Learning from where we have been will help us do better for tomorrow."

A video was presented that depicted moving stories of the contributions of local blacks and African Americans in history and in the Army.

Master Sgt. Tony Williams, 66th MI Bde., shared the story of his great, great uncle, Bishop Robert S. Williams and his family's 100-plus-year legacy of church leadership, which he continues today in the Catholic Church.

Command Sgt. Maj. Francis Swirko, Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion U.S. Army Europe, recalled as a white student being bused to a majority black and Hispanic school district in Boston in 1974. He described how he and other children on his bus had to duck down to avoid rocks being thrown in protest.

Benjamin Brand paid tribute to his long-time friend and Soldier Master Sgt. Micheal Riley, who spent many years stationed in Germany and died during a firefight in Afghanistan in 2019.

USAG Wiesbaden Postmaster Carolyn Johnson told of how she joined the Army against her father's advice and experienced discrimination because of her skin color. She later went on to make history as the first female postmaster in Europe, which she called "an honor."

The U.S. Army Europe Dixieland Band entered through the back of the auditorium belting out jazz hits, such as "Basin Street Blues," popularized by Louis Armstrong, Ella Fitzgerald, Ray Charles and Miles Davis; and "I Found a New Baby," first recorded by African American jazz pianist and composer Clarence Williams.

Pinwheels to symbolize Child Abuse Prevention Month

April is nationally recognized as Child Abuse Prevention Month. The symbol for child abuse prevention is the pinwheel, which represents hope, health and happiness. The pinwheel is a happy and uplifting symbol of childhood and represents our efforts to ensure the healthy development of children. Additionally, the pinwheels serve as a reminder that we all have a responsibility to create communities that promote healthy environments for children.

The Army Community Service Family Advocacy Program has partnered with the garrison's elementary schools and child development centers this month in an effort to spread awareness and get the community involved because we all play a role in children's lives. The community will see pinwheels colored by the children on display in various locations around the garrison. The children will also be making their own pinwheels and "planting" them in their classrooms to create a pinwheel garden.

Our most basic obligation is to support the healthy development of our nation's children. All children deserve a great childhood because our children are our future.

Laura Johnson, U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden Family Advocacy Program Specialist

Herald Union file

The Wiesbaden Family Advocacy Program provides education, training and awareness to help prevent domestic abuse, child abuse and neglect. During the month of April, pinwheels will be displayed around the garrison as a reminder of everyone's responsibility to promote a healthy environment for children.

Alert

The Army's Alert mass warning notification system notifies service members, Army civilians and their families during a crisis. Alert operators, for example, can issue alerts in the event of an active shooter, inclement weather or any other event requiring immediate notification.

Alert provides similar service to the old AtHoc system — which it replaced — and is capable of sending emergency notifications to worldwide users via desktop pop-up, mobile phone, SMS text, email and public distribution.

Personnel with a common access card and a ".mil" email address should verify their contact information is updated. To check, users should go to the Alert icon at the bottom right of their work

Forum focuses on spouse jobs, training

Melissa Bitter

Special to the Herald Union

More than a dozen spouses, dependents and other U.S. ID cardholders attended U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden's first Spousal Forum on Hiring March 3 at the Community Activity Center.

Greeting attendees was Garrison Commander Col. Noah Cloud and Deputy Garrison Commander Scott Mowry who said this first employment forum will serve as a launching point on where to go from here.

"You (spouses) are very important to us," Cloud said. "You support our Soldiers and Airmen and they are important to us. We want to be able to fulfill the needs of our Soldiers and their families."

The forum brought representatives from the Directorate of Human Resources, Workforce Development, Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, Army Community Service and U.S. Army Europe G1 to a single location to engage in dialogue, answer questions and provide guidance in the federal hiring process.

Personnel from Defense Commissary Agency, Army & Air Force Exchange Service and the Wiesbaden Community Spouses' Club, Inc. Thrift Shop were also on hand to provide information about current paid positions available within those organizations.

"It's important to have all the people in the right spot being supportive to those looking for opportunity," Cloud said. "We want to help you understand which opportunities exist and how to get those opportunities."

Recently the garrison hired five spouses in the on-post housing office. Creating new civilian positions, which many spouses may be eligible for, allows more opportunities for spousal employment within the community.

"Who better represents the needs of the community" than the spouses who live within the community, Cloud said.

The morning session dedicated time to answering questions about general hiring practices, how to find employment opportunities and how to maximize the abundant amount of time many spouses put into volunteer work.

Along with paid positions available throughout the garrison, volunteer opportunities are becoming available in a variety of agencies and organizations as a way to get more spouses and dependents into the federal training systems.

The goal is to provide opportunities for people to get real job training experience and hopefully into some of the training available online or digitally, Cloud and Mowry said.

While volunteering in a role doesn't guarantee a job within that agency or organization, the volunteer hours will translate into on-the-job experience.

ACS Volunteer Manager Mary Cheney and CPAC representative Angel Rivera Valentin explained how to tally and quantify those hours spent in service so that it translates into job experience during the hiring process.

"Your volunteer hours serve as equal to paid experience. It's important though to quantify your time in these roles so hiring managers can see you have the same level of expertise. You can upload your volunteer service transcripts to USAJOBS or simply put in the hours and date ranges you were in those roles," Cheney said.

Anyone who has questions or needs assistance in obtaining their records from the Volunteer Management Information System should contact the Army Volunteer Corps. on Clay Kaserne or CPAC office in Mainz Kastel.

The afternoon session offered an in-depth look at individual resumes and navigating USAJOBS, the main portal for federal jobs.

Three of the main points delivered to participants were:

1. Complete your resume in narrative form — the more detailed the better, especially with dates worked (or volunteered) and highlight functions related to the job posting.
2. Select all preferences in USAJOBS you believe to be applicable — the CPAC reviewers will confirm the selection most advantageous to the individual.
3. Be honest in your assessment responses, but learn to relate job experience that you may not immediately see a correlation with the job posting.

The garrison continues to seek paid and volunteer roles for spouses and dependents. Additional paid positions will be available during the summer at the post office, vehicle registration, commissary, youth sports and ACS, according to human resources and Commissary representatives.

German traditions include Easter fires, egg hunts, egg shooting and lamb-shaped cakes

As the dark days of winter slowly come to an end, you will see more and more events in Germany that are held outside. Springtime is a time of awakening, which Germans traditionally greet with joyful dances, traditional songs, Easter markets and the so-called Easter Fires. Traces from times long gone hint at the belief that humans tried to draw the sun's warming rays down to earth to scare away the cold and dark days of winter.

Easter Fires have been around in Germany for centuries. Traditionally, they can be found in Christian communities where people gather to light a big bonfire on the evening before Easter Sunday. If you live in a community where the local church bells announce the time or the beginning of a church service, you may wonder why you don't hear the bells during the days before Easter Sunday.

When asked, German children may tell you that they fly to Rome to be blessed by the Pope. In fact, they fall silent on Thursday before Easter to remember the time of Christ's suffering and death. However, they come back to life when people gather during the night before Easter, to light a big Easter fire, to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus. In earlier days, people would extinguish every light in their houses before going to the Easter Fire. Then, they would light their torches, to bring "new life" to their homes.

Although the Easter bunny delivers and hides colored eggs in the yards of German families, did you know that in some parts of Germany, the Easter Fox or the Easter Rooster delivers the eggs? This may have resulted from the tradition of dyeing the Easter eggs with onions or onion skins, which gave the eggs a reddish-brown tint, which may look like a fox or a brown rooster. However, most Germans have adopted the bunny as their traditional egg deliverer. Hence, many German families bake a cake in the form of a bunny or a lamb — as a symbol for Christ — on Easter Sunday.

After an adventurous egg hunt through the yard — with mom and dad desperately trying to remember where they hid all the eggs — many adults continue with another very German Easter tradition: Easter Egg Shooting. Germans have the opportunity to discover their inner William Tell at a local shooting range. In this open-to-all, fun-filled Easter Egg Shooting event, people shoot air rifles at small targets and win a colored egg every time they hit the target.

Easter in Germany is a time when many festivals and markets come back to life. It is the end of the Lenten season — so you can finish eating the rest of your Fasching candy — and the unofficial beginning of spring. Take a look at your local community's events calendar and you will notice that there will begin to be fewer weekends of peace and quiet in Germany.

Check your local listings for event dates and times.

Students participate in Culinary Arts Festival

Students from across the continent came to U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden for the Culinary Arts Festival of Europe Feb. 12 at Army Community Service.

Students from seven Department of Defense Education Activity-Europe schools, including Wiesbaden High School, participated in the competition.

Teams demonstrated their culinary knowledge, skills, and creative abilities during the competition through the preparation of a unique three-course meal consisting of a starter, an entrée and a dessert, according to event organizers. Performance was observed and rated by judges from the food service industry and post-secondary schools.

The student chefs were judged on safety and sanitation, product taste and appearance, and menu and recipe presentation.

WHS senior Fernando Colorado competed for the second year in a row. He recalled as a child watching his mother cook and said he wants to be a chef.

"This is my career," he said. "I always wanted to be in the kitchen, even when I was little."

WHS senior Jonah Tyler said he and his teammates were nervous, but they handled it well.

"Cooking is fun for me – a lot of joy; a way to decompress," he said. "It's something I used to do at home all the time, and I came here, and I learned a lot of new skills."

Terry Hunter, culinary teacher at WHS, was pleased with how the students did.

"They practiced hard – they put in a lot of hours, and each time they got better," she said. "They were happy with the comments they received."

The results were announced later that evening with Stuttgart High School taking first place, Alconbury Middle High School in second place and Hohenfels Middle High School in third place.

March is National Save Your Vision Month. The American Optometric Association (AOA) offers five tips for a lifetime of healthy vision.

Every waking minute, our eyes are working hard to see the world around us. It's easy to incorporate steps into your daily routine to protect your vision!

1. Schedule yearly comprehensive eye exams. Seeing a doctor of optometry or ophthalmology regularly will help keep you on the path to healthy eyes. The Wiesbaden Army Health Clinic's optometry service offers eye exams to active duty and family members. Appointments are also available to retirees and civilians on a space available basis.

2. Protect your eyes from UV rays. No matter what season of the year, it's important to wear sunglasses. Sunglasses protect our eyes from harmful UVA and UVB light. These ultraviolet rays can lead to macular degeneration, cataracts and skin cancer around the eyes. However, not all sunglasses provide UV protection. Make sure you get sunglasses that indicate they block all or most of UVA and UVB light.

3. Give your eyes a break from digital device use. Most of us spend a lot of time looking at electronic screens at work and home. Consequently, many people experience dry, sore and tired eyes, headaches and blurry vision which is now termed Computer Vision Syndrome.

Thankfully, there is a simple step that will combat CVS known as the 20/20 rule: every 20 minutes, take a 20 second break and look at something at least 20 feet away. Artificial tear drops may also be helpful.

4. Eat your greens. We are constantly reminded that good nutrition is important for our health and this is true for vision. Eat five servings of fruits and vegetables each day. Green leafy vegetables are particularly good for the eyes. Some examples include spinach, Swiss chard and kale.

5. Use eye protection and use contact lenses appropriately. There are approximately 2,000 eye injuries every day in the US according to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. For example, metal or dust particles and rebounding nails are the most common causes of vision loss in construction workers. Use appropriate eye protection when around power tools, shooting weapons and riding motorcycles.

Contact lenses are a fantastic vision option, but have potential for serious infection when abused. Do not sleep or swim while wearing contacts. For Active Duty Service members, regulations strictly prohibit contact lens use while deployed or in field environments.

We look forward to serving you at the Wiesbaden Army Health Clinic's Optometry Service!

Plan ahead for pets when moving on, off post

Anna Morelock

USAG Wiesbaden Public Affairs

The Wiesbaden Veterinary Treatment Facility has three main missions, the most visible to the community being the care of its pets.

Whether they've traveled overseas, or been adopted locally, U.S. Army Garrison Wiesbaden's cats and dogs need to ensure their owners register them with the VTF upon arrival. While they are welcome to, pets don't even need to stop in to the VTF, but simply need to send their vaccination records along with their owners to complete the registration process.

The registration process with the VTF may be simple, but owners should still remember that moving is not only stressful on them, but also on their pets.

"It's always important to keep a close eye on our pets while traveling and transitioning to a new environment to make sure they are acclimating well," said Capt. Kathleen Stewart, veterinarian and officer in charge of the Wiesbaden VTF.

Stewart recommended keeping pets' routines as consistent as possible. Make sure they are getting attention, the same number of walks and the same food, and have a blanket that smells like home or a favorite toy, she said.

After they are registered, pets can be seen at the VTF for routine wellness appointments, vaccines and preventive medications, and minor sick call appointments. For more serious issues that require major diagnostics, overnight hospitalization or surgery, pet owners should be prepared to take their pets to a German veterinarian.

Owners with pets on special medications and diets should talk with the VTF staff about the best way to fulfill their pets' needs. The VTF can import certain medications and food, but it may be necessary to purchase these items on the German economy.

"We share (the owners') love for four-legged critters, and we strive to provide the best service for everyone and their pets," Stewart said. "We want to make visits to the VTF as happy and low stress as possible."

When traveling with their owners throughout the European Union, it is important for pets to have an EU pet passport, which can be obtained from a German veterinarian. After its initial issuance, the Wiesbaden VTF staff can update the passport with any additional vaccines. And, while the pet passport facilitates travel within the EU, owners need to check the websites of the countries they are visiting in case there are extra requirements instead of, or on top of, the passport.

When pets are ready to leave Germany for their next duty stations, it's important for the owners to research pet importation requirements for their new home and engage with the VTF early to ensure everyone is ready to move.

The VTF can set up pre-travel appointments to make sure pets' vaccines are up to date before the required timeline is in motion for the health certificate. Most stateside destinations require the health certificate to be signed within 10 days of the pets' arrival.

The Wiesbaden veterinarians can write health certificates back to the United States, U.S. territories and Japan. For other destinations, owners should consult the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and talk to VTF staff on the best way to complete requirements. Other destinations may require a visit to a German veterinarian.
