commander during the ceremony. Distinguished guests on hand included Gen. Terrence Dake, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps; retired Gen. Joseph P. Hoar, former Commander in Chief, U.S. General Command; and retired Gen. John J. Sheehan, former Supreme Allied Commander, Atlantic Command.

Blackman takes command of the "Follow Me" division after serving nearly a year as assistant division commander to Bedard. Blackman, who became assistant division commander in July 1998 was promoted from brigadier general to his current rank in anticipation of his commanding the division. His first order of business is to maintain his Marines' readiness and to improve upon their training in any way he can, he said.

Bedard, who relinquished command to Blackman, said he "is filled with a tremendous feeling of professional pride" as he addressed the division Marines. He praised the troops for their hard work and efforts in his two years as commanding general. "We have 5,700 Marines deployed at all times. But young Marines are up for the challenge," he stated after the ceremony. "They train hard and look forward to getting out there. They are always ready to go."

Day care center opens on main side

Updated facility offers hourly rates

By L. Hodges
Chief

The newly renovated Hadnot Development Center recently opened its doors for 22 with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at W.P.T. Hill Field. The 2d Marine Division, other than the center, was on hand for the ceremony. Over 1,000 division Marines marched to Hill Field, saluting their new ing to Dunn. Shortly after the SNCO Wives club looked at the facility, which is in a trailer. MCCS Facility Maintenance got directly involved with the renovations.

"At first, I didn't really think they would be able to do it," said Deborah Singleton, Director of Children and Youth Services, MCCS, "but they have done a marvelous job. Now it's a warm, fuzzy little place for hourly care."

Maintenance crews gutted the trailer and started from scratch. Old carpet was replaced with shiny, new linoleum floors, which are more sanitary, according to Donita Myers, Supervisor/caregiver at the Hadnot Point CDC.

"The other furniture was darker too, but now it's so bright and cheerful in here," she said. Some safety features have been added as well, including a camera monitor system which records everything that happens in each area of the building.

The facility offers hourly care from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, to anyone living or working on Camp Lejeune, according to Singleton. Parents or guardians must register their children with CDC at Building 4014 in Midway Park. The child's

Marines patrol Kosovar town to keep peace

DONJI LOVIC, Kosovo — The Marines of 4th Platoon, India Company, BLT 3/8, 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU) Special Operations Capable, conducted the first of many ongoing patrol routes instituting some form of law throughout the town.

After building a hasty, vehicle check point during the night, the platoon settled in on a paved road while an Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Team could check the surrounding area for mines or booby-traps. Rain continued through most of the night and Marines adjusted into a smooth rhythm for checking vehicles and patrolling their area of responsibility.

Although the townspeople were friendly to the point of showering Marines with freshly-picked flowers, the threat of hostility was always present.

Complemented with a reinforced squad comprised of a fast attack vehicle, a humvee and 10 Marines, the squad let the public know that Marines were here to help.

"People are moving back into their towns, I guess because they feel comfortable with our presence," said LCpl. Phillip W. Noel, Pointman, 4th Platoon. "We can deal with what we have here and we're more than prepared and trained for the mission we are completing here."

Near the end of the patrol the Marines encountered a concerned citizen who, with the help of a translator, explained they were worried about a suspected mine in a house where soldiers had been staying.

Assisted again by the EOD team, a suspected mine turned out to be a gas mask filter. Still, the Marines felt it was better to be careful than to be casualties.

The first patrol ended with no hostility, and the Marines also made some new friends throughout the town. The patrols also assured the town of Donji Lovic and its surrounding area was secured and under NATO control.

Naval hospital conducts review of mammograms

Cpl. Sharon M. Kalyn
Camp Lejeune correspondent

Breast cancer is life threatening and has become a serious concern for women. Doctors recommend regular monthly self-examinations and yearly checkups with a doctor to monitor changes or lumps, which could potentially become cancerous.

However, several thousand women in the area were recently recalled for mammogram screenings after being examined at the Navy Primary Care Clinic (NPCC).

Earlier this year, Camp Lejeune Naval Hospital determined a need to conduct a Peer Review Investigation, screening 3,793 patients who were seen for mammograms by Dr. Thomas Moore, a civilian radiologist formerly employed by Capitol Health Services (CHS) at NPCC on Gum Branch Road, between October 1995 through February 1999.

CHS is a civilian health care organization contracted to provide care at NPCC.

Radiologists routinely review about 10 percent of each other's work through the Naval Hospital's standard peer review process. It was during this process that the need was discovered to review Moore's patients.

The Women's Health Initiative Office (WHIO) was established in March 1999 as a result of the findings. The office is made up of four radiologists and 24 support staff members, who conduct and manage the mammogram reviews.

"The Naval Hospital remains dedicated to following through with the mammogram review until ALL patients involved are located

Proposed Montford Point monument to honor Marines' contributions

Cpl. Sharon M. Kalyn
Camp Lejeune correspondent

Marines of all ages and eras came together at Camp Johnson to rededicate the site after one of the first black Marines broke ground for a monument to Montford Point Marines.

A wreath as "Taps" played in the background, the marker commemorating the camp to SgtMaj. Raymond Johnson, former commander of the camp, was officially renamed on June 18, 1999.

The only Marine Corps Department of the installation dedicated to the patriotic memory of an African American.

"For the Marine Corps, we are very, very proud of our history and our traditions. The truth is, we excluded blacks from the Marine Corps for the first 160 years of our history," said MajGen. Ray L. Smith, Commanding General, Marine Corps Base.

Prior to the signing of executive order 8803, prohibiting racial discrimination in government agencies, no blacks had served in the Marine Corps. Montford Point was the recruit depot for all blacks from the arrival of the first recruit Aug. 26, 1942, until the end of World War II. More than 19,000 men (approximately 30 black Marine units) trained at Montford Point during that time.

"On the dawn of a new century, we are reminded of their tremendous sacrifice. They gave all they had to protect our democratic rights on distant shores while they were denied those rights back home," said LtCol. Richard M. Reed, Commanding Officer, Supply School, Marine Corps Combat Service Support Schools (MCCSSS), Camp Johnson.

Rev. James E. Moore, retired sergeant major and keynote speaker for the ceremony, spoke on what he learned about the achievements of Montford Point Marines. Moore said he was ignorant of the history of black Marines until he became a gunnery sergeant.

"I believe if we include the history of Montford Point into the entire Marine Corps, we will add a whole chapter to the legacy of the Marine Corps," said Moore.

After the dedication ceremony, guests moved down the road to the groundbreaking site where there are plans to build a monument honoring Marines who trained at Montford Point.

"I think it is overdue. The population of the original Montford Point Marines is depleting fast," said retired SgtMaj. Agrippa W. Smith, who spent 30 years in the Marine Corps starting at Montford Point. His career continued into World War II, Korea and Vietnam. "Unless someone gets it all down before the people pass away, it will be hearsay."

The monument will be a 25-by-20 granite American flag with three depicted faces of

Clinton salutes U.S., allied troops

Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — When war raged in Bosnia, the world waited too long. When the same ethnic cleansing erupted in Kosovo, NATO allies took action. President Clinton told U.S. and NATO ground and air forces in Europe June 22.

"I hope to the day you die," Clinton said, "you will be proud of being part of a nation and a democratic alliance that believes people should not be killed, uprooted or destroyed because of their race, their ethnic background or the way they worship God."

Returning from the G-8 economic summit in Cologne, Germany, the commander in chief traveled to the Stenkovic refugee camp in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. He then traveled to Skopje, where he spoke to ground forces now facing the task of securing peace in Kosovo, and to Aviano Air Base, Italy, where he addressed allied air forces who took part in Operation Allied Force.

The 7,000 U.S. and 43,000 international troops destined to take part in NATO Operation Joint Guardian have "a big, big job" ahead of them in Kosovo, Clinton told soldiers and Marines in Skopje. The security mission is not free of danger or difficulty, he stressed. "There will be some days you wish you were somewhere else."

Unlike the NATO air campaign that employed powerful, precise bombs to destroy, Clinton said, KFOR's success now rides "on your power to build—to be safe while you're doing it—and to protect the ethnic Kosovar Albanians and the ethnic Serbs alike," he said. "As long as they are innocent civilians doing nothing wrong, they're entitled to protection."

The United States is committed to helping people rebuild their lives and communities, "and then to helping Kosovo and all the countries of the region build a brighter, more prosperous future, based on respect for the human rights of all people," Clinton told refugees at Stenkovich.

Now that NATO has won the conflict, Clinton said at Aviano, the NATO allies must now win peace by employing the same qualities it took to win the air campaign—determination, patience, discipline and precision. "No one thinks [peace] will take hold without difficulty," he said. "As more and more light is shed on those burned villages and even more mass graves than we dared to imagine, we become more and more appalled by the dark vision of Milosevic and more and more certain we were right to stop it."

At the Italian base, the president thanked the U.S. and NATO service members of Operation Allied Force "who fought for human dignity and won its cause in Kosovo." The 79-day air campaign proved that "a sustained air campaign under the right conditions can stop an army on the ground," Clinton said.

Allied forces flew more than 30,000 sorties with no combat deaths, and only two planes downed, he noted. "In each case, the pilot [was] recovered; the first in six hours, the second in an hour and a half. That is a truly astonishing record," he said.

The president also recalled the two Army aviators who died in May during a training exercise in Albania—Chief Warrant Officer David A. Gibbs, of Ohio, and Chief Warrant Officer Kevin L. Reichert, of Wisconsin. Both Soldiers were assigned to 6th Cavalry Regiment at Illesheim, Germany.

"I want the American people to know that we could have had many more losses but for your skill and courage," he told allied service members. "You have repeatedly put your lives on the line to save the lives of innocent civilians and turn back the tide of ethnic cleansing.

"I know this has been difficult for many of you," he said. "To sleep 10 to a tent, work 12-hour shifts, six days a week. It's hard for a young pilot to leave a wife and two children, going off into uncertain skies. Hard for some of you to spend Father's Day alone, waiting to hear your child's small voice a long way away on a telephone. I want you to know that I am absolutely certain that you are building a better world for your children."

Along with the air crews, Clinton thanked the maintenance crews, weapons, air traffic controllers and civilian employees. He cited the 31st Civil Engineers who built a tent city in four days to house more than 2,000 service members deployed to the base. "It's the envy of all the urban planners back home in America," Clinton joked. "There's no crime. Decent sanitation and extremely low unemployment."

So many deserve acknowledgment," the president said he wished he could name the American men and women deployed to Aviano from about 90 bases around America and Europe and the allied crews at the base from Spain, Canada, Portugal and the United Kingdom.

Camp Lejeune will hold July 4 celebration Sun 5:30 to 10 p.m. at W Field. The event is open to the public, with entertainment provided by Cook & The Cocoa followed by the 2nd Marine Band. The evening will conclude with a large extravaganza. For more information, call 451-3555.

The Provost Marshall's Office will enforce the traffic and parking plan for the July 4 celebration at W Field. From the main gate, the public will be directed in the PX and commissary parking lots. Commanders and their guests should stay in the left lane and the parking area behind Building 1.

Handicapped persons are also authorized to park behind Building 1. From the rear-area gates, the public should park in spaces normally used for parking throughout the industrial area and the field house.

The Piney Green Gate will be open from 4 to 10 p.m. the day of the event. Holcomb Blvd. will be closed to traffic during the alternate routes should be taken. Extra caution is advised because of the long delays due to heavy pedestrian traffic. Early arrival is highly recommended.

There will be an Independence Day Gun Salute noon in front of Building 1.

Chaplain's presence gives 26th MEU (SOC) assurance

Compiled by
26th MEU (SOC) public affairs

The United States Chaplain Corps has always been a means for ministers of various different religions to serve their country and spread individual messages of faith and goodwill to military members.

From the sands of Iwo Jima to the snow swept terrain of Korea, to even the dense jungles of Vietnam, chaplains have been a solid symbol of hope to the men who fought in those climes.

Wherever America's military is found, so too are its chaplains. So, as Marines from the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU) (Special Operations Capable) enter Kosovo, their chaplains are along side them.

Fulfilling what he calls both an honor and a duty, Navy CMDR Patrick Hahn, a Lutheran Chaplain with the MEU's Command Element, says that his responsibilities in this billet are twofold.

"I advise the MEU commander on certain issues and I coordinate religious services for the Marines and Sailors that are with the MEU," he said.

While in the field, this is not something easy to do. The chapel, for instance, consists of a wooden crate podium and "pews" made out of empty meals-ready-to-eat (MRE) boxes all under the open sky.

But while a building with cushioned seats may be lacking, the Marines need for a chaplain is not.

"The Marines and Sailors out here (in the field) show a greater acceptance of the services that I offer because there are not any of the distracting factors here that one would find on ship or in garrison," said Hahn.

The fact that these Marines are now part of a real-world contingency and not participating in a standard training mission, also contributes to the openness with which they receive the chaplain.

Yet, as Hahn spends his time attending to the welfare of the men and women surrounding him, Petty Officer 2nd Class Aaron Painter spends his time attending to the chaplain. As a Navy religious programs specialist (RP), Painter's job includes preparing for services, administrative duties, assisting the chaplain with his schedule and even acting as the chaplain's "bodyguard" in a hostile environment. While acting as the shepherd to the Marine Corps' faithful flock, chaplains do not carry weapons into combat, so their RPs must also act as protectors. To prepare Sailors like Painter for this unique aspect of their job, they must complete Marine Combat Training with Marines they may serve with in the Fleet Marine Force.

"This is what I signed up to do," he said. "It's the perfect job to serve both God and country."

Aside from providing physical security to his chaplain when they are not in a field environment, he acts as an assistant that handles administrative duties and helps out during services.

"In the field, I still handle these responsibilities, but I also carry whatever gear and supplies the chaplain will need while we are out here," he said.

In fact, it was Painter who shifted chapel by gathering the and constructing the podium. privilege, not a chore, though. "We'll hold services for three hole if we have to."

For both him and Hahn, the of nowhere better to be than these Marines and Sailors. B job and have no regrets.

"I have been a chaplain for stated Hahn. "In that time I things, had more experiences interesting individuals than I imagined. This is a calling that to perform."

Painter, too, loves Marines. "I am an American who is p and Marines are about the America has to offer, so why to be around these guys?"

Chaplains have been arou spiring men in times of wa strength in eras of peace.

And as the Marines from (SOC) head into the war rava Kosovo, once again a chaplain in their ranks offering a pray encouraging word there.

Appellate argument displays military law

Compiled by
Camp Lejeune public affairs

Col. Ralph E. Pearcy II, Staff Judge Advocate, Marine Corps Base, hosted an off-site appellate argument by the Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals on June 11, 1999.

Approximately 60 people, including Marines, judge advocates, and civilians attended the event which was held at the Base Theatre, Camp Lejeune.

Col. Bruce Gombar, Chief of Staff, Marine Corps Base, delivered opening remarks relating his experience as a trial counsel when he was a lieutenant.

Gombar said that most Marine officers do not get to actively participate in the court-martial process today since trial and defense counsel are required to be attorneys.

He stressed the importance of attending events such as the appellate argument to help Marines understand the military justice system which applies to all of us but has become so removed from a Marine's daily life.

After Gombar's remarks, the court commissioner introduced the case of Cpl. Terrance D. Higgins. It was an appeal of his conviction for child abuse.

Higgins had been found guilty of strangling his four year old stepson.

On appeal, Higgins' counsel argued that his trial defense counsel was legally ineffective and that important exculpatory evidence was excluded from trial.

Appellate Defense Counsel Navy LT Frank Doherty argued that the defense counsel should have introduced evidence about the chin strap of his stepson's safety helmet as possible cause of the child's neck injuries.

Doherty argued that this omission by the trial defense counsel was so significant that it amounted to ineffective representation.

Government counsel countered that the exclusion of such evidence did not amount to ineffective counsel or reversible error.

The Government's expert witness at the trial had testified that the size of the marks on the child's neck indicated that they were caused by a cord or rope, not the chin strap of his safety helmet.

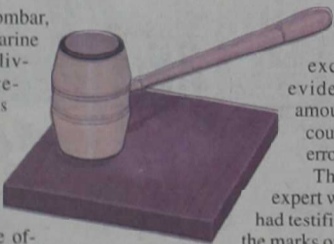

The three judge panel heard arguments from both the Defense and the Government.

Throughout the arguments, the military judges peppered each counsel with questions.

At the conclusion of arguments, the participants answered questions from the audience regarding the process for appealing a trial court's decision.

However, the court refrained from answering any questions involving the facts presented during oral argument since this is an actual case under review.

The court will issue its opinion at a later date.

U.S. representative lashes out on poor military pay

Editor's note: Representative Helen Chenoweth addressed the Speaker of the House of Representatives in Washington May 20. The subject may be of interest to many service members.

Mr. Speaker, in today's military a young enlisted person serving out his or her first contract can expect to make $1,075.80 a month. Over a 40-hour workweek, this averages to $6.70 an hour.

But most of our military personnel don't work 40 weeks. We all remember the famous Army slogan, "We do more before 9 a.m. than most people do all day." Mr. Speaker, it's true. These young enlisted personnel can expect to be at work before first light and not home again until long after dark. And Mr. Speaker, we don't pay them overtime.

These young people train for weeks at a time away from home. They keep themselves in a state of top physical readiness. They live their personal lives according to the high standards of integrity and honor we mandate for them.

These young servicemen must uproot their families on a moment's notice, moving to a new duty station across the country, or across the globe. They do it all on $6.70 an hour.

For members of the military with families, the situation is worse. Despite a modest living allowance, 12,000 families currently serving our Armed Services are dependent on food stamps. Food stamps. We have government employees living off of government subsidies. Mr. Speaker, why don't we skip the intermediary step and just pay them properly the first time?

During the holidays at the Mountain Home Air Force base in Idaho, a network of military spouses work together to collect donations of money and toys for the enlisted families who cannot afford to give their young ones Christmas or Thanksgiving.

Last November and December, the Mountain Home Warm Heart organization, run by the spouses of servicemen, distributed over $18,000 worth of food, toys and cash to needy military families. Where did this money come from, Mr. Speaker? From the pockets of servicemen who already had very little to give.

If this were not bad enough, many military families have more serious concerns than just Christmas and Thanksgiving.

At the Mountain Home Air Force Base, 459 women and children are receiving regular food assistance; 107 of those are infants. The Mountain Home Air Force Aid Society made $131,000 in emergency assistance loans to Military families.

I am very concerned about what will happen to these families when the money runs out and they still have to make monthly payments on the loans.

In the 18th century, citizen soldiers won our independence and secured our liberties. We hailed them as heroes and revered the courage and commitment they demonstrated in defense of our nation. Today that nation is protected by citizen soldiers with the same integrity and sense of duty.

Only in 20th century America, we don't even pay them a living wage. We should be ashamed of ourselves.

From 1988 to today there have been 32 deployments of our military. In the previous 60 years there were only 10 deployments. Put another way, Mr. Speaker, prior to this Administration, the military was deployed an average of once every six years. During the Clinton Administration the military has been deployed an average of four times every year. Furthermore, since 1987, we have depleted our ranks by 800,000 servicemen. In practical terms, that translates into more frequent deployments and dangerously long hours. It is illegal in this country for truck drivers to be on the road longer than eight consecutive hours without rest.

We have pilots patrolling the Mediterranean in 14-hour shifts. In short, this administration is expecting our servicemen to do one hundred times as much and place their lives at risk one hundred times as often with 800,000 fewer people. For as little as $6.70 per hour.

Mr. Speaker, I recently paid a plumber $90 an hour to unstop my garbage disposal. An auto mechanic can expect $50 an hour. A teenager working as a bagger in a grocery store can earn up to $12 an hour. None of these jobs require 24-hour dedication to duty and a constant threat to life.

Mr. Speaker, one young Marine I know of has taken a second job to supplement his income. Every night, this lance corporal goes to work in his Marine uniform and red t-shirt and makes his money from a pizza restaurant.

This young Marine is a working father of two pizza because he is to accept welfare. He is in this endeavor. But it is possible to know how many servicemen are in this predicament most of them by their commanders.

A young lance corporal in the Marine Corps anticipate being combat at least once in a four-year term. I wonder what the corporal's family will do is away and they have to without the supplement from pizza delivery.

I am humbled by the Marine, and the many others like him who work so hard for us. I am ashamed that we don't pay them what they deserve. I urge this body to consider the ethics of government's continued extension of our military our complete lack of gratitude for their service.

Mr. Speaker, I have a make of the members of Tonight when you go home, families, to the security of your homes; when your children in to bed; say for the men and women armed forces.

As you sleep, approximately 100,000 of them stand away from their own loved ones ready to sacrifice their lives to protect you. For as little as $6.70 an hour.

Destructive weather defined by many conditions

correspondent

Damage from hurricanes is caused by torrential rain from the advancing band of thunderclouds, ferocious winds, flooding from heavy rains, tornadoes and storm surge. Hurricanes are normally composed of several distinct features:

The eye - The eye is the calm center of the storm that consists of an area of light winds and the lowest pressure. If passing overhead, the eye could last up to 30 minutes. Due to the circular flow of hurricanes, wind direction reverses after the passing of the eye.

The eye wall - This is the most violent part of the hurricane. It consists of a circular ring of towering cumulonimbus clouds, maximum velocity winds and heavy rains surrounding the eye.

Squall lines - These are brief or violent windstorms, which spiral into the eye wall.

A hurricane's destructive power is determined by the interaction of storm surge, wind, tide level and precipitation.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration developed the Saffir/Simpson

Hurricane Damage Potential Scale which makes comparisons of hurricanes easier. This scale also makes predicting hazards associated with these storms more uniform.

Since storms can strengthen or weaken, they are assigned to different categories at different times of their evolution. The scale categories are defined as:

Category One - Sustained winds of 74-95 mph (64-82 knots) or storm surge (large mass of moving water) of 4-5 feet above normal sea state. The hurricane causes no real damage to building structures, except possibly to unanchored mobile homes, shrubbery and trees. There is usually some coastal flooding and minor pier damage.

Category Two - Sustained winds of 96-110 mph (83-96 knots) or storm surge up to 6-8 feet above normal sea state. Some roofing material, door and window damage to buildings and considerable damage to vegetation, mobile homes and piers may occur. Coastal and low-lying escape routes flood two to four hours before the arrival of the eye of the storm. Small craft in unprotected anchorage will likely break moorings.

Category Three - Sustained winds of 111-130 mph (97-113 knots) or storm surge up to 9-12 feet above normal sea state. Some structural damage may occur to small residences and utility buildings; however, mobile homes are likely to be destroyed. Flooding near the coast can destroy smaller structures, and floating debris could damage larger structures. Terrain continuously lower than 5 feet above sea level (ASL) may be flooded inland as far as six miles.

Category Four - Sustained winds of 131-155 mph (114-135 knots) or storm surge up to 13-18 feet above normal sea state. More structural damage may occur to small residences with some complete roof structure failure, and major damage to lower structures near the shore.

There is also major erosion of beach areas. Terrain continuously lower than 10 feet ASL may be flooded inland as far as six miles requiring massive evacuation of residential areas.

Category Five - Sustained winds of greater than 155 mph (135 knots) or storm surge greater than 18 feet above normal sea state.

Complete roof failure on many residences and industrial buildings may occur; however, there may be some complete building failures with small utility buildings blowing over or away.

Major damage could occur to lower floors of all structures located less than 15 feet ASL and within 500 yards of the shoreline. Massive evacuation of residential areas on low ground within five to 10 miles of the shoreline may be required.

There are also destructive weather conditions which base operations uses to determine the severity of weather and help officials decide on actions to take in the event of destructive weather. They are as follows:

Destructive Weather Condition I, Caution - A specific destructive weather system is forecast to affect the Camp Lejeune area within six hours.

Destructive Weather Condition I, Emergency - The Camp Lejeune area is currently experiencing a specific destructive weather system.

Destructive Weather Condition I, Recovery - The destructive weather has passed the Camp Lejeune area, but safety and storm hazards remain. All orders, restrictions, and guidance established in previous conditions remain in effect.

The Camp Lejeune area emergency management structure is effecting the speedy return to normal operations by eliminating safety concerns, reestablishing services, utilities, and transportation system, clearing debris, and performing essential repairs.

Initial weather forecasts indicate the 1999 hurricane season as potentially the most destructive in 20 years, and this could cause destructive winds and flooding activity to occur along coastal areas.

He said each time he was given a new challenge in the Marine Corps, it was the greatest achievement of his career but commanding the "Second to None" division is indeed the pinnacle.

He added that the tradition of 2d Marine Division is special and it is a unique unit unlike any other in the services.

"I am really honored to be an African-American Marine myself," said PFC Travis Whitfield, a student at Supply School, MCCSSS, and a native of the Jacksonville area.

"I get a sense of well being and a warm feeling right here in my heart. They've accomplished much more than I have," he added.

Kosovo operations

Vehicle checkpoints vital to security efforts in Kosovo

Marines enforce tight security in protecting command element

Story and photos by
Sgt. Micheal D. Rogers
26th MEU (SOC) correspondent

GNJILANE, Kosovo—With an increased role in military operations other than war, the Marines from 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable) found themselves in the city of Donji Lovic, Kosovo, setting up a checkpoint to control the flow of traffic down the hill from the command element (CE).

Not knowing what to expect, 4th Platoon, India Company, BLT 3/8, left in a tactical column with a full combat load and the support of one humvee and two fast-attack vehicles. They would be the first unit to patrol the area.

In the midst of their three-mile hike and concerns of danger, a cool, gentle downpour soothed their backs and minds.

Despite the rain, the townspeople flocked to the streets to welcome these "saviors," and toss flowers while chanting "NATO... NATO... NATO." The Kosovars also showed their affection with two fingers, the universal sign for peace.

One little boy with rosy cheeks, a green and blue sweater, and dirty blonde hair sat on his bicycle blowing kisses to any Marine who would wave or smile.

Upon learning new words, the children threw themselves back into chant with accents that made even the toughest Marines laugh, "Amerdika! Amerdika!"

"That's the kind of stuff that makes it all worthwhile," said Sgt. Johnnie C.

Parton, 4th Platoon. The Liberty, Ky., native, continued by explaining that he has two children of his own and the chanting really brought it home.

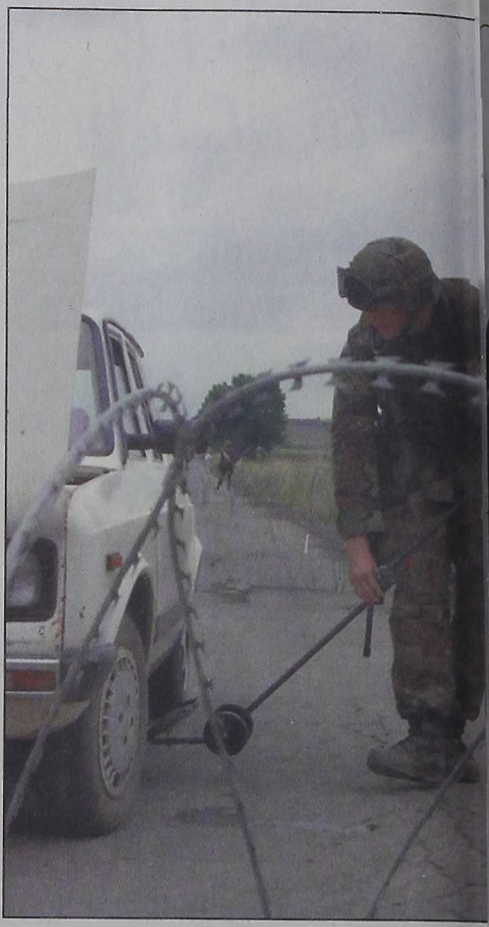

Arriving at the soon-to-be checkpoint around 9:30 p.m., the Marines were confined to the road because the threat of mines is as real as the rain.

About an hour later, an area was cleared of mines so the Marines of 4th Platoon had a place to stay protected from the rain and gloomy night. While the darkness of the night thickened and the checkpoint was still not erected, the Marines of India Company endured the rain to set five rows of staggered concertina wire and assign a guard schedule to check vehicles from the north and south of the main supply route.

"We're basically looking for anything more than a common knife, however, we're checking for many things out of the ordinary such as an excess of wires from the alternator or into the gas tank," said Cpl. Clayton W. Lafrenz, Squad Leader, 4th Platoon and a Syracuse, N.Y., native.

Lafrenz continued by saying that he did a lot of preparation for this type of mission. Everything from setting up a check point back at Camp Lejeune, to actually having Marines posing as terrorists.

"Sometimes this place is kind of eerie, and on the other hand it's a real nice place with the kids yelling their favor for us constantly," said Cpl. Mark Leibowitz, Team Leader, 4th Platoon. "You usually see this on the news, but here it is real."

Amidst the concertina wire, LCpl. Christopher J. Grimm, 4th Platoon, India Company, uses a mirror on wheels underside of vehicles at the checkpoint in Donji Lovic.

Searching for weapons or contraband of any kind, Marines from India Company give vehicles of any size a thorough check inside and out.

Marines display versatility in Kosovo

Quick Reaction Force flexes its muscle while preserving peace

Story and photos by
Sgt. Micheal D. Rogers
26th MEU (SOC) correspondent

GNJILANE, Kosovo—Exploiting their diversity as a force in readiness, Marines of 3d Platoon, Kilo Company, BLT 3/8, were part of a Quick Reaction Force (QRF) to keep the peace surrounding the Forward Operating Base of the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable), command element.

A quick reaction to a threat near the postal office was only the beginning of many things that would test 3d Platoon.

As the Marines began securing the perimeter, members of the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) informed Marines that many of the locals were attempting to burn down the town's office of deeds and land titles.

3d Platoon then sent a QRF of one squad to the deeds office to investigate the interest of the building. At that time, two-man foot patrols were also sent out to ensure everyone knew the Marines were present.

"Once we reached the deed office, explosive ordnance disposal came and cleared the entire building so we could set up a command post for the platoon," said Cpl. Brandon M. Smith, Squad Leader, 3d Platoon and a Madison, Ohio, native.

As night settled in around the Marines in their new surroundings, and they started scouting out the area, a force of KLA numbering close to 100 was found in the vicinity of the deed building.

"It's almost like we were in a standoff. About 10 minutes later I think they realized we had more equipment and a better position," said 1stLt. Matthew W. Tracy, Commanding Officer, 3d Platoon. The West Hartford, Conn., native, added, "I think they knew that we were ready to use the force necessary to keep the peace in Gnjilane."

On a foot patrol in the area of the deed building, Smith and two other members of his platoon located a large complex with an open gate and no lights.

Identified as a university, they decided to venture into the darkness for further investigation.

"Once inside the complex, almost the first thing that caught my eye was two old pieces of artillery facing the gate," said Smith.

Roughly the length of a football field into the "university," the Marines noticed military gear strewn about the roads and decided to wait for the morning light, just in case, according to Smith.

The night rolled on with almost zero luminescence and sporadic gunfire kept the Marines on edge throughout the night. Rotating guards to keep alert, everyone had a few hours to sleep.

The morning light found 3d Platoon Marines ready for action and alert to their surroundings. Further inspection of the grounds proved the complex was nothing close to being a university.

"Besides the numerous uniform items in many warehouses, there were medical facilities, a chowhall, two of what appeared to be motor transportation buildings and an ammunition supply point, along with more maps and paperwork than I could count," said Smith.

Once a situational report was called in to encompass the entirety of the find, higher headquarters notified the platoon to secure the compound and all entrances and exits. The complex was evacuated in a moment's notice.

"The entire area was heavily bombed and it seemed as if it was abandoned, due to bombing," said Tracy. "There were two buildings that looked like they were bombarded with explosives in the one or two-thousand pound range."

The area was so hastily evacuated that food was still in bowls, sleeping bags were in fighting holes and living areas were left with most of the materials in tact, according to Tracy.

After fortifying both exits to the compound, 3d platoon began sending patrols between the deed house, which was just around the corner, and the Serbian complex.

Early that night, a QRF was sent about 100 yards down the road from the Marines new home to investigate gunshots from what sounded like a small caliber pistol, according to Tracy.

They did not find a shooter or any weapons, however they did find three buildings that had been occupied. However, since there were no weapons visible, and the Marines' mission in Gnjilane did not include going door-to-door searching of homes, the QRF went on their way back to the complex.

After notifying the proper authorities, another sandbag-bunker was constructed across the street from the complex, giving the Marines a clear view of the KLA buildings.

Though tasked with overlapping missions and areas of threat, 3d Platoon, Kilo Company, is one example of how the Corps keeps proving itself and its ability to adapt, overcome, and take control of a situation without hesitation.

"While we've been busier than hell the past few days, the platoon has earned a real sense of accomplishment, especially the way we've had to move from place to place doing an assortment of missions," said Tracy.

Marines test readiness with mishap drill

LCpl. Otto C. Pleil-Muete
Hawaii correspondent

KAHUKU TRAINING AREA, Hawaii — Marines from Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron (HMH) 363 took a readiness test as they were called upon to respond to a simulated helicopter crash at the Kahuku Training Area.

Marines from the Aircraft Mishap Board for HMH-363 responded immediately to the call along with the Emergency Reclamation Team and landed at the scene with all their equipment on a CH-53D Sea Stallion.

This is the second time this year that HMH-363 has undergone this exercise, according to Capt. John Jolley, Aviation Safety Officer for HMH-363. The exercise is required annually for the squadron.

"We got some good training out of it," said Jolley. "It gives you a real good opportunity to look at where you stand and to see if you're prepared for a real emergency," added Maj. Alex A. Chatman, Director of Safety and Standardization for HMH-363.

The scenario involved four victims in the CH-53D crash, who were either dead or injured.

About one hour after the crash, Coast Guard personnel arrived at the scene and proceeded to evacuate the injured victims from the site.

The mishap board came in soon afterward to investigate the accident.

"The main reason for the investigation is to keep it (accidents) from happening again — to prevent a recurrence," said Jolley.

The reclamation team then followed to retrieve all salvageable materials from the site and remove any hazardous materials, according to SSgt. Darren L. Deain, Team leader for the Reclamation Team. They were also in charge of removing the aircraft from the crash site. "It's a great exercise," said Capt. David Kirk, Standardization Officer for HMH-363. "It always highlights the areas we need improvement."

According to Kirk, the exercise went well over all, especially considering the Marines had not known the exercise was planned for that day.

As the old adage goes, "practice makes perfect," and according to Marines from HMH-363, they will be better conditioned to handle a real accident as a result of this practice.

Capt. John Jolley, Aviation Safety Officer for HMH-363, checks out resc during the mishap exercise June 14.

ATC Marines keep birds flying in Taszar

LCpl. Derek A. Shoemake
Taszar correspondent

TASZAR, Hungary — GySgt. Vernon Abshire's job is one of precision. And when the responsibility for guiding multimillion dollar aircraft loaded with ordnance is part of the job, there is no other way to be.

Abshire, Staff Noncommissioned Officer in Charge of the Air Traffic Control (ATC) Detachment is one of 14 Marines serving as an air traffic controller there.

According to 1stLt. Dan Griffins, Detachment Commander, their job began as soon as they arrived in country. "Every time we work in a different tower, the controllers have to be requalified," he said. The reason for this recertification, explained Griffins, is to familiarize the controller with both that particular area and procedures that might be different than what the controller is accustomed to. "We have a lot of really expert controllers," said Griffins. "So requalification was fast."

Due to personnel shortage and the fact that ATC Marines must also complete a series of tests and qualifications before being able to deploy, they often deploy with Marines from other bases.

The ATC Detachment is made up of four Marines from Marine Corps Air Station Beaufort, S.C.; five from MCAS Cherry Point, N.C.; and five from MCAS New River, N.C. "We're used to seeing a lot of the same faces," said SSgt. Andrew Blaske, Radar Watch Supervisor and Beaufort Marine, who was out of place in the tower that stood high over Taszar's flightline.

After a radar outage, Blaske and the other Marines who work with radar, were out of a radar room for more than a week. During this time, the controllers had to guide them in the old-fashioned way. "We're still running missions as usual," said Blaske. "We just don't have the ability to (know where the aircraft are at) before we can see them with our eyes."

"Even without radar," said Abshire, from Cherry Point, "working air traffic control for Allied Force was at times easier than the job they do in the rear. Back there, we deal with mostly civilian air traffic," he said. "Here, it's all military. Most of the civilian air traffic is out of Budapest. This allows you to focus more on the mission at hand."

The Marines are also working with Airmen and Hungarian controllers to lighten the workload.

"There is internal joking, but we all on the same team," said Griffins, also from Cherry Point.

Blaske does point out that there are some differences between the Air Force and Marine controllers. "Our qualifications go by how soon you can get them," he said. "But the Air Force guys have to wait until certain ranks. You could have an E-4 or E-5 in the Marines doing the work of an E-7 in the Air Force."

But overall, the Marines rate their experience a good one. "It's a huge learning experience," said Abshire. "We've done a number of ops, learned the different rules and regulations that apply here, and learned that more or less (air traffic controllers everywhere) all do the same job."

Unity keeps ammunition supply on

Cpl. Trent Lowry
MCB Hawaii correspondent

MARINE CORPS BASE KANEOHE BAY, Hawaii — For those who do not work at the Ammunition Supply Point (ASP) aboard MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, the inside of the fence line at the top of Daly Road might be an enigma.

Without the security fence that runs from North Beach to the rifle range, nothing would really indicate that anything happens on the side of Ulupa'u Crater.

The Marines at the ASP keep the tenant units from the infantry battalions to the aviation squadrons, supplied with all the ammunition they need to train.

The ASP has been able to provide top-notch support to the base because they have a work environment that instills pride, teamwork and camaraderie. The fruits of their work have come in the form of outstanding marks on all five of the inspections they've faced since January 1999, including the one held June 8 by the Naval Ordnance Center.

"We always pass inspections with flying colors," said GySgt. Vince Lawson, Ordnance Chief at K-Bay's ASP. "The knowledge and the cross-training our Marines get, makes everyone's job easier. You know they're going to do things the right way because they care about the end result."

The cross-training is important for the ASP, since it is unique in that, it is the only ASP in the Marine Corps that has ground, aviation and Naval ammunition, according to Lawson.

A Sailor works among the Marines at the ASP, with another on the way, which also makes the Ammunition Supply Point distinctive within the services. "Once I got to know the Marine way of doing things I was able to make a good transition overall," said Petty Officer 1st Class Keith Andrade, aviation ordnance technician with the ASP. "(The transition) was easy because these guys are organized well. The chain of command is solid."

Lawson said the real strength of the ASP is its personnel, who have experienced many changes in the past six months, from staff transfers to the addition of Navy ammunition.

"We're lucky to have the quality of people that we do here," Lawson said. "They have a lot of personal pride and a lot of unit pride. They all have a 'can-do' attitude. All the Marines want to be here, they want to learn and they want to do the job — well."

Each Marine comes to the ASP with a specific military occupational specialty for ground, aviation or Naval ammunition, but each is trained to be proficient in handling

each type of ammo

In what's becoming a common ritual, seniors are joining "plussers" connecting to loved ones via the Internet and information in many cases has vanished from their memories.

For older adults, the American Society for Aging and the American Society of Retired Persons are making a concerted effort to help seniors take advantage of the many benefits of technology to their member-ship. Large companies like Microsoft are marketing directly to seniors to provide hardware and education to an entire generation that did not have the tools to learn about computers or use them in the home, says Rai Cockfield, president, IBM Market Center. "Now they have the resources to get to a 1998 survey published by SeniorNet, which has joined more than 100,000 seniors through 140 "learning centers" nationwide, 40 percent of whom are 50 and 75 years old, and fully 53 percent are college graduates above the age of 65.

With one exception, reaching that milestone doesn't mean you're set for those entering their lives.

Getting much easier for seniors to get online, thanks to services like SeniorNet, which began in 1986 as a project at the University of California, whose goal was to help seniors learn about technology and use it. "I'm even more interested," says Cockfield, "overwhelmingly, seniors are helping to bridge the gap. Because many use computers to help their grandchildren, the

Calling All Parents: Today's Teens Are Doing Just That—And It's Usually Collect

(NAPS)—To keep in touch, many of today's on-the-go teens make collect calls.

More people are learning that not all collect calls are created equal. Fortunately, collecting some information about collect calls can help teens and their parents save on costs.

One method of making collect calls may seem like any other, but on the receiving, bill-paying end of the call, it's another story.

When the calls are made and how they are placed can add up to a big difference on your monthly phone bills.

Here are a few helpful, cost-cutting suggestions to call home about:

- Don't dial "0" for operator. If you do, it becomes an "operator-assisted" call and the price will be much higher.

• Always use a toll-free access number, like 1-800-CALL-ATT, to place a collect call. Parents should make sure their kids know an easy-to-remember access number like this.

• Also, parents should make sure their kids don't make a collect call a "Person-to-Person" call.

As with operator-assisted calls, per-minute rates are higher.

• Finally, parents should also encourage their kids to use a service that offers a single low rate for collect calls, like with 1-800-CALL-ATT, as opposed to some of the others where the price varies greatly depending on the time of day the call was placed. After all, you never know when you'll have

Small Craft Company completes joint-ser

Camp Lejeune correspondent

Officers from various South American military departments joined Small Craft Company (SCC), Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division, during the Riverine Interoperability Exercise (RIOEX-99) held at Camp Lejeune's Riverine Center of Excellence recently.

The training was intended to successfully complete a coordinated planning exercise.

The exercise called for participant country representatives to complete a fictional mission scenario with the employment of predetermined assets like personnel, ships, aircraft, vehicles and support.

RIOEX-99 also gave SCC a chance to execute their four basic missions.

The four missions of SCC are fire support during battle, command and control in support of the command, troop lifts moving infantrymen in and out of areas, and logistical re-supply of ammunition, food and other supplies into a waterway.

The exercise was unique because it joined units from the Navy, Coast Guard and Army to learn how to work together in a riverine environment, according to Maj. John Shafer, Commanding Officer, Small Craft Company.

"Each one of the different services has a different slice of a littoral or riverine mission. When you combine them, basically what you have is the ability to sustain yourself and conduct longer operations from a water point base where there are no roads," he said. "What we're trying to do is bring those elements together in order to exercise all elements in a riverine scenario."

The representatives from South America were here because of SCC's involvement and support in South America where rivers are major forms of transport for legal and illegal

RIOEX-99 Y SMALL CRAFT COMPANY SE UNEN A LIDERES SUDAMERICANOS

LCpl. Ariel Linares
Corresponsal de Camp Lejeune

El Adiestramiento Interoperario Ribereno-99 (RIOEX-99) se llevo a cabo en el Centro Ribereno por Excelencia en Camp LeJeune recientemente, con participacion de oficiales de varios Departamentos Militares de Sud America, donde se unieron a La Compania de Pequeñas Embarcaciones (SCC), 2da Division Marina, con intencion de completar un planeado adiestramiento.

El adiestramiento requiere la participacion de representantes de varios paises para llevar a cabo una mision en un escenario ficcional con el uso de personal, aeronaves, embarcaciones y vehiculos de sustento.

RIOEX-99 tambien le dio la oportunidad

a SCC de ejecutar sus cuatro misiones basicas, las cuales son: sustento de fuego, comando, control en apoyo del comando, tropas moviendo insertos y extractos de infanteria y suministro logistico de vias maritimas. Este adiestramiento es unico porque se participa con unidades de la Marina de Guerra, Guardacostas y Ejercito Militar que ensena a trabajar conjuntamente en un medio ambiente ribereno, segun dice el Comandante John Shafer de SCC.

"Cada uno de los ejercicios tienen una parte de una mision litoral o riberena. Cuando son combinadas, nos da, basicamente, la habilidad de sostenernos y conducir largas operaciones desde vias maritimas, sin la necesidad de carreteras. Estamos tratando de incorporar todos los elementos del adiestramiento en un escenario maritimo. Los representantes Sudamericanos estan aqui por la involucracion del SCC en Sud America, donde los rios son abundantes y el trafico por ellos es pesado. La capacidad riberena de la Infanteria de la Marina es antetodo, un sosten de operaciones en Sud America donde los rios predominan," dijo Shafer.

SCC patrulla los rios y vias maritimas buscando enemigos nacionales e internacionales. SCC se asocia con servicios militares en dichos paises para unir sus operaciones contra traficantes de drogas y movimientos terroristas.

Estos participantes extranjeros obserban los metodos usados por SCC para entrenar sus tropas y sincronizar operaciones con SCC, segun dijo Cpl. Humberto Acosta Capitan de barcos SCC. "Ellos vienen a ver lo que hacemos en este pais y observan las capacidades de nuestra Compania de Pequeñas Embarcaciones y sus misiones, para luego ensenar a sus Infantes de Marina como trabajar en sus rios. SCC es la unica Compania en la Infanteria de Marina, los infantes son seleccionados de acuerdo a su motivacion y actitud" segun dijo Cpl. Shawn Kósanovich, contramaestre de SCC.

Shafer agrega que su grupo de infantes sobresalen en motivacion y destreza. "Son fenomenales, no se consigue un individuo mas motivado. Creo que todo depende de que se les presenta una mision desafiante, se les da la libertad para ejecutar y supervisar y van a producir un 110 por ciento. Nunca han sido menos de eso."

La Compania esta planeando un Adiestramiento en Argentina, mas adelante este ano.

He gives power

Chaplain Howard Lee Marshall
 MCB Camp Lejeune

The more we see of human suffering, from the conflict between good and evil, the more we realize that there is something wrong with the world. Every human being that can think will admit that there is something wrong with the world. There is a great shadow stretching over the earth. One of the saddest things in my life has been to see my children grow up from innocent babyhood and begin to understand a little here and there of this shadow, as their wondering eyes looked out into the world. At first, everything seemed beautiful and wonderful, mother and father could do everything, we had everything, our love was wonderful: The world was glorious but when they reached five to six years of age, the long shadow began to touch them they heard things; they saw things. They asked: "Daddy, what does it mean to die?" "Why do people get sick?" And we had to explain that everything isn't all right with the world - it isn't all happiness and sunshine.

In trying to answer these questions, various people at various times have given different answers. Many philosophers and thinkers have tried to explain it; but none of their explanations is satisfactory. The only acceptable explanation is that which is given in Holy Scripture. It is this: God did not make the world bad; he made it good. At the end of the six days of creation, God beheld his work and said it was "Very good." Friends, we have nothing to fear except our own neglect, our own failure to accept the wonderful offer of God's love. "He gives power to the faint, and to him who has no might he increases strength."

During the early stage of the United States when the Continental Congress was deciding upon a national bird, two winged creatures were discussed. The wild turkey and the American Bald Eagle. The eagle is a very fascinating creature. It has strength and power to fly for miles at a time. It is glad the Continental Congress selected the Eagle. As a chaplain and Sailors one has to play. One's moral character and helping others to play. One's moral character and helping others to play. One's moral character and helping others to play.

As a chaplain and Sailors one has to play. One's moral character and helping others to play. One's moral character and helping others to play.

Moral leadership is simply defined as: "character and helping others to play. One's moral character and helping others to play. One's moral character and helping others to play."

They who wait on the wings of the eagle, they who wait on the wings of the eagle, they who wait on the wings of the eagle.

If my ways were upright, my heart always light, my fair land where there never grew weary with my load, would I see peace at the end of never knew sickness pain, would I reach help sustain? If I walk row and lived without soul seek sweet solace the Cross? If all I do day by day, would I know and earnestly pray? If I were to freeze me with the warmth of the year? I ask myself the answer is plain: if my lifelines and I never knew God less often and in less. For God's sough times of distress, and God or sees Him as play have met Him on the "P"

Intel Battalion fights to hold lead 8th Engineer Support Battalion rallies late

LCpl. Ariel Linares
 Camp Lejeune correspondent

Intel Battalion and 8th Engineer Support Battalion played 90 minutes only to finish in a 3-3 tie Tuesday night at L Street Field in Camp Lejeune Intramural Soccer action.

ESB rallied from a 3-1 second half deficit behind goals from LCpl. Luke Whiteman's penalty kick and LCpl. Angelo Pappano's second goal of the game to tie the game.

After their improbable comeback, ESB would have completed a stunning win in the last 20 seconds of the game had it not been for the fundamentally outstanding defense of Intel Bn's left fullback Cpl. Josh Holler who made a defensive stop deflecting a shot on goal on an open net.

With ESB's offense racing upfield, Intel's defense shifted right as their goalkeeper, SSgt. Lawrence Young, came out to defend, according to Holler.

"They (8th ESB) pushed through and every- body attacked the ball and our goalie went out," he explained. "I was just playing my position covering from the left side and protecting the net. I was doing my job and I guess I got lucky."

The "lucky" game-saving goal preserved a tie and gave Intel Bn. a three-game unbeaten streak on the season with record of 2-0-1.

1stLt. Derek Diorio, and Cpls. Mark Raynor and Nathan Seat supplied the offense for Intel Bn. scoring one goal each.

Intramural Soccer play continues next week with games being played around Camp Lejeune and New River Air Station.

This past February, 17 kids from Camp Lejeune got formed a soccer team to participate in the local spring soccer league. Currently, Camp Lejeune Youth Sports sponsors only a Fall soccer season. The local soccer associations both spring and Fall leagues not to mention a first-f-camps and tournaments for young soccer lovers in which pate during the summer months.

According to Lynn Yagel, the team formed when he Jonathan, who is 12 and Peter who is now 11, couldn't same team they played on last year because of age restr Yagel brothers preferred playing on the same team and both play in two separate teams off-base when the Yage base would have probably caused one too many schedu So the Yagels, including Cdr. Scott Yagel, who coached h last year, decided to come up with their own team. Th sisted of kids from Camp Lejeune but they entered the recreation league as The Piney Green Lightning. The Lig consisted of four sets of siblings so there were very fe tions at first practice. Once again Cdr. Scott Yagel took l coaching and MCCS kindly provided a soccer field for t to practice on aboard Camp Lejeune.

"We didn't do very well the first three games but we se to each others style of play and by the beginning of tou we knew exactly what to expect from each other," said Jon

The Lightning finished the regular season with a 5-3 all their loses being close calls. They did a little bette season tournament play finishing 4-0. Yes - they won. A hustle to produce a soccer team produced the U-12 Cha unique thing about the Lightning, other than the fact they pions, is the fact that all the team members came from Ca and the majority of the kids were friends. What was more was the fact that they were all friends before they were When you play recreational soccer, you don't pick your te to the beginning of the season. Because of the random se cess, friends are normally separated.

Because they were friends first, and teammates sec formed an unusually tight and cohesive team.

From the only girl on the team Cathrine Cullison, who last two years on all-girl teams, decided to, "play with th because they practiced on base and I wanted to try play team because I already knew some players and it was with practices being here on base" said Catherine Cullise

Peter Yagel said, "Soccer is my favorite all the way, I've n any other organized sport. I like it a lot."

Some of the kids are currently playing on challenge to town and they all look forward to a Fall season aboard b

A solo home run by Maj. Swietzer in the bottom of the seventh inning propelled the 2nd Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment intramural softball team past Headquarters and Service Company (H&S), 2nd Force Service Support Group (FSSG) 11-10 Monday at ** field.

The game was the first for both teams in the intramural playoff tournament.

During the first inning, both teams came out swinging. The visiting H&S team put three runs on the board in their half of the first, only to have their brief lead spoiled by Swietzer's three run home run in the bottom half of the inning.

With the score tied 3-3, both teams began to struggle offensively. 2/8 broke through first, scoring twice in the bottom of the third inning, to take a 5-3 lead. H&S answered with one run in the top of the fourth, and one in the top of the sixth.

2/8 broke out of their two-inning scoreless streak in a big way in the bottom of the sixth. They capitalized on errant pitching with several extra-base hits. When the dust had settled, five runs had crossed the plate, giving 2/8 a 10-5 lead.

The lead would not last long. H&S turned on the heat in the top of the seventh, scoring at their own furious pace. Needing five runs to stay alive, H&S was up to the challenge. They tied the game at 10-10, paving the way for a dramatic finish.

With two outs in the bottom of the last inning, and the game tied, Swietzer blasted a pitch well over the left-center field fence, to end the game, 11-10.

2/8 has been overcoming skepticism all season. Early on, the team was not given much of a chance to do well, according to Malu. However, 2/8 finished the regular season at 14-3, tied for first in their division.

With the score tied up at 3-3 both teams found it tough to strike the ball.

Renewed Hope For Patients With Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

American Medical Association Cites Ritalin As Effective Treatment

Parents concerned about Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder are reading a report published in The American Medical Association (JAMA) with interest. The report dispelled many of the concerns concerning the over-diagnosis of Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). The effectiveness of Ritalin, a prescribed drug used in its treatment, was highlighted.

Dr. B. Silver, a psychiatrist who specializes in the treatment of children and adolescents with ADHD, said the report reaffirms the often-mentioned results of a multitude of scientific studies that have been published at this issue for the past several years.

Dr. Silver said the JAMA report, its findings regarding the effectiveness of its publication, is an ideal time for those with ADHD, as well as those in its debate. Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) are real, neurologically-based conditions found in about 3-5 percent of school-age children, as well as adolescents and adults. The disorder causes its sufferers to be inattentive, impulsive and unable to focus on a single task. Attention Deficit Disorder and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder are among the most common clinical disorders, having been studied for more than 40 years. Despite this impressive record of clinical examination, there are vocal opponents who doubt the clinical validity of the disorder, and claim that drugs used in its treatment are harmful. They dismiss sound medicine and science, and focus on erroneous reports of school-age children being wrongly medicated, reports of which have received widespread attention.

"Most of the contradictory information out there is anecdotal," said Dr. Silver. "Of the millions of school-age children who have been properly diagnosed and treated with medication, there appear to be few instances of misdiagnosis. These individual stories cannot compare to the research published in JAMA which is based on more than 20 years of medical information."

With the publication of the JAMA report, the ADHD debate can re-focus, appropriately, on solutions for patients and families who are most directly affected. When properly diagnosed, ADHD can be managed successfully in children and adults. Once a diagnosis of ADHD has been made, a total treatment program that includes behavior modification, counseling, educational accommodations and, sometimes, drug therapy may be prescribed.

"Ritalin has been studied in more than 170 clinical trials, involving more than 6,000 school-age children," said Rama Seshamani, M.D., director of Medical Affairs for Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation, manufacturer of Ritalin. "We strongly believe that a concerted, nationwide public awareness campaign, focused on proper diagnosis, is the key to helping people better understand the disorder and treatment with Ritalin."

Free brochures on ADHD titled "ADHD and Learning Disabilities: Booklet for Parents" (in English or Spanish) and "Adults with ADHD: A Guide to Understanding ADHD" (in English only) are available. To request a brochure or to obtain full prescribing information call 1-800-742-2422 or write to Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation, Professional and Consumer Affairs Division, Bldg. 502, 59 Route 10, E. ### NEWS

OF WOMEN

Making Progress Against Lupus

(NAPS)—More and more women are getting the facts about lupus in time to protect their lives and health.

Lupus is a chronic disease in which the immune system becomes hyperactive and attacks normal tissue. Approximately 90 percent of the people diagnosed with the disease are women. However, with close follow-up and treatment, more than 80 percent of those with lupus can expect to live normal life spans.

Additionally, in most instances, lupus does not prevent women from starting a family. According to the Lupus Foundation of America, unless there is moderate to severe organ involvement, there is no absolute reason why a woman with lupus should not get pregnant.

During pregnancy, a woman with lupus should be closely monitored by an obstetrician who is thoroughly familiar with high-risk pregnancy as well as by her regular doctor. Statistically, 50 percent of all lupus pregnancies are completely normal, with 25 percent resulting in premature births.

Although lupus is known to occur within families, statistics show that only about five percent of the children born to individuals with lupus will develop the illness.

One of the side effects many women realize over the course of lupus treatment is weight gain.

Women with lupus may lead normal, happy lives with proper self-care and doctor supervision.

Corticosteroid therapy often causes an increase in appetite, while steroids can increase fluid retention.

To combat weight gain, dietitians recommend reducing both sodium and caffeine in the diet. Sodium and salt contribute to fluid retention; caffeine stimulates the appetite. Light exercise, such as a walk after eating, is also encouraged.

With one form of the disease, known as cutaneous lupus, skin rashes and hair loss are common symptoms. Effective treatment of the disease itself with corticosteroids or antimalarial drugs can help hair to regrow.

For more information, call the Lupus Foundation of America at 1-888-38-LUPUS.

Maker Peak: NBA Survey Shows Female Players Have Higher Feet

Whether playing professional basketball, the running, jumping, cutting on hard surfaces cause wear and tear on the feet. A recent informal survey of NBA and WNBA players about their players' feet ailments. The survey showed that WNBA players are relatively healthy, with only 17% suffering from foot ailments. Of the 17 surveyed, 28% of those are reported to have foot ailments.

BA/WNBA survey indicates that women, in general, take better care of their feet. Dr. John McNeer, podiatrist at the New York and consultant podiatrist for the New York Giants and New York Devils. "Typically, there is more emphasis on foot care of their feet and they are more likely to seek treatment if they see a sign of foot trouble, such as fungus infection, athlete's foot, or toenail fungus infection. More than 10 million Americans have toenail fungus. Primarily, this infection affects toenails or fingernails. It is a microscopic organism that thrives in dark, moist Athlete's foot infection affects toenails and fingernails. It may include a change in color from white to yellow or brown as a possible change in color. Nails tend to be brittle or flaky.

to your feet. Health experts recommend you change your socks and footwear daily to prevent fungus infections.

Here are a few tips for avoiding athlete's foot:

- Wear slippers in locker rooms and showers.
- Change socks and footwear frequently.
- Make sure shoes fit properly; don't wear shoes that are too tight or too loose.
- Use powder to keep the inside of shoes dry and prevent moisture from building up between toes after a workout or swim.

If you think you may have athlete's foot, see your doctor for treatment. Or, if you're interested in more information, you can call 800-940-1388 for a free audio video and brochure with facts from medical experts about nail fungus and athlete's foot.

BA/WNBA survey was conducted by Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation, the makers of Lamisil (terbinafine HCl) tablets, and conducted by Sports Marketing, Inc. Your feet will feel better and you'll be able to play on and on the street.
