Back to school

Staff Sgt. Cal Openshaw

Depending on who you ask, Sept. 2, 1987 could be a curse or a blessing.

This, dear student, is the day when, once again, you will find the hallowed halls of academe. It is this day on which you have awaited in breathless anticipation, the very mind boggling of the horizons still to be reached in your endless quest for knowledge. School: The stately institution wherein the fertile minds of tomorrow's future will not only absorb the wisdom of the ages but also carve into stone who and what's real and who and what's not. New languages hitherto unguessed will spring out of the mouth of babes and local shopping outlets will rearrange entire inventories according to the impromptu fashion shows so necessary to the lives of many students.

This, dear teacher, is the day to which you have dedicated your life and sanity. School: The stately institution wherein those fertile minds will be as putty in your skilled hands to mold, develop and guide to the stars. Into your care has been placed the monumental task of ensuring those same hallowed halls maintain their structural integrity against what would sometimes be termed an all-out ground assault by time-grown terrorists.

This, dear parent, is the day when, with a mixture of hope and trepidation, you help your charges face the unknown and leave the academic wilderness. All summer-long you have spent each day with them, and they with you, preparing for this moment. With final words of encouragement, you send them off on their own knowing all too well how much you'll miss them during the day. Still, you can be comforted with the thought that they will be in capable hands and that you now have the peace and quiet you so richly deserve.

Back to school safety

By Gunnery Sgt. Dennis Roby

Beginning next Wednesday the usual morning traffic congestion will increase as the Department of Defense Dependent Schools and the Base Motor Transport school buses open their doors to Camp Lejeune school children.

Drivers, parents and children should think safety as those buses make their way through the housing areas. On the average throughout the United States one child a week is run over by or while waiting for a school bus.

This statistic need not be brought home to Camp Lejeune if all of us keep in mind the common-sense regulations that apply to school bus safety.

Plan on arriving at the bus stop five minutes early. The bus drivers have a schedule to keep and will not wait for tardy bus riders.

While waiting for the bus, remain clear of the street and do not play ball or tag.

When the bus arrives, line up facing it, not alongside it. The first person should not be closer than two-arm lengths from the bus.

Board the bus in an orderly manner, allowing the smaller and younger children to board first.

Always obey the bus driver and remain orderly while enroute to school.

Remain seated while aboard the bus and keep hands, feet and head inside the bus, not sticking out the bus windows.

Help to keep the bus clean and litter free by not eating, drinking or smoking aboard the bus. Do not litter the bus. If papers are dropped on the floor, pick them up.

When crossing the street after getting off the bus, always cross in front of the bus in view of the driver making sure that the driver knows you are crossing.

When you exit the bus, go directly to the sidewalk. Do not linger around the bus.

If children are walking or riding bikes to the school, they are reminded to obey crossing guards.

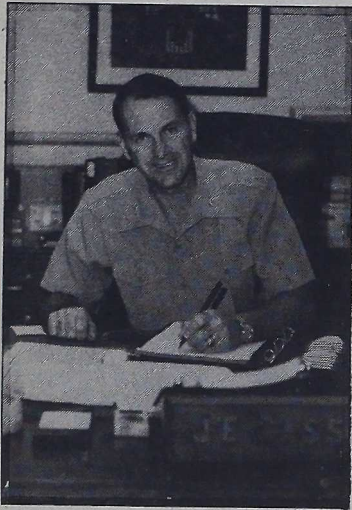

Also for walking students, always travel with a friend and never talk to or accept a ride from a stranger.

If approached by a stranger, walk or run away. Then let your teacher, a policeman or some adult know about the incident.

If you think you're in any danger, yell, and run to the nearest store, or back to school.

Most of these rules are common sense but parents should review them with their children to make this a safe school year.

CG'S CORNER

There are several thousand dependent families living on base and in the surrounding community who read the Globe every week. Why doesn't the Globe publish more articles that pertain to these dependents? For example, there was no coverage of the Lejeune High School graduation and there is limited coverage of activities in the area for families to do or see (i.e. historical sites and camping or canoeing opportunities).

The decision not to publish the list of Lejeune High School graduating seniors was primarily determined by the extensive coverage given every year by the Jacksonville Daily News. The Globe's coverage during this time frame was committed to two major exercises and MAU deployments. With these commitments, the Globe did not have the space nor the personnel to cover the graduation. The same is true of the numerous service school graduations aboard base each month. That does not mean we are insensitive to our dependents or other graduates. With the cooperation of Special Services and Family Services, the Globe publishes recreational activities and services available to dependents. Every issue of the Globe contains Special Services note, youth sports results, and future events available to all Marine Sailors, retirees and dependents. For example, each issue of the Globe for the month of June and July had at least one story affect dependents, including a feature story on a Lejeune High School coach who received the Fran Award. I assure you that the Globe will continue to provide the most wide-ranging coverage possible of all events at Camp Lejeune.

Editor's note: If you have a problem or a question you'd like answered in the CG's Corner, submit your questions in writing to the Joint Public Affairs Office, P. O. Box 8438, Camp Lejeune, N.C. 28542. Be sure to include your name and an address or a phone number where you can be reached during normal working hours. Unsigned letters will not be considered for publication.

Sickle Cell month

September has been officially named as Sickle Cell Anemia month. The sickle cell syndrome is caused by a genetic imperfection that affects the red blood cells.

Master Sgt. Jerald M. Bridges, and 11-year Sickle Cell Foundation volunteer, says Jacksonville is the headquarters for the eight-county Eastern Sickle Cell Association in North Carolina.

"About $13,000 in donations is raised annually in the region, but a cure has yet to be found for the painful disease that causes anemia, ulcers and even strokes," Bridges said.

"Sickle Cell Syndrome has been out of focus for a while and needs to be brought to the attention of the public because it's a real problem according to Bridges, a Sickle Cell Syndrome Association board member here.

Persons affected with Sickle Cell Syndrome in the United States are predominantly black, but persons of Hispanic and Caribbean descent are affected too, Bridges said.

A screening process is done from time to time in the military and dependants have the opportunity for free testing at the Naval Hospital.

A good source for additional information is the Sickle Cell Syndrome Program in Jacksonville at (919) 353-5272.

Sgt. Debbie Scott

Lance Cpl. James Obie, 8th MT Bn., 2nd FSSG probably didn't figure on having such a jolting experience, but that's what he got when he strapped himself into the CONVINCER during 8th Motor's safety fair. The CONVINCER is an accident simulator used for the PMO presentation of the fair. In addition to the simulator, topics discussed included DUI, base regulations, a briefing on heat casualties, EOD, and personal hygiene. This fair is the first for the FSSG unit.

NCOA awards

WASHINGTON, DC. The Noncommissioned Officers Association of the United States (NCOA) has announced the recipients of this year's Vanguard Award for valor — one from each of the five branches of the armed services.

The NCOs receiving the award were Sgt. John L. Hastings, USA, 82nd Med. Detach., Fort Riley, Kan.; AD1 Timothy C. Chayka, USN, Helicopter Combat Support Squadron 11 Sea Component, currently deployed aboard USS Camden; Gunnery Sgt. Lawrence V. Francese, USMC, HQMC, Washington, DC HS3 Ralph M. Smoot, USCG, cutter Active, Port Angeles, Wash.; and Sgt. Donald R. Balzarini, USAF, McChord Air Force Base, Wash.

Monitors aboard

Military Occupational Specialty monitors for enlisted personnel will be visiting Camp Lejeune to provide counselling for local leathernecks interested in discussing their future in the Corps.

MOS monitors will be here from Aug. 21 - Sept. 3 between 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

For more information, Marines may contact their respective unit's career planner for details about their monitor's schedule.

Base Sergeant Major relieved, retires

A relief, posting and retirement ceremony took place at W.P.T. Hill field Aug. 21 for the MCB Sgt. Maj. Sergeant Maj. Grant C. Beck, formerly of the 8th Marine Regiment, relieved Sgt. Maj. John A. Sullivan.

"I am the enlisted's eyes, ears and voice within the chain of command," said Beck.

Beck has 28 years in the Corps and plans to spend his next two years concentrating on two specific areas. One is the quality of life of all enlisted Marines, their families and the other is the continuing education of our NCOs and Staff NCOs.

"Accomplishing the mission and taking care of our Marines are equally important. These two goals go hand-in-hand. You can't have one without the other," Beck said.

The quality of life goes without saying.

"If Marines and their families aren't living in adequate quarters, with reasonable and clean place to shop along with substantial recreational activities to use during their off-duty hours, then they'll be less apt to want to give their 100% to mission accomplishment," he said.

"NCOs and Staff NCOs must be given the most professional and continuous education we can provide so as to cover the gaps in their education while they're on tours of independent duty away from their primary MOS," he added.

"As Marines we are noted for doing three things, preparing to fight wars, fighting wars and conducting parades and ceremonies. Don't take the last one lightly. Everything we do, including drill and ceremonies has the purpose of accomplishing the first two missions. All Marines should drill as much as possible. Drill instills self-discipline, confidence and makes a better Marine. No matter what your rank is, practice leadership within yourself and you'll have to succeed," Beck said.

Sullivan leaves the Corps with 32 years of leadership under his belt. He says he knows the younger Marines will take over and uphold the fine traditions for which the Corps is so famous.

"Retirement becomes something that is expected. It goes along with life in the Corps," said Sullivan.

"I truly believe that when the time comes, our Marines are going to do the job that has to be done. We went through some tough times but now we're headed in the right direction," he added.

"Our mission is plain and simple — be prepared to fight. In that aspect we're advancing. We're getting some good realistic training; the K ranges are one example," Sullivan said.

"But we need to get back to the basics. We can't wait for people to go to school. The units need to be teaching young Marines now. Leadership starts on the grinder. By that I mean, get your Marines in morning formation. Drill the squads or run as a unit. Individual PT is just that-individual. Teaching an NCO to give orders in turn gives that Marine confidence. I even think we need more discipline in boot-camp," Sullivan said. "Don't get me wrong, our schools do a fine job and always have. But we have to continue from there. Teach our Marines what they need to know now. A field commander doesn't have the time to teach his Marines what they should already know. Don't wait for the school quota to come up," he added.

These are just a few of the thoughts Sullivan leaves us with as he goes on to other things. These days Sullivan has two things on his mind. One of them is kids—he has two he's putting through college. The other is fishing. He's going after the big one.

Battling battalions tackle MCCRES

Story and photos by
Sgt. Rodney Germain

Aggressive resistance from the Marines of 2/4 matched the tactics of 3/2's leathernecks during a three-day Marine Corps Combat Readiness Evaluation at TLZ Hawk.

TLZ Hawk was the first of a series of battlefields that had the two battalions literally shooting it out, company against company and platoon against platoon.

After setting into their fighting positions the night before, 3/2's leathernecks started the 'war' after heloing into the TLZ to attack the aggressors from the rear. Surprising the out-numbered aggressors with an unexpected envelopment, 3/2 had the upper hand but still had to battle it out to the end to take their first objective.

According to 2nd Marines commanding

Private First Class Michael Arnold, TOW Plt. HqCo., 2nd Mar., aims on an approaching enemy TOW vehicle. The opposition sent a recon patrol in the area to search out the aggressor's position. The recon team was knocked out well before they reached Arnold's position.

officer, Col. Michael Byron, the kind of aggressive initiative shown by 3/2 is important in winning wars. Each small unit leader needs to make decisions that will turn the battle around in his favor. That's what we're evaluating, he said.

"We expected a helo or a mechanized attack on our position," said 2nd Lt. James McDonald, 1st Lt. commander, Echo Co., 2/4. "When they landed, we moved toward them (3/2). After hitting and moving, we pulled back to a defensive position and held them off."

The evaluation scenario automatically has the aggressors as the losers because they're the smaller force. But that doesn't stop them from putting up a good fight.

According to Cpl. Mark Schaas, a TOW platoon leader with 2/4, it gives them more initiative to fight harder. As the aggressors' TOW squads set-up at one end of the TLZ, the remainder of Golf Co. and Echo Co. 2/4 covered the other end during the first skirmish.

"We knocked out a couple of TOWs and an armor-bearing HMMWV," said Schaas. We were just a 'Cat' team, trying to find our firing positions - just on. But we took them out before they got here."

While the TOWs successfully fought off the threat to the front, the companies were well into a battle of their own but with less desirable results.

"The opposition attacked several times," said McDonald, "and we managed to hold them off. But after calling in the power, 3/2 set up a flanking movement and eventually overran us."

The first day ended as expected with 2/4 being overtaken by 3/2, but both sides put up a good battle, according to the umpires.

"I think there's more realism and aggressor," said Lance Cpl. Byron. We start out with a disadvantage and the basic roles are set for us, but we still do whatever it takes to keep the casualties down and win the battle. That's exactly how we'd do it in war."

Lance Cpl. David Rios, Wpns. Plt. Golf Co. 2/4, scans his line of fire for approaching enemy troops. The aggressor platoon set up at a major intersection near the landing zone to stop the opposition's attack.

Aimee Bishop, 15 answers the phone on the medicine/pediatrics ward at the Naval Hospital. This is Aimee's second year as a volunteer with the program.

Teens donate time to help others

Story and photos by Sgt. Debbie Scott

WANTED: Fourteen to 18-year-old teenagers to volunteer their time to the Red Cross. No experience necessary, but motivation, determination and willingness to give of yourself is a must.

Thirty-two dependent youths from the area answered a similar add earlier this year when they agreed to become Red Cross volunteers at the Naval Hospital.

The eight-week program is held yearly for teenage military dependents who have the time to devote to the community and the hospital. The program here is managed by both Mary Ellison and Anne Forshea, chairwomen for youth volunteers, who also volunteer their time to the cause.

"This year, the 32 volunteers range from 14 to 16-years-old and surprisingly enough, 10 percent of them are males. That might not seem like a lot, but that 10 percent does help to draw in other male volunteers," said Ellison.

The volunteers are used in 10 different areas of the hospital which include nine wards and one clinic.

"There are very few areas they can't work in, and those few are only restricted because of the nature of the care they provide, Ellison said. "They help out in recreation services, medical/pediatrics, surgery/orthopedics, same day surgery/post-partum, records, CHAMPUS office, physical therapy, the laboratory and finally the day care nursery."

Aimee Bishop, 15, has volunteered for the past two years and says that her experience as a volunteer will enhance her career choice.

"I'm really athletic in school. I run cross-country and track and plan on being an athletic trainer. To do this I need to know how to work with people and learn all the parts of the body, especially the bones. So by working here, I can learn a lot that will help me later," she said.

Lee Newman's reasons were a little different. He decided that instead of trying to use the knowledge he gains from volunteering for a later profession, he would share his already acquired experience with others now.

"This is my first year as a volunteer," said the 14-year-old. "I'm pretty good with kids. I don't babysit for money or anything, but I sometimes watch other kids for my mom or some of her friends. I like kids a lot, so I put down that I wanted to work in the day care center on the application.

"One of the reasons I signed up to volunteer is because I usually get stuck around the house doing nothing during the summer and it gets boring. At the beginning of the summer, my mom found the ad in the Daily News and showed it to me, so I decided to try it and I like it," said Lee.

The remaining volunteers' duties vary a little. Their day can involve something as simple as filing and pulling charts or taking specimens to the lab. But one of the important jobs they do is to provide the attention that patients' need that isn't always possible to give them due to limited staffing at the hospital, according to Ellison.

"When you are in the hospital for a while, it gets pretty boring and sometimes you just need someone to talk to, play cards with or even read to you. These volunteers can provide that attention to patients, and sometimes that makes all the difference in the world."

Gunnery Sgt. Jim Gladkowski

About 600 Marines from the 22nd MAU and their families took part in a unique opportunity (August 15): a visit to the assault ship USS Nassau (LHA-4) while it was moored near the port at Morehead City, N.C.

The family day, which included an air show, guided tours and lunch, culminated nearly two months of planning by both the 22nd MAU commander, Col. W. E. Bartels, Jr., and the captain of the USS Nassau, Capt. R. P. Lucas.

The 820-foot Nassau will be home for six months to most of the 22nd MAU when they deploy to the Mediterranean Sea later this year. With this in mind, the commanders thought that by inviting the families aboard, they would get a better understanding of where their loved ones will be living and working while at sea.

Arriving by two Navy landing craft launched from Radio Island, the families and friends of the Marines were first welcomed aboard the "finest amphibious assault ship in the Navy" by Lucas. Gathering on the hanger deck of the huge ship, the families were told of the ship's capabilities and mission. All around them were displays of Marine combat equipment, ground support equipment, helicopters and the AV-8B Harrier II.

At 10:30 a.m. the air show began on the flight deck. Children and adults alike "oohed" and "aahed" as Marines from the 22nd MAU's 2nd Bn., 6th Marines fast-rope from a CH-46E helicopter. Minutes later, Marine AH-1J Cobra helicopter pilots flew their gunships alongside the ship. Then, heads turned upward as two AV-8Bs screamed across the vessel's bow at high speed.

The helicopters, attached to HMM-264 homebased at MCAS New River, and the Harriers, from VMA-231 out of MCAS Cherry Point, make up the air combat element for the 22nd MAU.

Following the air show, the special guests were treated to a lunch that included a cook-to-order steak, fried shrimp and all the trimmings.

By 1 p.m. individual tours were underway. The most often asked questions were "Where will daddy sleep?" and "Where will you be working, honey?" Because of questions such as these, the Marines took their families on personal tours. However, the ship's crew did take many on guided tours into the depths of the ship.

"I like the Harrier the best," said Donna Morton, wife of Cpl. Dan R. Morton, Echo Co., 2/6, 2nd MarDiv. "But the other thing that amazed me was the medical section aboard the ship. With a 300-bed overflow, it is bigger than most hospitals."

"I thought the lunch was excellent, but more importantly I really appreciate how the Navy seems to care about my husband," said Patti Parker, wife of Cpl. Parker also of 2/6. "How he will live is what impressed me most. He'll have a good-sized living space, much bigger than I imagined for a Naval ship."

The families reunited for the LCU ride back to Radio Island. They didn't leave empty-handed. Some carried pieces of the ship while others wore hats commemorating the occasion. Still others had cigarette lighters inscribed with USS Nassau on the side.

Comments from family members about the family day ranged from "great" to "excellent" to "fantastic." But perhaps an 8-year-old boy put it best.

"At first I was scared for my dad, but now I'm not. I'll miss him but I'm not afraid anymore."

... thousand feet in the air, making way to ground level at a rate of 128 miles per hour. According to Sgt. Bill Eustis, embarkation NCO for 2nd ANGLICO, 2nd ... "adrenaline is the best high you ever have. It's addictive and it's ..."

... hat Eustis is referring to is the sport skydiving - a sport he teaches at a skydiving school. Instruction is based on United States Parachutists Association sanctions.

... We don't start our students off 9,000 in the air," the experienced jumper said. "We take them up about 10 feet, so they can at least see the ground."

... Although the elevation may seem extreme, actually quite tame and safe.

... Safety is the key word," emphasized Eustis. "It's paramount. We take every... thing into consideration. Most people are terrified of heights. I'm one of them. So when we send that first-time jumper up he's got a static line that automatically opens that canopy in case he doesn't open his eyes."

... Presently there is one instructor for every two students. This is simply another safety standard they've initiated at the school, explained Eustis.

... "Theoretically one instructor can teach a 30-man class. But you've got to have assistant instructors to cover emergency procedures. Also, we check and double-check to ensure the student is doing everything as he was instructed."

... Radios are also part of the safety procedures followed at the center. The student is talked through direction changes and "flares" which brake your forward speed.

... "This way they don't end up on the other side of the drop zone," Eustis said.

... But why do it? Seaman Thomas Hess, a corpsman at the Naval Hospital couldn't pinpoint his motives.

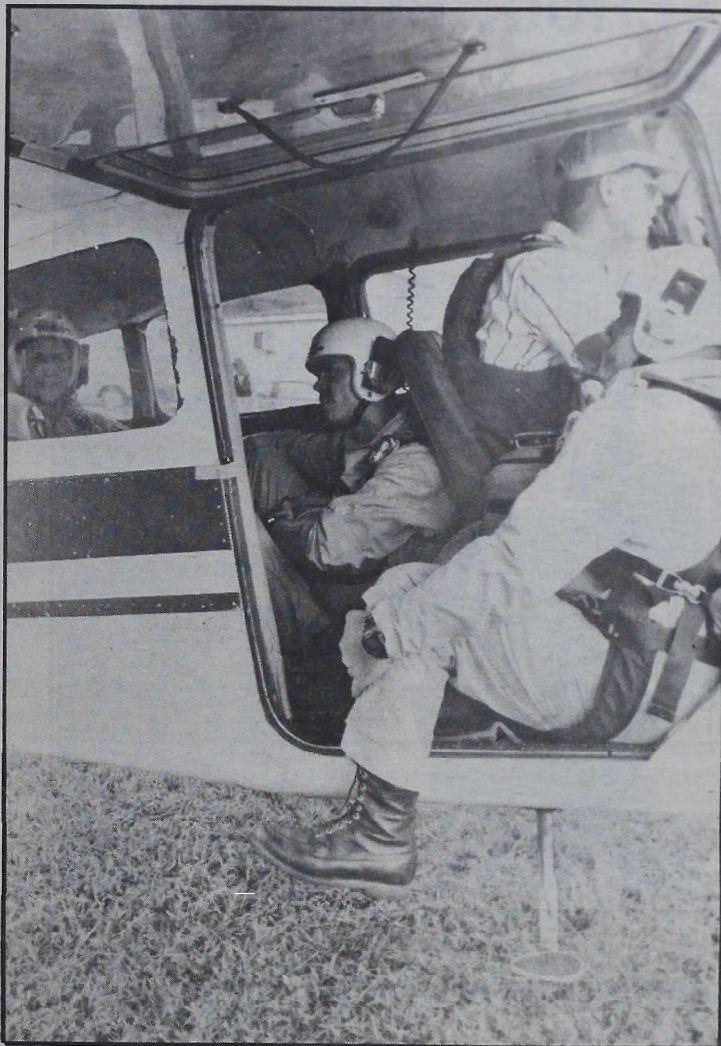

... "It's one of those things you kinda' wonder about," Hess said as he prepared for his third jump. "It's not a natural thing to jump out of plane, but you do it anyway for the fun of it."

... "It is fun," added Eustis. "And it's motivating. When I offered my services as an instructor or jumpmaster, the owners offered to pay me, but I said 'no way.' This isn't something I do for self gain. I do it for the Marines and sailors in this area. It's something to do besides hanging out on the corners of Jacksonville. Keeping the alcohol related incidents to a minimum is what I'm about."

... Surprisingly, most of those at the center are retired and active duty military.

... Vera Denison, a first time jumper, commented that it was something she never thought she would do but is ready to go do again.

... "It's strange the high you get coming down. I think the nervousness is part of

First time "chutists" anxiously await takeoff from the Skydiving Center. Safety is paramount for the novice skydivers.

... the fun," she said. "But I like it and I know it gets better as the elevation of the jumps increases."

... Now it's simply a matter of working toward getting a parachutists license. That requires a minimum of 25 jumps. The first jump is the most crucial. Once ... you get that done, you're on your way.

... "I like to think of it as something to work towards," said Eustis. "A lot of people thinks it's expensive, but it's no more expensive than a payday weekend spent drinking and carousing. Consider it a challenge."

... the skydiver touches down he must release his chute to prevent being dragged by gusts of wind.

Marines from 1/6 take five before the 28-mile march begins.

1/6 preps for mountain warfare training ry and photos by

l. Bruce Cobbeldick

The leathernecks of 1/6 began a seven-week preparation for mountain warfare training in the contoured and varied terrain of sunny California. The preparation came to a head here on Aug. 11, when a planned 28-mile hike was given to the 1/6 Marines from Bravo, Charlie, Weapons and Headquarters and Service Companies with nearly 12 hours of "sole-searching" in the form of a continuous hike.

The Marines got to such a stage by participating in preparatory marches that well conditioned them, according to Col. John W. Smythe, commanding officer for 1/6.

Shortly before the 28-mile hike began, Lt. Col. Adam A. Call, a Bravo Co. leader, commented that the hike would definitely put the 1/6 devil dogs to the test out there.

But this test didn't require pencils or paper - just steadfast determination and weeks of preparation to come out a winner.

Smythe said the hike in California would be 25 miles, but the elevation and terrain would be more difficult for the troops to manage than the tarheel terrain here.

"That's why we're doing this 28-miler," Smythe said. "In preparation for California's hills and higher altitude, there's really no such thing as enough training. This one might be a little longer, but California is our real challenge."

The dirt roads of Verona Loop are where the 28-miler began.

With guidons held up high, 1/6 was off and hiking. At a 3-4 mile per hour pace with one 10-minute break per hour on the average, 1/6 made good time.

During breaks, HMI Paul Twombly and his other corpsmen could be seen rushing back and forth to meet the urgent needs of first aid. In addition, corpsmen often leaped out while the HMMWVs were between companies during the hike to come to the aid of troops during emergencies.

Although reaching the Courthouse Bay area provided the Marines with a light at the end of their tunnel, morale really began to erupt when the battalion reached the 8th Engineers' area.

Coming to the Main Service Road area, the files were straight. Although some 1/6 hardchargers had trouble hiding their limps, even after 12 long hours the feeling of pride and unity was there.

At this point, it was only a matter of coming in on a good note, and the orchestra of cheers began to ring out.

"I'm awfully proud of these men. Making this 28-mile force march is one thing, but completing it after seven weeks of intense preparation, training and living out in the field for a week prior to the hike is really something else," Smythe said.

The Marines from 1/6 roared into base with their own brand of esprit de corps.

Bravo, Charlie, Weapons and Headquarters and Service Companies were rewarded with a "72" for their performance.

The next obstacles for 1/6 to negotiate will be the mountains and thin air of Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center in Bridgeport, Calif.

The H&S Co., guide leads his company along 1/6's 28-mile force march. The march was in preparation for training at the Mountain Warfare Training Center at Bridgeport, Calif.

Runnin' with the Harriers

Story and photos by
Sgt. Rodney Germain

A seven-mile run might not sound like a barrel of fun to non-runners, but add the thrill of the chase and shenanigans of the Hash House Run Club's after run events, and you can have a pretty good time... even despite the seven or so miles.

That's what happened Saturday morning as the second running of the Jacksonville Magnificent Hashers, Hash House Harriers ran in, around and all throughout town.

According to Hashmaster John Raschilla, it's all about having a good time, even if you're not a world-class runner.

"You really don't have to be a runner at all" said Raschilla, also known around Hash circles as 'Pitts'. "As a matter of fact, you can walk parts of the trail," he said explaining the rules.

At the very beginning, all first time Hashers are called to the front. Then the rules of the run are explained.

"The first rule is," said Raschilla, "there are no rules. Almost anything goes." Although the general guidelines are to follow the strange little arrows and markings the three 'hares' (runners who mark the trail) leave behind for the 'pack' (the main body of runners). Then the chase begins.

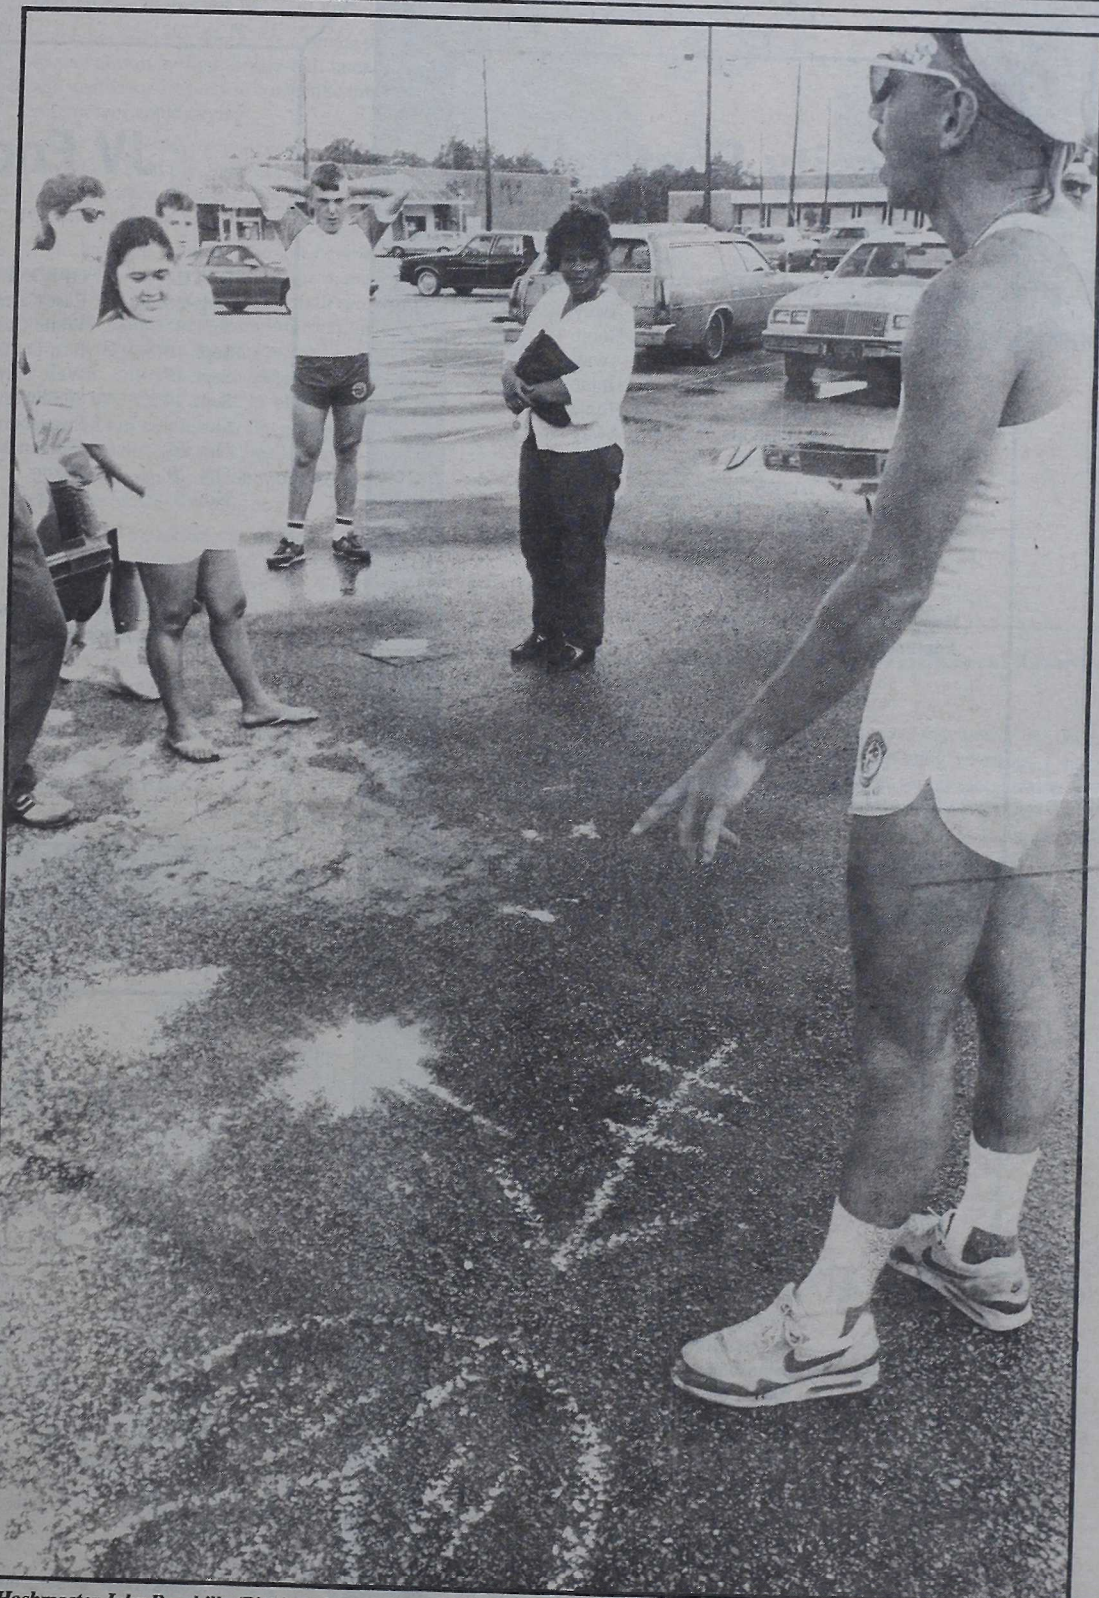

"The pack starts off walking, exactly twelve minutes after the hares leave, then three minutes later they start running," said Raschilla.

That gives the hares a chance to totally confuse the pack with their markings according to Gregory Brown, a.k.a. Mange A Puk Yok. Though the pack doesn't have to follow the trail if they think they can find a better way to go.

"Make a B.T. (Bad Trail) here," he said, telling a fellow hare to mark a three-way intersection with a false trail. For marking they use a corn meal and flour concoction, sometimes mixed with shredded paper for consistency in case of rain, which just happened to be the case for this run.

"When the pack sees a patch of flour, it lets them know they're on true trail," said Raschilla. "But, sometimes they'll see something similar to the true trail mark (an arrow with a three-line tail) like an arrow with only one tail or a U-shaped arrow. They should figure out they're not on trail, but sometimes it'll take them awhile," he said laughing.

A simple mistake like that can add up on the runner's distance, especially if they make a few mistakes. But the faster runners are usually the ones who have to pay for the mistakes, according to Hashmaster John Raschilla (Pitts) explains the rules and the hash signs the runners will encounter during their Jacksonville Hash Run.

Armagastus Augustin, a.k.a. Ray Gay Commando.

"We lay trails that give the slower runners the advantage," he said. "Usually we mark a trail that'll go up one area and back near the same area, so the runners in the rear of the pack have the option of taking the obvious short-cut when they see the pack leaders coming back their way. That's what makes it a chase and not a race."

According to Pitts, if any of the hares are caught by the pack, the chase starts again, but the hares only get a five minute headstart. "It keeps the adrenalin flowing," he said. "It gets me anxious and looking around, because you never know how close they are behind.

One thing indicative of the Hash is, the trail isn't confined to any certain type of terrain or area, and according to Mange A Puk Yok, it adds excitement to the chase for both sides.

"They really don't know where the trails are going to lead to," he said, evidence by the fifteen or so B.T.s he personally laid to lead them astray. And the

How To Get A Stretch For The Price Of A Subcompact.

At National, we know how far your travel per diem has to go.

So we figured you would be interested in a way to get a little more car for your money.

For as little as $30, you can rent an Economy (or 'compact') car from National.

Which is exactly the same price as a 'subcompact' from the likes of Hertz or Avis.

Or, for just six dollars more, we can give you what they'd call a 'Premium' car for the same price as one of their 'Full-size' cars.

So, why feel all cramped up in one of theirs, when you could have the extra room to stretch out in one of ours?

For information and reservations, call 800-CAR-RENT.

We feature GM cars like this Buick Skylark.

At Slender You® Figure Salon, we're going to reshape the way you feel about exercise. We have six different motorized tables that do the hard work for you. Each one is designed to exercise a specific part of your body—stomach, hips, legs and upper arms.

Rather than building muscle (which conventional workouts often do), the Slender You® concept helps to tone and firm your muscles, while breaking down unwanted "cellulite." And unlike traditional exercise, a Slender You® shape-up leaves you feeling refreshed and energized, not fatigued and out of breath.

Base library: Reading and more

Take thousands of fiction and nonfiction books. Mix well with movies, filmstrips and cassette tapes of various musical styles. Stir and add 240 major magazines. Next, sprinkle with educational VCR tapes. Finally, throw in copy machines that will do a page for a dime and pour in live entertainment for the kids several times a year. Then sit back in air-conditioned comfort these summer days and enjoy!

"Dullsville" does not describe libraries of the 80s. The Camp Lejeune Central Library in Bldg. 63 on Lucy Brewer Ave. has all the above as well as other educational and entertaining features.

Thousands of nonfiction books can be checked out from the library, and hundreds of other research books can be found in the library's reference section. There is also a special fiction room, and most of the new books on the Bestseller's List are displayed in the front lobby.

But while books are the mainstay of any library, magazines and newspapers are also an important part of this library. Magazines and newspapers of yesteryear, including the New York Times from 1851 to 1987, are on microfilm.

Nineteen thousand volumes of books that date from the Revolutionary War through 1914 are on microfiche and reader-printer machines for all of the various microfilms are available.

If reading is not your bag, perhaps you would rather listen to music. The library has over 2,000 cassette tapes, that include foreign language tapes and books on tape. These tapes can be checked out for three weeks at a time with a limit of three tapes per person.

Super 8 films, filmstrips and projectors with headphones for in-library use can be found in the Reference Room along with about 450 titles to choose from. They include anything from Walt Disney cartoons to World War II documentaries.

If you are interested in going back to school, the library has videotapes on the SAT, CLEP, GED and GRE tests. These provide in-depth instruction and tips on how to do well on multiple choice tests.

A large selection of children's books and many children's programs, such as story times, puppet shows, and visits from costumed characters, are another part of what the library has to offer. Children can hear a four-minute fairy tale that changes daily by calling 451-3442.

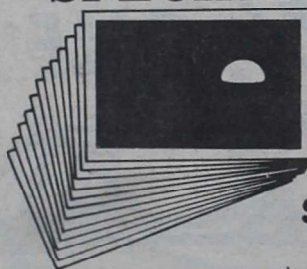

Two bookmobiles travel weekly, Monday through Friday, to housing areas and some outlying troop areas here. You can call the Main Library at 451-3178/5724 to find the location of the stop nearest you.

All active duty military, dependents, retired, and civilians who work on base are eligible to check out books. The library hours are 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
