2ID greets new commander, passes colors at ceremony

Pfc. Amanda Merfeld
Editor

CAMP CASEY – The Second Infantry, Warrior Division Change of Command ceremony was held May 4 at Indianhead Field.

Maj. Gen. George A. Higgins passed the ceremonial colors to Maj. Gen. James A. Coggin.

“The Soldiers of this great division represent the commitment of the United States of America to the ROK/US Alliance-Soldiers, serving alongside their KATUSA brothers give life and credibility to the words, ‘Katchi Kapshida,’” Coggin said.

Coggin previously served with 2ID as the Assistant Division Commander for Support.

“The other highest Call to Duty for me will be to sustain my focus on the mission. It is a Call to Duty for me to ensure Warrior Division Soldiers accomplish every assigned mission.”

Coggin just completed a two year assignment as the UNC/CFC/USFK Theater Operations Officer, UCJG-3, Republic of Korea.

“These Soldiers in formation, and all those who wear the famous 2nd Infantry Division patch, have answered the Call to Duty and we cannot- we will not- fail to meet our end of the sacred covenant with them, provide quality training and equipment, competent and confident leadership and a vision and roadmap to the future,” Coggin said.

“So, today the famed 2nd Infantry Division, the ‘Second to None’ Division, the Warrior Division has a new ‘Warrior 6,’” Coggin said.

“He is a Soldier, like you, and he is ready to get about of business of Soldiering with you to ensure that we are always trained and ready to answer the nation’s call to duty,” Coggin said.

Higgins left 2ID to be the deputy G-3 at the Department of the Army Headquarters in Washington, D.C.

“It’s been an immense honor to serve with all of you. Thank you. Thank you for your unwavering loyalty and support,” Higgins said at the ceremony.

Soldier sentenced on rape charges

2ID Staff Judge Advocate Office

CAMP CASEY – A General Court-Martial panel composed of two officers and three noncommissioned officers convicted a Soldier of rape and various other offenses under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, and sentenced him to seven years in prison and a dishonorable discharge April 19.

Specialist Robert Saxon Jr., 61st Maintenance Company, 501st Corps Support Group, was a sergeant when he committed the rape in September 2005. While visiting a friend at Camp Castle, Saxon entered the room of the rape victim and had forcible sex with a private first class who recently had returned intoxicated from a bar in the Dongducheon Entertainment District.

Two Soldiers testified at the trial that they became concerned about the Pfc.’s condition and escorted her from the bar to her barracks room on Camp Castle so that she could “sleep it off.” The victim testified that she could not recall much after being taken back to Camp Castle, but that she did remember waking up briefly to someone having sex with her.

Three other witnesses testified that the victim was too intoxicated to do much of anything on her own.

The CQ testified that the victim had to be carried to her room. Another Soldier described her as “dead drunk.”

A third Soldier testified that he was in the room shortly before the incident occurred, and found her on the floor with her head partially under the bed. The same witness testified that the victim was virtually unresponsive. He testified that that when he picked her up off of the floor, she was “dead weight.”

According to testimony from criminal investigators, Saxon initially denied having sex with the victim. After discovering that Saxon had been seen leaving the victim’s room exclaiming “I’m an E-5 and I just [expletive deleted] a Pfc.,” investigators again questioned Saxon.

During the second interview, Saxon admitted that he lied in his first statement. He then claimed that he knocked on the Pfc.’s door, received no reply, and entered the victim’s room to have sex. Saxon further alleged that the sex was consensual.

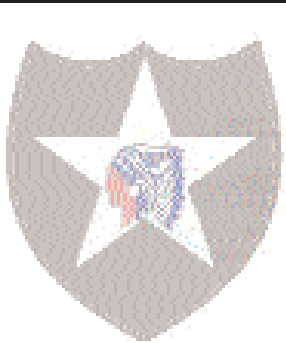

Saxon faced a maximum punishment of life in prison for the rape conviction. In addition to the confinement and discharge, the court-martial panel also sentenced Saxon to be reduced to the grade of E-1, and to forfeit all pay and allowances.

USFK creates new user-friendly website

By Gen. B. B. Bell
Commander, UNC/CFC/USFK

United States Forces Korea has a newly redesigned homepage website and every member of the USFK team should check it out. Add it to your favorites.

This website will provide you with the most up-to-date command information available.

It is my intent that over time it will become the single source entry port for web based information for all service members, civilians, contractors and family members serving in the Republic of Korea.

From policy letters to publications, to links to subordinate commands, to family and community information, this website is designed to become a one-stop shopping center for anyone desiring information on our command.

Not only will the USFK website serve as a reference tool for personnel assigned to Korea, but it will be invaluable for all in-bound Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines, civilians, contractors and family members.

The Welcome to Korea guide and Republic of Korea fact book are a few of the helpful sources of information that are available on the homepage for newcomers prior to their arrival in country.

There are many superb "drill downs" on this website. I encourage you to take the time to discover this new world of information that is just a click away. Our website is new and it is only as good as the accessibility and quality of information on it. To access the website, go to www.usfk.mil.

We want to make it better every day. I encourage you to contact our webmaster at webmaster@korea.army.mil with recommendations for changes to content, additional links or feedback on layout. Together we'll build the best joint website in the Department of Defense.

8th Army website full of useful info

By Capt. Stacy Ouellette
8th U.S. Army Future Operations

YONGSAN GARRISON – The Eighth U.S. Army has been transforming its forces in accordance with the overall U.S. Army's transformation campaign plan.

One requirement is restructuring of the 8th U.S. Army Headquarters staff sections. Knowledge Management Branch is one of the newest providing expertise to leaders across the peninsula.

"In the past, we were not properly using information technology toward being more productive and providing our commander the information he needed as the decision maker. The web server provided stale information, the fileserver was a mess, and it made finding important information difficult at best," said Barry Rosenblatt, 8th U.S. Army Knowledge Management Technology Officer.

The section's chief, Maj. Juan Ulloa along with Rosenblatt and their staff, were responsible for creating, molding and refining the information systems environment supporting 8th U.S. Army.

The Information Dissemination Management Tactical-web portal is one of the tools used.

"The primary tool we use for our mission is the IDM-T web-portal. I believe one of the most critical parts of our job is to enable the ability to organize and catalog information, which is really information management," said Maj. Juan Ulloa, 8th U.S. Army Knowledge Management Chief.

Over the last two months, the knowledge management team conducted training for knowledge managers and IDM-T users. The goal was to familiarize users with the basics of knowledge management and provide an overview of the tools as well as how they work.

"Knowledge management conducts bi-monthly working groups to put out information, provide additional training, and solicit input to make the system function better. We also have quarterly meetings to do similar things at the MSC (major subordinate command) level as well," Ulloa said.

The knowledge management branch provides the commander, staff, and major subordinate commands the capacity for effective action by organizing and disciplining a collaborative information environment to facilitate the distribution of information.

"One goal of knowledge management is to synchronize the efforts of the headquarters staff. We want to provide assistance to increase commander and staff's ability to gain situational awareness, understanding, and knowledge thereby allowing them to make well-informed decisions," Ulloa said.

"By doing this, it will facilitate the way information is disseminated and also promote innovative capabilities for the unit."

Most recently, the knowledge management branch was able to put their efforts to work during the training exercise known as Reception, Staging, Onward Movement, and Integration.

"This exercise was a culmination of efforts as beside the standup of an effective collaboration portal we had been working for two years to bring 8th Army into their own domain on the coalition network," Rosenblatt said.

"This training opportunity gave us the ability to manage our own resources in a timely manner and to configure the network and systems as one integrated system. Through the great technical efforts of our team and unit KMOs (knowledge management officers) this exercise was a resounding success."

Knowledge management representatives working within each directorate assist the KM team as well as their individual sections.

They have the same duties as the knowledge managers, but on a much smaller level.

According Lt. Col. Timothy Knickerbocker, Deputy Chief of Staff Information Management, 18th Medical Command, volunteered to be the KMO for his unit seeing it as a great opportunity.

"I saw this as a great opportunity and way to improve my KM skills and contribute to our 18th MEDCOM team. KM is a giant step forward in facilitating information dissemination and information sharing - facilitates collaboration and makes it much easier to quickly find critical information," he said.

K-16 stands ready for 50 years

By Capt. Brian Wallace
Commander, A/6-52

Seoul Air Base, K-16, is home to many organizations which provide general aviation support. Some are more visible than others, but all play an important role. In a small hangar on Seoul Air Base, one organization in particular is responsible for supporting operations across the Korean Peninsula and beyond.

Alpha Company 6th Battalion, 52nd Aviation Regiment's primary mission is to provide general aviation support to the United States Forces Korea, Eighth United States Army, United Nations Command, and United States Forces Japan.

We are the only U.S. Army general aviation support fixed wing company in Southeast Asia.

The company's history started the day the communist forces from the North invaded South Korea. Several of the 500 members of the Korea Military Assistance Group were Army Aviators who were quickly pressed into service of the Army's defense of South Korea.

Nine months later, Eighth United States Army formally activated a Flight Detachment at Taegu. This was the first such unit ever to be activated during hostilities in an active combat theater. Born and raised in the Republic of Korea, A Co. 6-52 Avn., has come of age through 50 years of service on the Korean peninsula. Several modernization and restructuring changes have occurred over the years but the support the company provides remains.

Currently the company is providing aircraft for the war on terrorism, as well as providing support for operations closer to home.

The unit supported relief operations during the aftermath of the Tsunami disaster on Sumatra in 2004 and continue to stand at the ready for any contingencies.

The company has many different kinds of aircraft including the C-12U Huron, a small passenger and cargo aircraft, the C-12J Jetliner, a slightly longer version of the C-12U, and UC-35 passenger jets. The UC-35s operate from Atsugi, Japan and primarily support United States Forces Japan.

We can help in any kind of disaster, but mostly we provide passenger support. Our C-12s can provide limited cargo lift operations.

On Seoul Airbase K-16, the company currently uses its aircraft to transport personnel on official business to other bases in Korea, Japan, Philippines and beyond.

This C-12 stands ready on an Indonesian airstrip. K-16 is home to many different organizations that help out in emergencies occurring all over the Pacific.

Soldiers receive Knowlton award for contribution to Army Intel

By Sgt. Maj. Roger Daigle
G2 Sergeant Major

Two officers, two noncommissioned officers and one contractor of the 2nd Infantry Division were awarded the Lt. Col. Thomas Knowlton award April 14.

Lt. Gen. Valcourt, 8th Army Commander, presented the Knowlton Awards to the awardees at the 2006 Combined and Joint Military Intelligence Ball at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in Seoul.

Maj. Robert Mallett, deputy G2; Capt. John Dunn, deputy ACE chief; Sgt. Maj. Roger Daigle, G2 sergeant major; Sgt. Jackum Scruggs, Intelligence Systems Repairer; and Mr. Sterl Devlin, TENCAP Field Service Representative, were recognized for their outstanding accomplishments to the Military Intelligence Corps throughout their distinguished careers.

The Knowlton Award was established by the Military Intelligence Corps Association in 1995 to recognize individuals who have contributed significantly to the promotion of Army Intelligence. Individuals nominated for the award have demonstrated the highest standards of integrity and moral character, have displayed an outstanding degree of professional competence, and have served the Military Intelligence Corps with distinction.

On Aug. 12, 1776 during the American Revolution, Lt. Col. Thomas Knowlton was ordered by General George Washington to select a group of men from Connecticut, Mass., and Rhode Island to carry out reconnaissance missions. This unit would soon become known as Knowlton's Rangers, the very first such intelligence unit in the Continental Army.

Knowlton's Rangers were America's first official spies and the first organized elite troops analogous to today's modern Special Forces. Knowlton was a brave warrior and the very first intelligence professional; he exemplified gallantry, bravery and strong determination, all the qualities associated with today's military intelligence Soldier.

Knowlton's Rangers were extremely successful in their collection activities against the British Army which was key in the Continental Army's success in winning the Revolutionary War.

KATUSA/U.S. Friendship Week kicks off in Area I

By James Cunningham
Area I Public Affairs

CAMP CASEY – A week of Korean Augmentation to the United States Army Soldiers’ celebration and competition came to a close April 27 with the awarding of more than 20 trophies and other awards.

The celebration included the finest of fine arts as well as martial arts. The competition included everything from tug-of-war to soccer.

“It’s been a wonderful week of camaraderie and sportsmanship. Today we recognize the best of the best by awarding trophies, but this week is about more than that,” said Maj. Gen. George A. Higgins, former

2nd Infantry Division commander. “It is about friendship and friendship among Soldiers and between the people of our two great nations.”

Korea’s civilians, military, and, of course, the KATUSA soldiers have been America’s friends and allies for 55 years. An estimated 250,000 KATUSAs have served with the 2nd Infantry Division since the program began in 1950.

“We are very proud of our KATUSAs, and I am so very pleased to welcome the families of our KATUSA Soldiers here today” Higgins said. “We genuinely do not know what we would do without our KATUSA soldiers. On behalf of all the commanders in the division, I congratulate all of you on your dedication and thank you for your outstanding service.”

After his remarks, Higgins introduced Lt. Col. Kim, Sung Joong, commander of the KATUSA Soldiers.

“Thank you for attending this event and enhancing our morale,” Kim said. “This event is a symbol of our alliance, and it helps the KATUSA Soldiers and the American Soldiers understand each other.

“Since its creation, there have been 250,000 KATUSAs serve in duty to their country and to preserve freedom.

“The United States Forces in Korea have been a pillar of democracy and freedom to our country and the very reason for Korea’s success today.”

“We give our deepest thanks to the United States Forces Korea Soldiers for generating freedom and democracy.”

The 2nd Infantry Division band started things off with marches by John Phillip Sousa followed by the presentation of the colors.

Their precise playing and all around good sound in an alfresco environment is a tribute to their preparation and artistry.

A very exciting display of martial arts technique followed with a spectacular show of precision.

The 9th Army Special Forces Martial Arts Team literally busted bricks with their heads and every other part of their bodies.

Not only were they precise,

“This event is a symbol of our alliance, and it helps the KATUSA Soldiers and the American Soldiers understand each other.”

*Lt. Col. Kim, Sung Joong

but they performed with the precision of a Barnum and Bailey high flying act, including jumping through flaming hoops.

So much precision was followed with a great showing of pure artistry in dance.

They performed everything from the famed dragon dances to dances depicting women working in and around streams.

Although no mention was made as to the subject of these dances, most could be understood by watching the action.

One dance featured a sonah, short double reed conical wind instrument, soloist that reminded one of Dizzy Gillespie’s best nights in Tunisia.

The relay race was the first sporting event featured April 27 and the Fires Brigade ran away with first place by taking a very long lead from the sound of the starting gun.

Third place went to the Special Troops Battalion and runner up went to the 1st Heavy Brigade Combat Team.

The one competition that took no understanding to watch was the Kimajun competition; it reminds one of games kids play in the swimming pool.

Three players line up with the middle player supporting a fourth player on his shoulders. The object is for the fourth player to pull the other teams down.

First place went to A Co., 1HBCT, runner up went to B Co., 1HBCT and third place went to 304th Signal Battalion.

The soccer championship was a game that had loads of great action and unusual plays.

First place went to the Fires Brigade, runner up was STB and third place went to 1HBCT. Overall champion this year went to the Fires Brigade with 23 points.
